Buenos Aires Faces Bombing by Rebels

Planes, Ships Flee Wrath of Hurricane

125-MPH Winds, Worst of Season, Roar on Carolinas

MIAMI (U.P.) — Ione, a "very dangerous hurricane" more severe than either devastating Connie or Diane, headed its powerful 125-mile-an-hour winds Saturday night at the storm-battered lower Atlantic seaboard.

Already military bases began evacuating planes and ships from seashore bases. However, the Miami Weather Bureau said the coast should not begin to feel any increased winds before late this afternoon or tonight.

"Tides are now averaging about one foot above normal tide on the north Florida coast," the advisory stated. "Tides should continue to increase gradually along the Carolina and Georgia coasts to two and one-half feet above normal in some areas by dark Sunday with higher tides Sunday night."

FORECASTERS said "this storm appears to have developed into a major hurricane during the past 18 to 24 hours and is now more severe than either Connie or Diane."

The special advisory said the storm was centered about 380 miles east of Melbourne, Fla., and was moving toward the northwest at about 12 miles per hour. That position was slightly more than 500 miles southeast of Charleston, S. C.

"Unless there is unexpected acceleration in the movement of hurricane Ione, winds should not begin to increase materially along any section of the coast before late Sunday afternoon or night," the weathermen said. "However, this is a very dangerous hurricane and all interests on the Carolina and Georgia coasts are again urged to remain on the alert for future advices especially all day Sunday."

Forecasters said Ione has shown marked intensification during the past 18 hours and they predicted a "further gradual increase in the area covered by the storm."

MEANWHILE, Ione's elder sister, Hilda, whirled out over open waters again in the Gulf of Mexico and was expected to reach the coast of Mexico a little north of Tampico late Sunday. Small craft along the Texas and Louisiana coast were warned to stay in port because of Hilda which also showed signs of growing in size and intensity.

Large sections of the port city of Tampico still were under water after hurricane Gladys sent the Panuco River boiling through low-lying districts. Some 3,000 inhabitants fled their homes and still were housed in public buildings and temporary buildings.

A violent tropical storm struck the Pacific Coast port of San Jose, about 50 miles south of Guatemala, Friday night, flooding nearby communities and disrupting communications.

Hurricane-force winds and torrential rains lashed the port for four hours.

SHE TOOK LAKE MEAD IN STRIDE

First woman to conquer Lake Mead was 19-year-old Yvonne Sharpe, Long Beach City College coed who swam the lake in three hours. L.B. Girl 1st Woman to Swim Lake Mead

A 19-year-old Long Beach City College coed Saturday became the first woman swimmer to conquer Lake Mead.

Yvonne Sharpe, an advertising major at City College, swam across the Colorado River and Lake Mead, a distance of 6½ miles. She was officially timed at three hours for the long grind.

Skipper J. R. Sombs and Gene Carpenter, of the Lake Mead Marina, accompanied the swimmer in a power boat and certified that she made the swim.

Miss Sharpe had originally planned to try the 13-mile round trip. However, winds were high and the water very rough. Under these adverse conditions, Miss Sharpe did not attempt the two-way swim.

Several men have turned the trick, but Miss Sharpe is the first woman to officially make the long swim.

Miss Sharpe, a 129-pound, 5-foot 2-inch-tall blonde, lives at 36 Sicilian Wk. According to her father, C. R. Fromlath, Yvonne "wants to swim the Catalina channel and has been making long swims to condition herself for the task."

Miss Sharpe has served as a pacer for many long distance swim attempts recently.

She learned to swim at the Pacific Coast Club here and was a member of the club's famed Aquabelles. Later she was coached in the finer points of distance swimming by August Pacheco, former University of Hawaii mentor.

The local amateur swimmer has participated in many rough-water ocean swims staged in Southern California.

L.A. Man Killed Near Where Wife Slain by Sniper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emory Leon Bice, 26, was killed Saturday by a hit-run automobile a few blocks from where his wife was slain by the "phantom sniper" who terrorized East Los Angeles in 1951.

Bice, father of five children, was thrown 255 feet from the impact point on Telegraph Rd. near McDonnell Ave., California highway patrolmen reported.

Later George Edwin Guinn, 27, of 1444 S. Atlantic Blvd., East Los Angeles, was booked on suspicion of felony hit-run driving. Police said blood spots and bits of cloth were found on the front bumper of his car.

MANILA (Sunday) (AP) — Earthquakes of medium intensity shook the cities of Cotabato, Dansalan and Misamis on southern Mindanao Island Saturday. No damage was reported.

Cyprio's Burn British Office, Flee Troops

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Rioters burned down the British Institute here Saturday night. They are believed to be members of the outlawed underground terrorist organization Eoka.

British troops of the South Staffordshire Regiment later dispersed mobs of demonstrators with tear gas and warning shots.

Eoka was outlawed this week in an effort to stop disorders resulting from demands for self-determination of rule over this British Eastern Mediterranean island bastion.

A recent British-Greek-Turkish conference in London failed to reach a decision on the island's future.

Britain and Turkey want Britain to keep it. The majority of people here are of Greek descent and Turks are in a minority. It is Britain's most important Middle East base since the decision to leave Suez to Egypt.

Saturday night, the rioters began attacking cars and stoned police who attempted to halt them. A military police jeep was set on fire.

GAY KHRUSHCHEV WARNS:

'Reds Won't Collapse Till Shrimps Whistle'

(Compiled from AP and UP)

MOSCOW—Soviet Communist Party Chief Nikita S. Khrushchev warned Saturday night the smiles of Russian leaders since the Geneva conference do not mean they have abandoned Communist policy.

"Those who expect this to happen might just as well wait for a shrimp to learn how to whistle," Khrushchev said.

Khrushchev made the remark at a reception in honor of the visiting East German delegation following the start of talks here Saturday. It was the longest diplomatic reception at the Kremlin in recent years.

Khrushchev declared, "It is said that the Soviet leaders smile. This is a real smile. It is not false.

"We want to live in peace, in tranquility," he added.

"But if anyone thinks that our smiles mean the abandonment of the teachings of Marx, Engels and Lenin he is deceiving himself cruelly," Khrushchev said.

A thousand guests milled around tables laden with the choicest spread of food and drinks — caviar, turkey, sherbets, vodka and champagne.

Khrushchev kept the party gay. He drank dozens of toasts, demonstrating the bottoms-up technique of downing vodka. He kissed the East German premier, Otto Grotewohl, and the East Germany Communist Party leader, Walter Ulbricht.

Premier Bulganin vainly kept trying to bring Khrushchev back to his table. But the Communist leader insisted on a round of foreign ambassadors, drinking toasts at every stop.

Then he came back to the central table, glass in hand, and made an unexpected speech declaring that Russia wanted friendship with all countries.

He said that "socialism will win the peaceful competition between socialism and capitalism."

Bulganin introduced his merry colleague as "my best friend."

Khrushchev was waving his glass and weaving before

'Ivan Come Home,' Russia Tells Exiles

MOSCOW (Sunday) (AP)—The Soviet government announced today a broad amnesty which sets free or reduces the prison terms of Soviet citizens convicted of collaborating with the Germans during World War II.

The terms of exile and deportation of many other Russian citizens were ended.

A 10-point decree of the Praesidium of the Supreme Soviet published in this morning's Moscow newspapers also cleared of guilt Soviet citizens who collaborated with the Germans during the war and then stayed abroad. It said they would be permitted to reenter society if they return home repentant and work for their country.

Peron Told to Quit or City Burns

Loyal Forces Claim Cordoba Retaken; Denied by Enemies

BUENOS AIRES (Sunday) (AP) — Rebel forces held a threat of naval bombardment over Buenos Aires and demanded that President Juan D. Peron resign by dawn today.

The threat and the demand were voiced independently in broadcasts from the rebel radio stations. Informed sources said they amounted to a loaded ultimatum.

A broadcast in the name of the Pureto Belgrano Navy Base declared Peron must get out by 6 a.m.

A station identifying itself as Radio Cordoba said the man who has run Argentina as chief executive for nine years must resign by the Sabbath's "first light." The sun comes up at 6:49.

* * * *

IN ANY CASE, the implication was that any attack on Buenos Aires would be deferred until the deadline passes.

Early this morning a rebel radio broadcast said the Argentine fleet is steaming toward Buenos Aires and would reach the mouth of the River Plate (Rio De La Plata) by noon today. Both the rebel and loyalist forces have claimed support of the fleet.

The broadcast from the port of Bahia Blanca, south of Buenos Aires, also claimed that the Argentine second army, commanded by Gen. Guillermo Largos, had yielded to the rebellion.

The heart of Buenos Aires, the Plaza De Mayo, was blacked out in the night.

* * * *

WHILE THE PROSPECTS centered on this capital city, home to three million of Argentina's 19 million people, the government claimed a major victory inland—recapture of the city of Cordoba.

Rebel radio broadcasts disputed this. Two rebel stations that proclaimed they were in Cordoba fought on in the battle of the airwaves hours after the Peron forces said they had regained the city and put insurgent survivors into disorderly flight.

The loyal army, in a midnight communique, asserted the rebels were using portable radios to air their claims that they still control Cordoba, 400 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

* * * *

A MASSIVE government force was reported moving on the Puerto Belgrano - Bahia Blanca area in the south of Buenos Aires province.

The communique said the Loyalists have not yet launched an

Top Scientist Sails for China, Raps U.S.

WILMINGTON — A top level scientist sailed for Red China from here Saturday after declaring his sympathies for the Chinese Communist government and hurling a few barbs at the U. S. State Department.

He is Dr. Hsue-Shen Tsien, 47, until recently head of the Jet Propulsion Center at Cal Tech.

Another scientist, sailing at the same time was Dr. Cheng Wu Li, 37, who has been physicist at the City of Hope hospital in Duarte for more than a year.

THEY SAILED for Hong Kong aboard the American President Line vessel President Cleveland.

Also aboard the ship were about 50 students returning to Red China.

Dr. Li refused to talk to reporters, but Dr. Tsien granted a brief interview.

However, he dodged many pertinent questions, particularly regarding his plans when he returns to his Red homeland.

He declined to state whether he would do any research in connection with armaments or if a specific post of that nature had been offered to him.

"I have to be careful," he said, speaking softly but using perfect English.

* * * *

"I'M IN SYMPATHY with the Chinese People's Republic," he told newsmen.

"I'm sure of getting a position. I want to do my best to help the Chinese people build up a nation where they can live in dignity and comfort.

"I do not intend to come back. I have no reason to come back."

Asked if he was bitter, Dr. Tsien replied:

"Are you embittered when you are bitten by a dog?. You instead blame the owner."

Questioning indicated that he was referring to the U. S. State Department.

When reminded that the U. S.

3 American Priests Freed by China Reds

HONG KONG (Sunday) (AP)—Three American Roman Catholic priests crossed freedom bridge today from detention in Red China.

The three freed prisoners were Fathers Frederick A. Gordon of Somerset, Ohio, Joseph E. Hyde of Lowell, Mass., and James G. Joyce of Clinton, Mass.

* * * *

THEIR RELEASE brought to six the number of Americans freed by the Reds in the past three days.

Fathers Gordon, Hyde and Joyce are Dominican priests who have been held under house arrests by the Chinese Communists since late 1953 or early 1954.

* * * *

THE THREE AMERICANS were accompanied behind the Bamboo Curtain by a Spanish priest, Father Louis Bolumburu. He said at the border the Communists began mass arrests of Chinese Catholics in Shanghai last Sept. 8, arresting one bishop, 23 priests and 200 or 300 laymen on charges of counter-revolutionary activity.

The release of the prisoners came as a result of negotiations at Geneva between representatives of the United States and Red China.

There was no immediate indication whether any more prisoners arrived at the border today aboard the daily train from Communist Canton.

Knowland Says He'll Back Ike, Nixon Slate

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif) said Saturday that if President Eisenhower is nominated for another term, Vice President Nixon will also be on the ticket.

"I think that most political observers believe that the President will be nominated if he wants to be," he said at a news conference televised over a Sacramento station. He added that he would support an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

L.A.C. SAYS:

Write to Yourself

Some months ago a young man came to us with what he considered to be a great problem. He was married, with two children. He had a good job with what seemed a good future. But he had been offered another job. The new job had great advantages but it would mean giving up seniority in his present job. It would mean moving his family to a new environment. He and his wife had been struggling with a decision as to what to do and asked our advice.

It was a problem this writer had experienced several times in his own life. The advice we gave the young man was based on the best advice we had ever received. It came to us many years ago when as a young man we had been called east as sales manager of a concern. We were young and enthusiastic. Often we would dash into the president's office with an idea. After this had happened several times we were met with the order "put it on paper and let's look at it."

Result was that we started writing letters to ourselves on such problems. Often we used a system advocated by Benjamin Franklin. The system was to make a balance sheet of the problem. Put down all the good aspects in one column and the bad aspects in a parallel column. Then try to make a decision from the facts you have before you. Much the same result can be had by writing yourself a letter analyzing the problem.

Unless some such system is used, decisions are too often made on an emotional basis. When you have to put your arguments in black and white you often find that what you thought was important is found to be unsound. There is a natural tendency to avoid unpleasant facts. But when you are putting it down on paper

Bomber Crashes Airport Fence Here

THREE AIR FORCE reservists escaped injury Saturday when their B-26 bomber smashed through 35 feet of fence bordering Spring St., following a power failure on takeoff at Municipal Airport. Aboard the plane, all members of the 452nd Bombardment wing of the AF Reserve, were Capt. John Wooley, 36, pilot, Los Angeles; Capt. Wesley Maxwell, 30, co-pilot, and S. Sgt. Richard N. Patton, 28, both of San Bernardino. Only damage to the plane reported was two flat tires.

This system is valuable in making any important decision—in buying a car or a home, taking a trip or making an investment. Thousands of bad decisions would be avoided daily if people took on themselves the responsibilities of making decisions. It is good to talk over your problems with people whom you trust. But when the point of decision comes it can only be made by the individual, or family involved. Unless all the facts are assembled before him the individual is very apt to make the wrong decision.

The young man referred to in the first paragraph recently came back to us. He said he had followed the advice and was very happy in having decided to stay where he is now employed. He said he had talked to his employer about what he had done and had been greatly encouraged. It was his own decision. It was based on facts, he said he had never considered until he had to prove them to himself.

When he found himself putting it on paper he felt he had to prove his reasoning. He made his own decision by writing out arguments which he said he could present to anyone without having to back down. It is a system each executive as well as each family should follow in making any important decision.—L. A. C.

Yank, Freed by Red China, Clasps Wife in His Arms

HONG KONG (U.P.)—Lawrence Robert Buol, an American civilian pilot, joyously held his wife in his arms Saturday and told of five harrowing years that ended with his release from a Red Chinese prison.

Buol, of Stockton, Calif., crossed the border with Italian Roman Catholic Bishop Alfonse Ferroni. Buol, chewing gum and wearing slacks, a sport shirt and faded tennis shoes, looked in good condition. The 63-year-old Ferroni had to be carried across the border. Dressed in a brown cape and slippers tied to his sockless feet, the emaciated bishop was delirious and was rushed to St. Theresa Hospital.

* * * *

FERRONI was the second cleric released in the past two days. The Rev. Harold W. Rigney of Chicago, rector of Catholic University in Peiping until his arrest in 1951 as a spy, was released earlier with Walter A. Rickett of Seattle, Wash., a Fulbright scholar who praised his Communist captors.

Buol's pretty wife, Sue, was waiting for him at Sheungshui Police Station when he drove up in a police van. She ran down the five steps and into his arms.

He was speechless with emotion.

"Gee, he looks just wonderful," she cried.

* * * *

THEY KISSED with but little urging from photographers.

Buol in a statement thanked "each and everyone, large and small, who contributed to our amelioration of conditions and all those responsible for my release."

Buol, a pilot for Gen. Claire Chennault's Civil Air Transport and a wartime Flying Tiger under Chennault, said he was arrested on Jan. 16th, 1950, at Mentzge in the interior. After two and a half months in house arrest he was jailed in Kunming, where the Flying Tigers had their headquarters during the war.

He said he begged his captors to tell him the charges against him, but got no reply. Two of his five years in prison were spent in solitary confinement in a 10-foot by 10-foot cell. He said he was constantly interrogated and "re-educated," although no physical force was used.

* * * *

AFTER A SESSION of intense questioning, mostly about CAT, last Sept. 10th, he was finally brought to trial on the 11th and told the charges: "Intruding into China aboard an aircraft to conduct military espionage." Buol, his voice quivering, said he had to confess, as the only way to win his release.

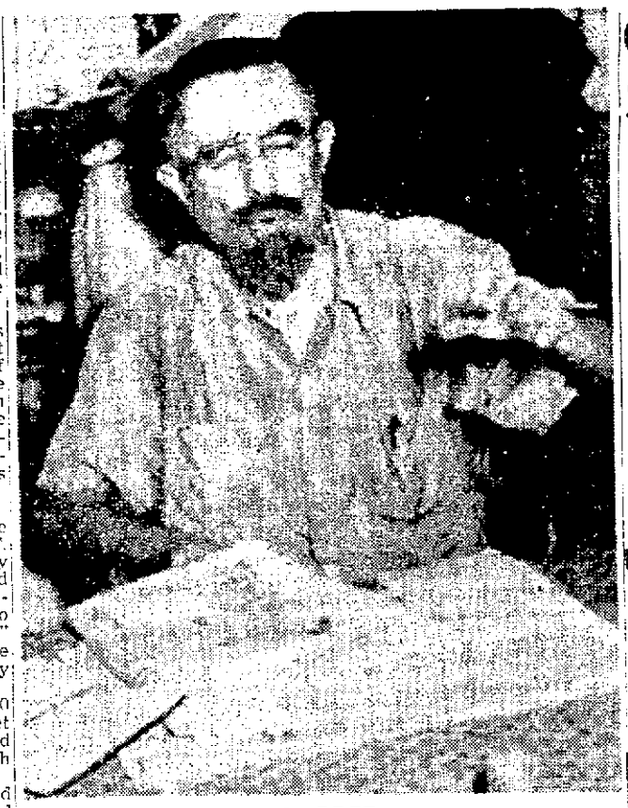

Buol said he lost about 30 pounds during captivity on a diet of rice and vegetables but gained back 10 pounds last month with an improved diet.

Told that Rickett had praised his Communist captors and wanted to return to China as a guest, Buol said he was flabbergasted.

"I cannot believe it," he said. "How can any person in his right mind want to go back there?"

In contrast, Bishop Ferroni, a Franciscan, could only ramble.

The bearded churchman now weighed only 70 pounds after losing 80 pounds in five years of captivity.

Gay Khrushchev Says Soviet Smile Is Real

the microphone when he arose to speak.

"We want friendly relations with all countries," he said. "We are honest people and we tell the truth to our friends and our enemies. We are for coexistence, but we are also for socialist construction.

"We are for coexistence because two systems exist—the capitalist and the socialist.

"We don't have to fight. Let us have peaceful competion and we will show you where the truth lies. If you believe the capitalist system can accomplish something, enter this competition. The truth is on the side of the people. Apart from that, we do not depend on your hate or love. We go our own way. Victory is ours."

Referring to the recent negotiations here between Bulganin and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, Khrushchev said:

"Bulganin has said that he received Adenauer in this room. We had hard and honest negotiations. The word we gave him will be kept. Our word, spoken or written is law."

This seemed to be a clear promise that the unwritten agreement between Adenauer and Bulganin on the return of any German war prisoners still held by the Soviets would have the same effect as a formal signed declaration.

In his reply, Grotewohl asserted that his government and not Adenauer's speaks for all Germans. He declared that his negotiations with the Soviet Union are in the name of the entire German people.

"We laugh at Adenauer," he said. "Our negotiations are not about 9,626 war criminals. We have bigger questions to discuss with the Soviet Union — political and cultural questions."

Grotewohl apparently thought it necessary to deny that he was feuding with Ulbricht.

"It is an absolute fable," he declared, "that Ulbricht and I are feuding. We have a strong and deep friendship and the wind will waft away the rumors that we are divided."

DRUNK ROLLS TIPSY PAL IN PADDY WAGON

VANCOUVER, B. C. (AP)—Police charged a man Saturday with committing a robbery in—of all places—the paddy wagon on the way to jail.

Police said they picked up two men for booking for intoxication. One had no money; the other had $60. On arrival at the jail, one had $20; the other $40. Result: a robbery charge against George David, 29, for the $20 item.

Police Quit Search for Terrorizer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—About 80 police Saturday abandoned search in the Hollywood hills for a two-gun robber—possibly a cave-dwelling hermit — who robbed, bound and terrorized four women Friday.

Officers beat underbrush and poked powerful flashlights into the caverns in wooded areas around Laurel Canyon for about 18 hours before admitting the unkempt prowler had escaped.

* * * *

HE ENTERED the home of Mrs. C. Ray Wilson at 3110 Laurel Canyon Blvd. shortly after noon Friday while she was entertaining three women friends. He ransacked their purses of about $100, tied the women with strips of sheeting, kicked and smashed furniture in a bedroom and locked them in it. They described him as 25 to 28 years old, with unruly hair.

When Mrs. Wilson's husband, a building contractor, returned home the intruder robbed him of $10.

* * * *

ONE OF THE WOMEN, Mrs. James R. Baird, whose $2,500 ring the robber had overlooked, managed to free herself.

Officers theorized that because their quarry fled toward the canyon he might be living in a thicket or cave. They believe he was the same robber who knocked down 200-pound Policeman John Slattery and beat the officer with his own gun last Aug. 18. Slattery was answering a burglary call.

Motorcycle Riders Win Pope's Praise

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius XII has upheld motorscooters as a means of making life easier, even if some persons think they are noisy.

Addressing a group of Spanish motorscooter and motorcycle riders who had driven here on a pilgrimage, the Pontiff said:

"There will be persons of delicate hearing or enemies of any risk who will criticize the unmistakable noise which announces your presence on the city streets, or the slippery agility which permits you to wind among vehicles and pedestrians with incredible speed.

"But we wish to underline the evident progress which all this signifies. It elevates the level of life among those who cannot afford more costly mechanical means.

"Use your machines, but try to do it always with prudence, discretion, and respect which alone can assure you the sympathy and affection of all. Love your machines, but remember that before them come yourselves, and your family, social and religious duties."

The Pope addressed the group several days ago but his remarks were released only Saturday in L'Osservatore Romano.

$3-Day Jurors Hard to Find; People Are Full of Excuses

By FRED SCHOTT

Jurors are hard to come by these days in Long Beach Municipal Court.

Last week Jury Secretary Robert N. Hovard needed 65 new jurors. He selects a fresh panel every four months.

In order to get 65 eligible jurors, Hovard examined more than 500 citizens. Each was interviewed and given an intelligence test.

* * * *

THE JURY secretary was obliged to excuse the big majority of the 500 because they couldn't afford to take time off from work.

Most of those who gave this excuse said their employers would not pay them while they served on a jury.

"We have no intention of depriving anyone of his source of income for four months," Hovard said.

For each day of actual service, a juror is paid $3, plus 15 cents per mile from home to court. If a juror completes 20 days of actual service before four months, he is then excused.

* * * *

HOVARD also excuses those who work on a commission basis, professional people such as doctors and teachers, and employes who are needed because they hold key jobs.

Mothers with minor children are not required to serve if they cannot make arrangements for their care. Poor health and defective hearing also are acceptable excuses.

A few persons fail the intelligence test, which consists of 25 multiple choice questions on vocabulary. Prospective jurors miss an average of 7 questions.

Sometimes a juror's excuse needs considerable clarification before Hovard accepts it:

"I have to work to live," was one citizen's cryptic explanation of why he could not serve.

* * * *

ANOTHER was: "I do not drive in the city."

Still another: "I can't hear well enough to be fair."

One citizen knowing prospective jurors names are picked at random from voters' lists, confessed to the jury secretary:

"I never registered to vote because I don't want to be called for the jury."

* * * *

A 59-YEAR OLD woman submitted by mail what Hovard considered the best excuse of the week:

"Have 12-room house. My family consists of 5 adults and 3 grandchildren. I also have 9 roomers and boarders and can't afford to hire anyone to do the work and cooking."

She added: "I don't see how I can possibly serve."

Hovard agreed.

Lost a Week, Elderly Pair Found Safe

SPIRIT LAKE, Wash. (AP)—Two elderly prospectors lost since last Sunday in the rugged Mt. St. Helens country and given up for dead were found alive Saturday by a friend.

Little information was immediately available except that Charles Aliger, 85, Tacoma, and Charles Dickens, 70, San Diego, were weak, hungry and cold when found.

An ambulance has been sent to a point four miles from where they were found and they are being brought out on stretchers.

The name of the man who found them was not immediately learned but sheriff's officials said he was an old friend who thought he would "go in and look around for himself."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell will make a nationwide radio broadcast Tuesday in response to former President Truman's Labor Day speech attacking Republican labor policies.

Mine Rescue Crew Nears 2 Kansans in Old Diggings

GEORGETOWN, Colo. (AP)—Rescue workers, overcoming bad air and seeping water, advanced slowly down an abandoned mine tunnel deep inside a mountain late Saturday seeking two Kansans lost since Thursday while prospecting for uranium.

They have little hope of finding the pair—Glenn Dew, 33, and Melvin LeBlow, 45, alive because of the lack of oxygen in the mine, which was given up as worthless two decades ago. Dew and LeBlow both live at Ulysses, Kan.

The hunt was spurred when the rescue crew found, 2,400 feet from the mine mouth, a rubber raft which the Kansans took with them to use in crossing a body of water caused by a partial cave-in of the tunnel. There was no other sign of the men at the spot.

The 10 professional mine rescue workers carried an air hose to pump fresh air in front of them. They had passed the half-way mark of the 6,000-foot tunnel about noon and maintained an advance of about 200 feet an hour.

Big Tuna Clipper Sinks in Pacific

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A 150-foot tuna fishing boat sank quickly in the Pacific Ocean one mile off nearby Coronado Saturday and all 17 crewmen were rescued without injury.

The big tuna clipper Normandie, which had just set sail from San Diego on a commercial fishing expedition to South American waters, went down in 40 feet of water. Many persons on shore saw her sink.

No reason was learned immediately for the loss. Witnesses saw no smoke or heard no explosion.

The crewmen took to three skiffs and were picked up by two Coast Guard cutters.

Machines Looted, Suspect Nabbed

DOWNEY—A Torrance house painter was arrested on suspicion of burglary Saturday night when sheriff's deputies found him inside a tire company here with the cigarette and soft drink machines broken open.

Deputies said LeRoy Watkins, 47, of 3324 W. 187th St., Torrance, had about $30 in small change taken from the machines at the Paramount Tire Co., 11229 Paramount Blvd. Passers-by reported seeing the man in the building at 9:30 p. m. and called officers.

Investigating officers said Watkins reportedly was seen buying cigarettes and a soft drink from the machines earlier in the day.

POMONA (AP)—A 12-year-old boy was in critical condition Saturday from injuries suffered when he was thrown out of a loop-o-loop plane ride at the Los Angeles County Fair.

Sheriff's deputies said the boy, Candy Mendoza of Pomona, suffered a fracture of the skull and possibly a broken back and leg in the accident.

THIRSTY BANDITS

Pair Rob Clerk, Also Take Drinks

Two thirsty and thorough bandits, one armed with a revolver, at 10:30 p.m. Saturday robbed a liquor store clerk of $63 and $30 worth of liquor.

Joe L. Barnes, 42, told police the men forced him into the rear of the store at 2826 E. Anaheim, rifled the register and carted away a case of beer and seven bottles of whisky.

They also lifted Barnes' wallet, containing 80 cents.

Navy Cuts Active Duty to 2 Years

Two years active duty with the Navy instead of four is now possible under a new plan announced Saturday by the Long Beach Naval Reserve Training Center.

Rather than enlist in the regular Navy of four years, men between 17 and 31 years may join the Naval Reserve for two years active duty.

The plan is considered especially important in view of the facts that for the first time since World War II, the Navy will begin in November to get some of its manpower by draft. This draft is necessary, according to the Navy, to replace men whose four-year Korean War enlistments are expiring.

ACTUALLY all enlistments both regular and reserve require six-year contracts. They are divided into active service, Ready Reserve time in a drilling unit of the Naval Reserve, and Standby Reserve duty in an inactive status. This applies to both regular Navy as well as the Naval Reserve. But by enlistment in the reserve men are only required to serve on active duty for two years.

All benefits such as leave, Navy schools, veterans rights, as well as regular pay, accrue to the Naval Reservist while on active duty. Men between 17 and 18½ may defer their two years active service until they graduate from high school or make the first rate in the Naval Reserve. Those 18½ to 31 must take active duty upon enlistment.

* * * *

The program is especially planned for youths 17 to 19 years old and their parents.

"New Active Duty Opportunities for the Naval Reservists" will be the principal topic, according to Chief Machinist J. H. Schumaker, Submarine Reserve Division.

Young men interested in enlisting in his division may also contact the chief at the training center at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesdays.

4 Injured in 3 Crashes; Driver Held

Four persons, including a 4-year-old girl pedestrian, were injured and one driver was arrested for felony drunk driving in three traffic accidents Saturday, police reported.

Linda B. Valdez, 1400 Newport Ave., suffered a possible broken jaw when she was hit by a car after she ran from a drive-way on Roycroft Ave. near 14th St. She was treated at Community Hospital. Driver of the car was Monte Schantz, 42, of 1431 Parks St.

In other accidents:

Juan Vidal, 25, of Los Angeles and his passenger, Alejandro Moreno, 52, also of Los Angeles suffered minor injuries when their car collided with one driven by Edwin Henderson, 52, of 4417 Blackthorne Ave. Henderson was arrested for felony drunk driving.

Franklin D. Davis, 1058 Elm Ave., suffered a possible broken nose and a cut eyelid when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel of the car and hit a parked car on American Ave. near 25th St. early Saturday. He was treated at Seaside Hospital.

Home Loans for Vets Hit 5-Year High

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Labor Department reported Saturday housing construction spurted ahead in August after a lag in July.

In another index of the home-building boom, the Veterans Administration said GI home loan guarantee applications last month hit a five-year high.

Builders started construction on an estimated 123,000 new homes in August, or 8,000 more than in July, the Labor Department said. The August figure exceeded all previous totals for the month except in the record 1950 year.

Gains were registered in August in all sections of the country.

The VA said it received 66,305 GI home loan guarantee applications during August—the highest monthly total since October, 1950.

Air Cargoes Rush Noted at City Port

Municipal Airport had one of its busiest 24-hour periods in the field of air freight up to dusk Saturday as eight cargo planes landed here.

Four of the planes brought in approximately 45,000 pounds of automotive parts for General Motors and Ford assembly plants, according to R. W. Nielsen, whose Comet Service handled the unloading.

* * * *

THREE OF THE FOUR C-46 planes were operated by Zantop Air Transport, out of Jackson, Mich. They brought in nearly 33,000 pounds of General Motors parts. The fourth, an American Air Export-Import Lines C-46, hauled the Ford parts.

The other four planes were four-engined DC-4's owned by California-Eastern Airlines, which has a contract with the Navy to fly freight cross-country on a daily schedule. The California-Eastern planes handled an estimated 25,000 pounds of cargo here, Nielsen said.

* * * *

ALL OF THE PLANES loaded and unloaded at the Wardlow Rd. extension on the west side of the airport, site of the city's proposed air freight terminal. In addition to landing fees paid by the aircraft, the city received additional revenue from more than 3,000 gallons of aviation fuel purchased by the C-46's while refueling.

Book Engineer as Child Beater; Admits 'Slaps'

LOS ANGELES (UP) — John Stanley Cameron, 39, construction engineer, Saturday was booked on suspicion of child beating after police said they found his infant daughter with multiple bruises on the face, back, eyes and legs.

The child, Melinda, 22 months, was taken to General Hospital in serious condition.

Officers said Cameron admitted "slapping the child four times" when she would not stop crying. He was arrested at his home.

Cameron's wife, Mildred, 35, told officers her husband once tried to "choke" the girl.

The department announced that manufacturing employment rose 11,000 in the San Francisco-Oakland region during the month and 8,300 in Los Angeles.

Texas Tiny, 470-Pound Hunter, Shoots 2 Deer, Outweighs 'Em

TEXAS TINY . . . Bigger Than His Prey

A lot of Californians went deer hunting Saturday, but none was more triumphant than Guy (Texas Tiny) Cherry, 5725 Oxnam Ave.

Tiny bagged two deer, as the singular is used in sporting circles. Even more singular was the fact that the expatriate Texan outweighed his prey.

* * * *

THE CHAGRINED animals felled in Santa Ana Canyon by the really big game hunter were a seven-pointer weighing 280 pounds undressed and a four-pointer weighing 165 pounds, a grand total of 445.

Tiny weighs 470 pounds, undressed. When he came to Long Beach from the Lone Star State five years ago, he weighed 640.

* * * *

HE SAID the seven-pointer was "big as any deer I ever saw in Texas." He said it must have come from Texas. He said he didn't see how it got across the desert.

Buenos Aires Faces Guns

attack on Puerto Belgrano, but that the 5th Infantry Regiment and supporting warplanes are in position for the assault. A broadcast earlier from the naval base said the infantry regiment had switched to the rebel side.

"With the exception of these focal spots of rebellion," said a government broadcast, "the most absolute tranquility reigns."

But the announcement of these provincial developments was paralleled by an order from Maj. Gen. Franklin Lucero, supreme commander of the Loyalists, blacking out the Plaza De Mayo area of downtown Buenos Aires.

The blackout order — unexplained — came after repeated warnings from rebel radio stations that the insurgents would bombard Buenos Aires from the air and from the sea in their battle to drive Juan Domingo Peron from the presidential office he has held since 1946. The rebels proclaimed a blockade of Argentina's coast.

Though the government has contended the navy is loyal, Adm. Juan F. Rojas said in a rebel declaration:

"All the fleet heads toward Buenos Aires. Triumph is near for the good of the fatherland and its institutions."

* * * *

ACROSS THE BROAD River Plate (Rio de la Plata) in Montevideo, Uruguay, an authoritative source said Saturday night that the rebel warships were preparing to bombard Buenos Aires within a few hours.

Nine small ships and a submarine of Rojas' river fleet waited all day near Montevideo, the informant said, to join forces with the more powerful and heavily gunned Atlantic fleet.

Behind the vacated piers along Buenos Aires' waterfront, artillery batteries watched and waited. And on the Plaza de Mayo, on which Government House fronts, anti-aircraft gun crews stood vigil beside weapons mounted soon after the rebellion flamed Friday. Police shooed out all civilians and clamped a tight cordon around the plaza, scene of the bloodiest bombardment of the June 16 naval-air revolt against Peron.

Many business houses and public offices in the district were already closed. The few operating quickly slammed down steel shutters and locked up. The plaza was plunged into pitch darkness.

The casualty toll of the revolt will be high but how high no one can say at this stage.

By Loyalist account, the fall of Cordoba is the third big defeat of the rebels who triggered a wave of uprisings against Peron before dawn Friday. Others were at Curuzu-Cuatia, in Entre Rios Province, 325 miles north of Buenos Aires, and at the Rio Santiago Naval Base, 30 miles southeast of the capital.

The rebel radio in Cordoba abruptly went off the air temporarily at 7:33 p.m. but 17 minutes later a broadcast from a sister station at the Puerto Belgrano Naval Base, heard in Montevideo, said "troops loyal to the government who are marching on Cordoba by the Alta Gracia road are just on the point of being exterminated."

A loyal army communique broadcast at 8:55 p.m. said the government had whipped the rebels in that provincial capital of 350,000 population.

"The rebels in Cordoba are defeated," it said.

Gen. Jose Sosa Molina, the 2nd Army's commander, was identified as the leader of the attack, staged from the east and south.

The government declared that Brig. Gen. Dalmiro Videla Balaguer, leader of the rebel forces, fled his post with members of his staff and that the city of Cordoba "has been liberated."

Loyalist Meteor jets from the Rio Cuarto airbase bombed and disabled several planes parked at an airport near Cordoba, including three British-built Avro-Lincoln bombers, the government said.

"In this way," it said, "the insurrection forces lost air support."

DR. HSUE-SHEN TSIEN

DR. CHENG WU LI

Top Scientist Sails for China, Raps U.S.

State Dept. is owned by the American people, he said that he liked the people of the U. S.

"They're like people everywhere who want peace and comfort," he said.

* * * *

DR. TSIEN said he reached his decision to return to China after long thought. He said he would have returned previously but had been "artificially delayed."

He declined to say whether or not he was being "exchanged" for American military and civilian personnel held in Red China.

"Ask your State Department," he said.

(Spokesmen for the State Department this week denied speculation that Dr. Tsien and other Chinese citizens were involved in such a swap.)

Clad in an expensive brown suit, the scientist smiled through most of the interview, but ended it abruptly and returned to a cocktail lounge on the ship where a farewell party was in progress. About a dozen persons, including three former Cal-Tech associates of Dr. Tsien, attended the farewell.

Dr. Tsien attempted to minimize his work on jet engines and rockets.

* * * *

"I AM an engineering scientist who helps engineers work out their problems," he said. "My work has covered a much broader field than just jet engines.

"You American newspapermen overemphasize armaments."

Before being placed aboard the vessel, the luggage of Dr. Tsien and Dr. Li was searched by customs officers, but neither had any research documents in his possession. Each, however, had a textbook containing information on nuclear energy of an unclassified nature.

Dr. Tsien is sailing with his wife, Yin, and their two small children, Jungjen, and Yucan.

Dr. Li is returning with his wife, Sun, and an infant child. They have a 13-year-old daughter in China.

FBI agents were at the APL terminal until the vessel sailed.

Both scientists are traveling third class, since better accommodations were not immediately available.

Dr. Tsien came to this country in 1935 as a graduate student.

* * * *

HE RECEIVED his doctor's degree at Cal Tech in 1939 and worked there during most of World War II. He was professor of aerodynamics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1946 and 1947. He returned to Cal Tech to set up the Guggenheim Jet Propulsion Center in 1948.

Immigration authorities granted him a permanent residence permit in 1947 and he visited his native China that year. He was granted a reentry permit upon his return.

He was arrested by immigration officers five years ago as he was preparing to sail for China. He had not reapplied for a reentry permit. Following a hearing at which he was accused of being a member of the Communist party during the late 1930s, immigration authorities ordered that he be deported.

This order was not implemented, however, and he remained at his Cal Tech post under a $15,000 bond.

He made his home in Altadena. He resigned his Cal Tech post three weeks ago.

* * * *

AUTHORITIES said that Dr. Tsien had eight cases of scientific papers ready for shipment to himself in China when he attempted to leave in 1950. They were returned to him after it was found that they were not of a classified nature.

He has aged parents residing in China and associates say that he has expressed concern for them.

Dr. Li came to this country seven years ago and received his doctor's degree at Cal Tech. He was there as a research fellow until 1954.

While at the City of Hope, he designed the hospital's cobalt unit for radioactive treatment of cancer. He resided in Pasadena.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans of Foreign Wars Saturday voiced "100 per cent" approval of the Air Force's controversial course in brainwashing techniques at Stead Air Base in Reno, Nev.

Timothy J. Murphy, VFW commander in chief, wired the Air Force that "we would be better prepared in the event of another war" if similar training were given to soldiers and sailors.

Man, Wife Slay Each Other in Duel With Knives

CHICAGO (AP)—Police said a married couple slew each other Saturday in a knife battle over finances.

Brainimir Spacik, 48, and his wife, Olga, 47, were found dead of stab wounds in their third-floor apartment on the northwest side.

Police Sgt. James MacNamara said Spacik, a sheet metal worker, had been stabbed six times with a butcher knife; his wife 11 times with a hunting knife.

Two-Car Crash Fatal to Three

EL CAJON, Calif. (UP)—Three El Cajon residents Saturday suffered fatal injuries in a two-car collision a half mile east of here on U. S. Highway 80.

Police identified the dead as Warren Leslie Anderson, 50; his wife, Theodore Josephine Anderson, 50, and Marlene Luppke, 17.

Authorities said the accident occurred when the Anderson car was attempting a left turn and was struck by another vehicle driven by George O. Smith Jr., 18, of El Cajon. Smith suffered serious injuries. Miss Luppke was a passenger in Smith's car.

One Child: $1

Carolina Youngsters Deeded Away

By DEL BOOTH

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP)—No. 28463 in a title to real estate book in the county court clerk's office is a deed—but not to real estate.

It is a deed to a child.

Sale price: $1.

The title number and the names have been changed, but here is the language of a deed filed in one county under an ancient law which, although infrequently used, is still valid in South Carolina.

"Whereas, my wife, Mary Drake, has recently died leaving the following children: Bill, age 5; Jo, age 4; and Mae, age 2, and

"Whereas, I have no home in which to take care of said children and nobody to assist in caring for them, and

"Whereas, Dena Gray has kindly taken said children and is tenderly nurturing and caring for them; and

"Whereas, I desire that a home be provided for my said children, and

"Whereas, Dena Gray has expressed a desire to provide a home for them during their minority, . . .

"Now, know all men . . . that I, Bill Drake, father of Bill, Jo and Mae Drake, in consideration of the promise and covenant on the part of Dena Gray—to properly care for and provide a home for my said infant children . . . during their minority, and in further consideration of the sum of one ($1) dollar to me paid by the said Dena Gray, . . . do grant, bargain, sell, release and give unto the said Dena Gray, the custody and tuition of my infant children . . . for and during the time as each of my said children remains under the age of 21 years.

"(Signed) X (Bill Drake, his mark)."

THE LAW PERMITTING such transactions dates back to 1660, when it was drafted in England. It was incorporated into South Carolina's colonial laws in 1748 and much of the original language remains in the state constitution today.

Use of the law was not uncommon until only four years ago. In 1946, for example, a welfare department survey showed there were 135 such cases.

Welfare workers believe the circumstances most often involved were those in which Bill Drake found himself: One or the other parent left with small children and not enough income to provide a home.

Childless couples sometimes used the deed method rather than formally adopt a youngster. It was simpler and cheaper, with the average cost of getting the deed written and recorded ranging from $5 to $10.

DISPARITY IN public school facilities was another reason for deeding away a child.

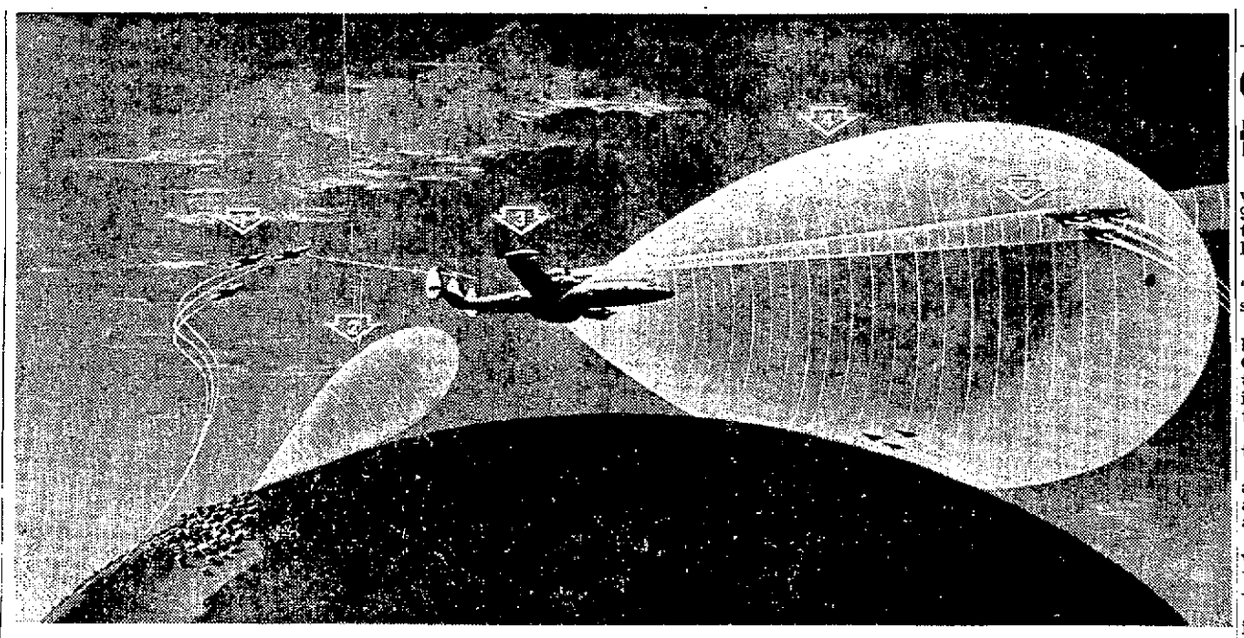

Suppose a family lived in a suburban area with inferior schools. Crowded city schools won't accept out of towners. Parents have gotten around this situation by deeding children to city residents, usually relatives. City schools then had to accept the children.

Much of this has been changed, however, by a 1951 legislative act requiring that state circuit judges review and approve all child deeds. This put the mechanics of the transaction into the same category as adoption, insofar as concerns cost, complications and time required.

Welfare officials believe the practice has been all but abandoned, even though the statute remains on the books.

The deed gives custody, rather than ownership, and expires when the child reaches 21. It carries no right of inheritance from the foster parents, nor does it curtail the child's right of inheritance from the natural parents.

The foster parents are charged with clothing, feeding and educating the child whose custody they have bought. Their treatment of the child is always subject to court review.

SKY SENTRY

Sketch portrays giant radar sentry plane (No. 3) on long-range patrol duty. Around it are other links in continental defense screen: 1. Defending fighters. 2. Ground radar. 4. Huge search area covered by radar plane. 5. Height-finder radar operates from dome on top of search plane.

Radar Planes Patrol Seas

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The Continental Air Defense Command (CONAD) has mounted its radar eyes on high-flying, long-range airplanes which patrol far out over the oceans.

This provides a piercing scrutiny which makes it even more difficult for unfriendly aircraft to approach this continent undetected.

Search radar achieved unprecedented heights and speeds after being married to the military version of the Super Constellation, known to the Navy as WV2 and to the Air Force as RC121.

* * * *

THESE GIANT SENTRIES now prowl the skies for 12 to 15 hours on end, much of the time well beyond sight of land. They are a new link in a vast radar system that includes blimps at lower levels, offshore picket ships, ground stations — now under construction—Texas tower radar platforms along the continental shelf.

Blimps operating out of the Santa Ana Air Base, picket ships from Long Beach and Super Constellations join in the screen against unfriendly aircraft. The Super Constellations in the main operate from Travis Air Force Base 40 miles northeast of Vallejo.

No trained plane spotter is needed to identify the huge radar craft, each of which has a prominent bulge amidships. Underneath is a dome housing the radar antenna which scans the skies horizontally. Jutting sharply upward is another dome containing the vertical search antenna. This, called the height finder, determines the altitude of any object picked up on the radar.

The 2½ million dollar flying radar station has a crew of 21. Inside the "passenger compartment" is a double row of radar observation booths — nine radar duty stations in all.

* * * *

SINCE RADAR WAVES travel in straight lines, the range is limited to the horizon. The high flying Super Constellation surveys a horizon much wider than the ground station, thus its radar range is vastly increased. Too, it moves constantly to new horizons, further extending its vista.

Because its missions are long, the plane offers weary crew members some of the comforts of home. It has bunks with foam rubber mattresses and a compact galley which often dispenses steak and chicken dinners and provides hot coffee at any hour. There is a recreation table for games or letter writing.

The sentry plane not only is charged with intercepting any intruding aircraft long before it reaches land; it also guides in fighter planes sent up to intercept the intruder.

From there on in the job started by the huge flying sentry becomes a matter for the interceptor's shorter range radar, automatic pilot and, if the plane remains unfriendly, rockets.

Approximately 75 water skiers will start from Magnolia Pier at 9 a. m. today in the Grand National Water Ski Race to Catalina Island and back.

Preston Foster of Channel 11's "Waterfront" will be official starter.

The non-stop race, sponsored by the Long Beach Boat and Ski Club, generally takes two or three hours to complete, according to Bill Williams, chairman of the event.

Entries will be accepted until the start of the 58-mile race.

Trophies and other prizes with a total value of $2,000 will be awarded to entrants finishing among the first 10.

In addition, the first three women finishing — regardless of their overall position in the race —will receive trophies.

The racers will cross to the island, make a turn around a boat anchored in Avalon Bay and start the return trip.

Any skier spilling my remount and continue the race. However, he will not be permitted to get into the boat or rest by holding on to the craft.

Musical Education
use the
Humphreys Plan

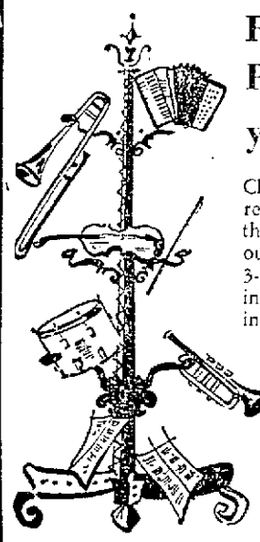

Authorities agree that musical training for the young is an important aspect of their education.

But we've learned that many youngsters start with a rush, only to lose interest later. Beginning with the wrong kind of instrument that doesn't suit their fingers, teeth, lips or personality . . . a "cheap" instrument . . . or a poor teacher . . . any one of these can lead to early failure. Buying an expensive instrument at the start is also folly.

That's why we have a Rental Plan that enables the beginner to use a truly fine instrument, yet not risk a lot of money.

That's why we have set up Humphreys School of Music: To guarantee our patrons excellent training in the instrument of their choice. We're here to help in every way. Visit us soon.

U.S. Testing New Methods to Quiz POW

STEAD AIR FORCE BASE, Nev. (UP)—Air Force experts here are testing new methods which the United States may some day use to extract information from prisoners captured in war.

This base has received a lot of publicity recently as a center for training American combat fliers to withstand enemy brainwashing techniques if captured.

But Maj. John Oliphant revealed that Stead also is a center for testing practices the U.S. military might effectively employ against enemy captives.

The precise methods which U. S. intelligence has used or plans to use to elicit military information from reluctant POWs are secret. Similarly, the research ideas tested here are highly classified.

The new U. S. interrogation ideas are believed, however, to be based on the most modern psychological concepts and to be as effective against certain kinds of personality as less subtle and more brutish practices.

POISED FOR LONG SWIM

Housewives to Try Channel Crossings

Long Beach's swimming housewives—Amy Hiland and Daisy Murchie—will attempt to conquer Catalina Channel this week.

DAISY MURCHIE
Target: Point Vicente

Only woman to succeed in the distance swim is Florence Chadwick.

Amy Hiland, who tells her own story in today's Southland Magazine, has twin goals: to be the second woman completing the swim and to be the first amateur splasher of her sex to triumph over the treacherous currents.

Mrs. Murchie, who turned professional earlier this summer to compete in the famed Atlantic City Steel Pier swim, expects to plunge into the channel at Emerald Bay Thursday night, while Mrs. Hiland is planning to leave on her second try at swimming to the mainland on Saturday night.

Daisy, who will be sponsored by the Belmont Shore Businessmen's Association, hopes to complete her swim early Friday afternoon while Amy's goal is to reach the mainland by noon on Sunday.

* * * *

THEY WILL HEAD for Point Vicente in Palos Verdes, 21 miles from Catalina.

Both are conceded excellent chances of completing their swims.

Mrs. Murchie is expected to encounter the more favorable conditions.

After receiving a report that the tides and currents will be most favorable for a crossing from Wednesday through Friday, Mrs. Hiland considered moving up her swim, but finally decided to hold to her original Saturday jump-off date because arrangements had reached an advance stage.

It will be Mrs. Murchie's first attempt.

* * * *

THE HILAND SWIM has attracted widespread attention due to Amy's dramatic struggle to complete her June swim. It was estimated that Amy swam 30 miles due to the strong currents and tides, and at the end she was losing as much ground as she gained.

She finally was pulled out of the water by her husband, Pete, in a state of near shock just 2½ miles from the mainland after being in the cold, choppy water for 19 hours. A total of 16 sharks were killed during the crossing by armed guards on accompanying boats.

Tough Law Cuts Dope Traffic 'Way Down'

WASHINGTON (UP) — Federal Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger said Saturday the four-year-old stiff-penalty law against narcotic peddling has helped to cut such traffic "way, way down" in some areas.

But the chief of the treasury's 250-man narcotics squad said he wants a federal law that is even stiffer.

He said the average sentence in narcotics convictions now is almost four years, compared to 18 months in 1949.

"They're scared," Anslinger said of the veteran narcotics pushers.

* * * *

HE STILL wants Congress to pass a law which would set a higher penalty than the current minimum of two years for a first offender.

Veteran hoodlums, who are subject to a minimum of five years imprisonment on a second offense and 10 years on a third, "are having the peddling done by the fellow who hasn't had a first conviction," he said.

He had high praise for the new Ohio law which sets the most severe penalties in the nation for narcotics offenders. It went into effect this week and includes such provisions as a minimum sentence of two years for inducing or trying to induce a person to use or administer narcotics unlawfully (the first time any state has provided such a penalty), and a minimum of 30 years for inducing a minor to use narcotics (maximum of life imprisonment).

* * * *

A NATIONAL law of such severity is too much to hope for, Anslinger said, but he did hope Congress, which has 20-odd narcotics bills before it, would act to tighten up the current federal law next year.

As for enforcement of the law as it stands now, Anslinger said peddlers in Hawaii "collapsed like an accordion" when two federal judges there started imposing maximum sentences. The same happened in Seattle, he said, and now that city is "one of the cleanest towns" in the country.

Big cities are the centers of U. S. narcotics traffic, Anslinger said — New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Detroit, Chicago, and "all the big cities in Texas and California." He said traffic is sporadic in the rest of the country.

Vatican Hits Red Report on Cardinal

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican's l'Osservatore Romano said Saturday a Hungarian communique two months ago on the "suspension" of Josef Cardinal Minidszenty's prison term may have been propaganda for foreign ears.

A front page editorial entitled "Where is Cardinal Mindszenty?" said the cardinal's fate still is not known.

Scientists Find Huge Green Spot on Mars; May Be Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—Discovery of a vast new blue-green area, believed to be living vegetation, on the surface of Mars was reported Saturday by the National Geographic Society.

The announcement said the discovery of this 200,000-square-mile area, almost the size of Texas, "has produced the greatest change in Martian geography since the planet was first mapped 125 years ago."

* * * *

THE DISCOVERY was credited to Dr. E. C. Slipher, leader of the 1954 National Geographic-Lowell Observatory expedition which photographed Mars from South Africa. Slipher alone made more than 20,000 photographs.

Saturday's announcement said discovery of the new area, near Mars' Great Thoth Canal, was totally unexpected, adding:

"Never before has such a new dark splotch appeared except as an increase of an existing dark area.

* * * *

"THE REMARKABLE transformation indicates that the division between Martian (orange-red) desert and dark areas is not necessarily fixed or permanent; one may change to the other at any time. It helps support the conclusion that Mars is not a dead world, that the darkening is due to the growth of plant life.

"Biologists suggest that this life may be akin to lichens that grow on earth's barren rocks and mountaintops."

SWELL IN SLOT MACHINES

Wooden Nickels Drive Nevada Casinos Nuts

RENO (AP)—The old adage about not taking any wooden nickels never was taken more seriously than it is today by Nevada's legal gamblers.

A commercial stunt by the neighboring city of Sparks in issuing 10,000 wooden nickels can turn into a gambler's nightmare.

Somebody has made the horrifying discovery from a gambling operator's standpoint, that is, that the wooden nickels work very nicely in the big dollar slot machines used in many of the state's casinos.

* * * *

"MY GOSH," said one operator when informed of the discovery. "Now I'll get ulcers for sure."

Some brands of machines will take the wooden nickels just like they take the silver cartwheels. Others require a little gimmick, easily discovered by the player with a chiseling soul. Still others, in the minority, won't permit a pull of the handle, jamming instead.

Only a few gambling houses report finding the phoney pieces of pine in their slots so far, but word of the wooden nickel's dual role is spreading fast.

"We may have to put on extra girls to keep an eye on the dollar machines alone," said a slot operator.

* * * *

THIS WAS backed up by an official of the Sparks Chamber of Commerce which issued the 10,000 souvenir pieces to commemorate the city's 50th anniversary.

"There's nothing we can do now," he said. "I guess they'll just have to put a doll on every dollar machine."

"That will make a bigger payroll for Reno as well as for Sparks," he added.

The nickels, manufactured by a novelty house in Texas where slot machines are illegal, are the exact dimensions of a silver dollar.

* * * *

THEY ARE being distributed by Sparks merchants and are redeemable for a nickel's worth of merchandise or for cash from the Chamber of Commerce.

The only thing which possibly may keep the 10,000 nickels—actually worth $500—from reaching their full potential value of $10,000 is this paragraph inserted into the law by the 1955 Legislature:

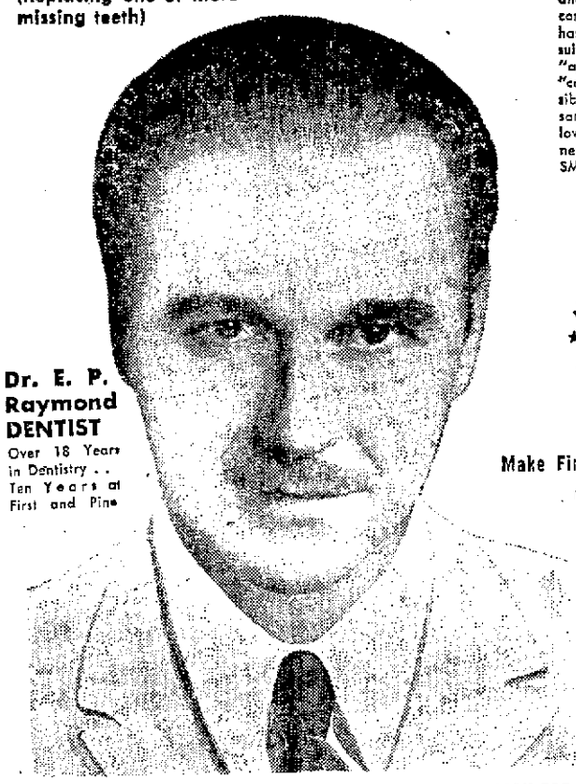

"It shall be unlawful to use anything but a coin minted by the United States government in a slot machine. Violators may be punished by up to six months in jail and-or a $500 fine."

Law or no law, Nevada gamblers are stocking up on aspirin

Czechs Furnish Arms to African Rebels, Report

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Free Europe Bulletin says Communist Czechoslovak munitions factories have been delivering weapons to the insurgent tribes in French North Africa.

It said Friday night the factories had offered 9mm. pistols at reduced prices through a "western trading company" in August. The Czechoslovaks also came up with a specially constructed "sabotage pistol, looking like a fountain pen," it said.

Heavy Schedules Keep Solons Busy

BY THE LOOKOUT

Heavy schedules of interim committee work, speechmaking and conferences with constituents are keeping Long Beach area's legislative representatives busy in this between-sessions season.

Assemblymen Herbert R. Klocksiem and W. S. Grant are in the Sacramento area this week end. On Friday, they attended meetings of the Assembly committee on manufacturing, dil and mining, of which both are members.

Klocksiem will attend the League of Cities convention in San Francisco Sept. 18-22, and will return to Sacramento next week end for a meeting of the joint Senate and Assembly Committee on Legislative process.

HOSMER 'CO-STARS'

Rep. Craig Hosmer, who has been busy for a week making speeches on the Colorado River water dispute, will "co-star" with Assemblyman Grant at a Wednesday night meeting in Lakewood to which all interested citizens are invited.

This session will be held at the Lakewood Country Club at 8 p.m. under sponsorship of the Lakewood Young Republican Club. It will be in the nature of a legislative report to the people of Lakewood. Hosmer will discuss in particular the river water fight, and Grant will review developments in the tidelands oil controversy.

State Sen. Richard Richards is likewise busy in his county-wide district. This week Richards formally asked Gov. Knight to call a special session of the Legislature, concurrent with the 1956 budget session in March, to include on the agenda the subject of air pollution.

PLANNING "Report to People" Wednesday night at Lakewood Country Club are, from left: Dick Alexander, Young Republican program chairman; Rep. Craig Hosmer and Assemblyman W. S. Grant.

Nisei Claims Hearings Begin Sept. 29

Hearings on legislation to speed settlement of claims arising out of the Army's evacuation from the West Coast of persons of Japanese ancestry during World War II will be held at the Federal Building in Los Angeles on Sept. 29 and 30, Rep. Craig Hosmer announced Saturday.

The hearings will be conducted by a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee and will start at 10:30 a.m. each day.

Specific purpose of the hearings is to receive testimony on HR-7763, which proposes to expedite and liberailze determination of the remaining 2,000 claims, approximating $50,000,000.

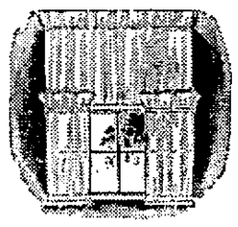

Hosmer said that any persons having an interest in the matter may arrange to testify by directing an airmail request to the subcommittee at the House Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.

He said that the legislation has been considered desirable so that loyal American-born citizens of Japanese ancestry may have their rights adjudicated without further delay.

Hosmer said the purpose of HR-7763 is not only to speed up court determination of claims, but permit the attorney general to dispose of many claims so as to avoid the necessity of protracted court procedures.

West, Russ to Tone Down U.N. Demands

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The western powers and Russia, at odds for a decade in the U. N., will take moderate but firm courses in the 10th U. N. Assembly convening Tuesday.

The aim of both blocs is to obtain as much Assembly backing for their pet projects as possible without rocking the Geneva boat and without giving major concessions. The Americans are hoping for unanimous approval of President Eisenhower's arms inspection program.

Secretary of State Dulles and Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov are slated to make the most eagerly awaited addresses in the general debate beginning Thursday. Dulles will be the lead-off man. Molotov may hold his speech until the next week. Authoritative sources said the U. S. view on major issues to come before the Assembly is as follows:

1. The United States, backed by Britain and France and a majority of the 60 U. N. members, will squash an expected Russian attempt to seat Red China.

2. Debate on disarmament will be held up until the Big Four foreign ministers meet in Geneva Oct. 27. Once that meeting is over, the Americans will drive for a resolution embodying President Eisenhower's proposal, made at Geneva in July, for the United States and Russia to exchange military blueprints and aerial and ground inspections.

3. Despite protests of the Asian-African group, the United States will oppose putting tension in Algeria on the Assembly agenda. It will abstain on the question of debating the Moroccan case.

4. The United States has not made firm its position on Cyprus but hopes some way can be found to ease the tension among the British, Greeks and Turks.

U.S. Jolted at Russia's German Aim

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — The United States was disturbed Saturday by new evidence that Russia is plotting to delay German unification or to freeze the western allies out of negotiations to achieve it.

These possibilities and other German developments were discussed today by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Undersecretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr., and other key State Department officials.

Dulles, who returned from a vacation Friday night, is considering ways to meet Soviet strategy at next month's Geneva conference of the Big Four foreign ministers. He will go to New York next week to deliver a major foreign policy address at the 60-nation meeting of the United Nations General Assembly. He is expected to emphasize America's determination to obtain German reunification at an early date.

* * * *

LATEST EVIDENCE of a hardening Soviet position against early German reunification has been channeled to Washington from Moscow, Bonn, Germany, and other capitals. The evidence has been gleaned from recent talks in Moscow between high Soviet leaders and U. S. senators and from secret accounts and on-the-spot interpretations of this week's Moscow talks between the Soviet leaders and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

The result of this and other evidence of longer standing has cast a noticeable pessimism over western hopes for major progress on German reunification at the Geneva conference. German unity and European security will be the key issues.

Informants said the gist of the Moscow position, as put to Adenauer, amounts to this:

Too much should not be expected on German unification at the Geneva conference because of the "many underwater rocks" or difficulties which are sure to be encountered. Western plans for security guarantees against future German aggression are unlikely to be accepted by Russia. The Soviet Union is content to maintain the current existence of two Germanies. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the cornerstone of western security, must be dissolved. West Germany must not be rearmed as a NATO partner. American and British troops must get out of Europe.

* * * *

PERHAPS MORE DISTURBING than these points is the Kremlin word, said to have been communicated to some visiting senators, that "the question of German unity is for the Germans themselves to decide."

This was borne out Saturday by Otto Nuschke, deputy premier of East Germany, who said that unification of Germany would have to be worked out through negotiations between East and West Germany.

This is regarded as a strong hint that Russian strategy is aimed at future direct bargaining with the Germans on German unity, thus leaving the western allies out in the cold until the "deal" is sealed.

Murphy Leaves to Settle Row on Yugoslav Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Murphy, deputy undersecretary of state, left Saturday on a European mission during which he hopes to resolve a dispute with Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito over U. S. military aid.

Tito has resisted efforts of the American Military Mission at Belgrade to keep a close check on American equipment he receives, and, according to Yugoslav sources, to indicate how he should use it.

The dispute, which reportedly involves other problems also and which has irritated American-Yugoslav relations for months—is now regarded here as near the point of settlement.

French, Moroccans in Desperate Debate

PARIS (AP)—French officials and Moroccan nationalists met Saturday in a desperate attempt to solve one issue—the composition of a regency council—which is holding up settlement of the crisis in Morocco.

The other parts of the French plan for semi-independence for the protectorate are ready to roll as soon as all sides on the three-man panel which is to take over the throne from aged and unpopular Sultan Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafa.

Resident-General Pierre Boyer de Latour du Moulin, who flew in from Rabat in answer to a government summons, joined Pierre July, minister for Tunisian and Moroccan affairs, in a lengthy session with the Nationalists. The principals said, without much conviction, that they hoped to settle the regency issue Saturday night.

Premier Edgar Faure was racing three "deadlines" in the talks with the nationalists. These were the United Nations Assembly opening Tuesday in New York, a rising tide of political opposition at home which could menace the Faure cabinet when parliament reconvenes next month, and an ominous restiveness among nationalists in Morocco which could plunge the protectorate into another blood bath at any time.

Solon Praises Russ Finances

LONDON (AP) — An American senator touring Russia was quoted by Moscow radio Saturday as expressing surprise that the Soviet Union is free of debt while the United States is 281 billion in the red.

The broadcast of a recorded interview with Sen. George W. Malone (R-Nev) said "he found out that the U.S.S.R. had no national debt and contrasted this with the United States national debt of 281 billion dollars."

"So," Malone was quoted as telling the Moscow radio interviewer, "I am trying to understand your method of operation, the approach of the people to the government, their acceptance of it and what you produce, the methods of production and how you intend to better the standard of living of your people."

The broadcast was in English and beamed at the United States.

The Soviet announcer asked Malone what had made the greatest impression on him and he was quoted as replying: "Well, I don't think some of my countrymen come with entirely open minds. We have had a lot of misinformation on Russia in the U.S.A. We've had a lot of accurate information, but I've come to find out.

"And the thing that has impressed me, I think, the most, is the tremendous industrial program and what you have done in the last 10 to 15 years."

Farm Supports Top '56 Issue—Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson indicated Saturday new farm price support legislation will be a first order of business when Congress resumes Jan. 3.

The Texas Democrat listed as other "major issues (which) can be tackled early next year: social security liberalization, federal aid for school construction, an expanded highway program and the Senate-passed Colorado River basin project.

All these programs made some progress in either House or Senate this year.

The Democratic leader gave no hint what form new farm legislation might take. The continuing decline in farm prices, a target of major criticism by Democrats and some Republicans, promises to be a spotlight political issue in next year's general election.

Sen. Kerr (D-Okla) said Saturday Secretary of Agriculture Benson is "directly responsible" for dropping farm prices and should be removed from office.

Wickard Rips Ike 'Bankrupt' Farm Policies

CAMDEN, Ind. (UP)—American farmers are going bankrupt under a Republican policy of broken "pledges" which is threatening the entire nation's economy, former Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard charged Saturday.

Wickard sounded the keynote for a meeting of a Democratic committee opening Monday in Chicago to hunt solutions to the farm problem, which the party hopes to build into a top 1956 campaign issue.

Wickard, chairman of the 15-man committee which will draft advice for the Democratic National Committee, said farm income will be the chief topic because "it's hard to have any kind of an effective program when farmers are going bankrupt."

"Agriculture today is in dire circumstances and the outlook is pretty dark," he said. "We're all active farmers on this committee and we're interested in seeing how we can get agriculture back on its feet and regain some of the losses suffered since January, 1953."

Nixon Vows Bold Move to Aid Farmers

WABASH, Ind. (UP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon Saturday promised "bold imaginative" government action to halt sagging farm income and spike Democratic charges President Eisenhower has broken his pledges to the farmers.

Nixon swung hard in defense of the administration's embattled farm policies as the troubles of the farmer boiled up into the biggest issue of the 1956 general election campaign.

Even as he spoke, farmers in Iowa called nonpartisan meetings to demand the resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson. And the Democrats scheduled a huddle in Chicago Monday to map new strategy on the issue.

Nixon, the administration's top trouble-shooter, jumped into the controversy with a major speech at the national plowing contest here.

He blamed Truman administration policies for the sag in prices, declared the administration's flexible price support program is "basically sound," and insisted Mr. Eisenhower still stands by his 1952 campaign statement that farmers are entitled to full, 100 per cent parity in the marketplace.

Nixon also said the Agriculture Department is ready "to go into action promptly" if necessary to avoid a threatened drop in pork prices "which would bring real hardship."

Esther Williams Ends Long Contract; Will Keep Busy

By BOB THOMAS

Recently the Movie Mermaid got permission from MGM to end a 14-year exclusive contract with the studio. From now on, she's a free agent — except for three more films she must make for the Culver City lot in the next five years.

"It was best for them and it was best for me," she related beside the pool of her Mandeville Canyon home. "This gives me a chance to enter the outside ventures and it allows the studio to plan ahead for my pictures.

"Fourteen years is a long time to stay in any one place. By the time you've been that long at a studio, you've worked for all the producers and you've gleaned all the ideas for pictures that the people on the lot can devise. It's time to seek a fresh outlook."

Since winning her freedom, she has been flooded with scripts. She keeps a stack of them by the bed and tackles a few every night. Her films as an independent star may surprise the fans who are used to seeing her in glossy musicals. One of the most promising scripts would feature her in an adventure yarn in which she swims not for pleasure, but for her life.

"I have some projects lined up for filming in Europe," she reported. "It will be ideal, because I'll be touring with my water show there next year. We can film the rehearsals and incorporate them in the pictures."

Esther plans to make the enterprises a family affair. All the business details are handled by her husband, Ben Gage. They intend to take their three children on the tours.

"I've got to talk to Burt Lancaster when he gets back from Europe," Esther remarked. "I understand he takes his five children with him all over the world. I want to find out how he manages it."

Masons to Hear Dr. W. H. Moore

Dr. Wallace H. Moore, dean of education at Long Beach State College, will talk on conditions in the Far East at a meeting of Long Beach Masonic Club Thursday noon in the Wilton Hotel.

He recently returned from an extensive trip to the Far East. Dr. Reynolds B. Thompson will preside, and chairman of the day will be Edwin W. Wade.

Readings Monday For Next Play

Readings are scheduled Monday at 8 p. m. at The Theatre for its next production, the Clifford Odets play, "Country Girl."

Parts to be cast call for six men ranging in age from 20 to 50 and a young lady of about 20. Pat Brown will direct and play the role of Georgi Elgin.

NOW PLAYING

Villainous Kurt Schneider, right (Bob Krug), is grabbed by Detective Jim McLeod (William Dusablon) in "Detective Story," now playing at "The Theatre," 2400 Magnolia Ave. Krug drives from Hollywood to appear in the play, which will run every night but Monday through Sept. 24.

It Happened Last Night

By Earl Wilson

AND SHE 'DIED' SO YOUNG

NEW YORK—The B.W. and I had a dinner date not long ago with Kim Novak—and Kim was very sad.

Perhaps she was sad to be with a guy pushing 50 and his wife who's pushing him — when she could have been squired by numerous millionaires who have ogled her curves in the magazines—but we wouldn't admit it . . . and we won't yet.

"I'm so young," Kim complained.

"That's terrible," I said, pushing my fourth chin up against my third chin, endeavoring to make it appear that I have only triple chins.

"It's an awful weakness!" chimed in my BW. "How do you get it?"

Kim was sitting with us at the Cafe de la Paix sidewalk spot outside the Hotel St. Moritz. Numerous gentlemen bolting by flung darts of admiration—with their eyes — at this twentyish girl with her platinumish hair. Just to keep everything right at home, they also glanced rakishly at my BW. (For that matter, several of them seemed interested in me.)

"Crying, for example," Kim mentioned.

I'd just been hearing Josh Logan proclaiming her greatness in "Picnic"—and how she happened to be in town filming "The Eddy Duchin Story," much of it at Tavern-on-the-Green in Central Park.

"I'm too young," Kim said, "to know how to cry technically."

We were now on our way to Toots Shor's. Sitting back in the gloomy darkness of the cab Kim told us how she managed a death scene in "Picnic."

"I have such an wonderful-beautiful death, I wanted to do it well," she said in the same breathy, gaspy voice.

"So somebody said I should try to think of myself as dead."

I shivered a little. Just to make sure everything was all right, I patted Kim on the arm. Kim has a very nice pair of arms.

"I did it so well," Kim continued, "that my hair straightened out . . . my throat rattled . . . and I got cold and clammee."

"Lemmee outa here!" I said, nervously. Fortunately, we were by now at Shor's, and I gave Kim another pat just to make sure, you know, that she was all right. You can't be too careful about such things.

We went in and talked to Toots about Eddy Duchin, who had hung out in this very place, often at this very table.

"That's where Jimmy Walker used to sit," I said pointing.

Kim looked blank.

"Jimmy Walker?"

The Mayor and a great night owl when Eddy Duchin was starting out," I replied. "But why should you know — you weren't even born yet."

Yes as the B.W. says being young is an awful, awful deficiency . . . and how can we get it?

"DON'T PRINT THAT": An ad agency killed a singing commercial with the line, "Ain't it a shame about Mamie," fearing it might reflect on Mamie Eisenhower. It's now "Ain't it a pity about Kitty."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A woman writes: "Men have their particular pleasures, but they never enjoy the relief of getting out of a girdle after a long, hot day."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Donna Attwood, star of "Ice Capades of '56," says, "Learning to ice skate is like having your portrait painted. It requires a lot of sittings."

Jerry Vale claims his young nephew's idea of a balanced meal is an ice cream cone in each hand . . . That's earl, brother.

Here's One Actress Who Is Choosey About Roles

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Eileen Heckart is in an enviable position in Hollywood. She can afford to be very choosey—which she is.

"I waited a long time for a motion picture role that I thought was right for me," she said. "And this happened to be it."

She referred to the part of Jane Wyman's kind, gentle companion in Warners' "Miracle in the Rain." It represents her film debut.

Miss Heckart came by her reputation in the acting business in an unusual way. She has a fine standing among television actors and actresses although she has appeared in only three important TV shows. She appeared in these only because she evaluated them as fine dramas which would help her.

"Mediocre productions don't interest me," she said. "I have the choice between them and being at home with my husband and children. So if I don't like a part a great deal, I don't take it."

Miss Heckart's attitude toward stage work is the same. She has won awards for her stage performances—as well as for her TV work—which include "Picnic" and "The Bad Seed." Warners took note of these two roles and suggested she try the film role with Miss Wyman.

Miss Heckert is matter-of-fact about her selectivity. In about the last month she has received more than a dozen scripts for Broadway productions. As might be figured, she hasn't accepted one as yet.

"If it sounds as if I'm being superior about the whole thing, that really isn't so," she said. "Look at it this way, I love to act, and I love every branch of acting, but there seems to me to be no sense in taking a role that doesn't interest or stimulate you.

"I'm much, much better off at home as a wife and mother than working at something half-heartedly."

L. B. DANCER

Jerry Caraco, young Long Beach dancer, who for eight weeks danced in the Harry Bellafonte and Spike Jones shows in the Riviera, Las Vegas, left Saturday for San Francisco where she will dance at Bimbo's. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Caraco, 1121 Ramillo Ave.; is a graduate of Poly High School and attended USC and State College.

NEW RECORDS AT CITY LIBRARY

The new lp list at the Public Library could be named "comfortable concertos," for on it such favorites as these are found:

Bach, "Concerto No. 2 in F Major" (Edwin Fischer conducting); Beethoven, "The Concerti for Pianoforte and Orchestra" (Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5), Wilhelm Kempff, pianist; Dvorak, "Concerto in B Minor for 'Cello and Orchestra" (Fournier, cello); Mozart, "Concerto in A Major for Clarinet and Orchestra" with "Concerto for Bassoon and Orchestra" and Mozart, "Concerto No. 14 in E Flat Major for Piano and Orchestra" (Friedrich Gulda, pianist).

State Motor Vehicle Chief Orders Data Confidential

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Paul Mason, state director of motor vehicles, says information in his department's files relating to the physical and mental condition of people who take out drivers licenses should be kept confidential.

"We are convinced that applicants would be reluctant to declare conditions which often determine their ability to drive safely, Mason said in a statement Friday defending an attack on his policies.

The California Records Searchers Assn. said it retained an attorney to file suit against Mason, protesting that his new policy of denying their employes direct access to the files would knock the 15 firms in the association out of business.

* * * *

THEY COMPLAINED that a staff of clerks Mason set up to bring out requested files is inadequate and objected to the fact that the clerks blocked out the health data.

Insurance companies and other businesses use the services of the search firms.

Mason said he has asked Atty. Gen. Edmund G. Brown for a legal opinion on the confidential health data policy. The department will be guided by the opinion when it is rendered, Mason said.

Caricature of Nixon Stirs Row

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Muralist Victor Arnautoff Saturday demanded that his caricature of Vice President Richard M. Nixon as "Dick McSmear" be restored to the San Francisco Art Festival's exhibition in Civic Center.

The color lithograph was removed Thursday at the order of Harold Zellerbach, president of the Art Commission.

Zellerbach was not available immediately for comment on Arnautoff's demand.

* * * *

NIXON, who was at Wabash, Ind., for a national plowing contest, told a reporter:

"I wouldn't care to comment about the lithograph."

The lithograph depicted Nixon wearing an eye mask. In his left hand was a pumpkin, apparently a reference to the "pumpkin papers" of Whitaker Chambers in the Alger Hiss perjury case in which Nixon played a part.

In the vice president's right hand was a bucket labeled "smear" and a paint brush dripping red.

* * * *

ZELLERBACH in ordering removal of the lithograph said he defended the "right of artists to uninhibited self expression," but he added that "elected public officials of whatever party should not be the subject of a caricature displayed at an art exhibit financed by all the people."

Felix Rosenthal, the festival art director, said he disagreed with Zellerbach.

"Some of the greatest works of art known to mankind have, at the time they were made, been porvoked by very bitter political struggles," Rosenthal declared.

Arnautoff, a Russian-born immigrant, now teaches at Stanford University.

Vet Trainer on Safari to Catch Vickie

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UP) — A veteran circus trainer arrived here by plane Saturday and asked for an elephant on which to ride into the woods in search of errant Vickie, the misunderstood pachyderm.

Louie Reed, head trainer for Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, arrived at the scene of Vickie's jungle retreat and asked for several hundred loaves of fresh bread for Vickie. He also wanted assurance that police will guarantee him privacy while he tries to lure Vickie from her woodland fortress.

Arrangements were immediately made to bring in one or more elephants from the King Brothers Circus now encamped at nearby Gastonia, N.C.

245,000 Rail Workers Get Wage Offer

CHICAGO (AP)—The nation's railroads Saturday offered pay raises and a health-welfare plan to about 245,000 operating employes. One union official called the offer inadequate.

The concessions, in essence, were an acceptance by the carriers of recommendations by a presidential emergency board Aug. 1 for settlement of disputes affecting firemen, enginemen, trainmen and switchmen.

A general raise of 4 cents an hour was proposed, and 4 cents per man hour worked would be paid by the railroads for the health-welfare program.

Army Throws in Towel on Ax Murders

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Army has written off as an unsolved crime the bloody ax slaying of three army officers nearly 10 years ago in a villa on the Danube in Passau, Germany, it was learned Saturday.

The Army, in reply to inquiries, said it has no jurisdiction in the Passau slaying and considers the case closed. The Justice Department said it's out of its hands also.

Maj. Everett Cofran, Washington, D. C., Capt. Adrian Wessler, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Lt. Stanley Rosewater, Omaha, Neb., were hacked to death as they slept in Cofran's quarters in a villa Jan. 7, 1946. The killer then threw gasoline about the scene and burned the villa.

Charles were once filed against former Capt. James M. Leech, Lima, O., but he was never extradited or tried. The U. S. military government in Germany which would have handled the case no longer is in existence.

There has been no official explanation of why the case was not pressed earlier after an exhaustive investigation in 1947. The Army used sodium pentothal "truth serum" and lie detectors on the suspects in an effort to solve the crime.

ONE of the wonders of America that we Yankees take for granted is popcorn.

It is hard to believe that there are millions scattered over the globe who have never seen the little, hard kernels burst into marvelous, fluffy, delectable blobs of white.

But it's true. I've seen newcomers from foreign lands watch a popcorn popping with excitement and fascination.

They've agreed with me in my firm conviction that popcorn is one of the finest things about the U. S. A.

THAT leads us to the story of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Robinson of Artesia, who left by plane the other day for a visit to Europe.

Just before they took off they received an emergency message from Mrs. Yvonne Crowe, a Long Beach woman who had preceded them to France, her native home, and who was visiting with friends at Le Mans.

"PLEASE BRING A PACKAGE OF UNPOPPED POPCORN" cried Mrs. Crowe across the ocean and the continent.

She had friends and relatives in Le Mans who had never seen popcorn pop or popped popcorn.

A PET project of this dept., and of this newspaper's editorial page, is to get the city about once a year to smooth out the ruffles that develop beside curbs where the wheels and weight of cars have depressed the asphalt.

Recently, mention of this matter was taken up in these pages, as is customary about this time of year. And sure enough, along came the street repairmen in a few days. They worked, among other places, on a stretch of Sixth St., right below my office window.

While we were congratulating ourselves on this little demonstration of the press' power for good, along came some new machines and began tearing up the street to put in a storm drain.

As I write this, a gigantic pounder is knocking holes in the street with a noise that must be resurrecting every fossil within a depth of 100 feet.

BUT if we thought we had it bad here in the midst of this tremendous noise, we just didn't know what was happening down on First St. in the other end of the business district, where a similar storm drain project is under way.

Marvin Tincher, an up and coming young barrister, called up from down there with the claim that the street pounder working there was half again as big as the one making the din in our neigborhood, and its noise was proportionately bigger.

Furthermore, said Tincher, he had been out to examine the horrific machine and had discovered that it is operated by an internal combustion engine with an exhaust pipe and NO MUFFLER.

He figured it was producing several times the volume of din that it would turn out if it was properly equipped with a muffler of the type required on oil well apparatus. He'd been to the law books and had an idea the city ought to put a damper on that bedlam.

If he's got a leg to stand on, we're for him.

TRAFFIC safety in school zones is an important topic of the season, and we're indebted today to Adolf Stone for a different angle on it and one that seems significant.

He says that many mothers and fathers who drive to school and pick up their children endanger youngsters just as much as do motorists who whiz by.

These parents park on school cross-lanes, double-park in front of the school, honk their horns and in other ways create confusion. While picking up their own youngsters, they sometimes jeopardize the lives of others.

So here's a friendly suggestion: If you drive to school to pick up your offspring, why not try always to meet the child at a pre-designated spot, being careful at all times not to permit your own actions to become a traffic hazard.

You coud save a life that way, and it could be your own child's.

Pretty Donna's Back in School

As Miss California, pretty Donna Schurr of Garden Grove two months ago in Municipal Auditorium claimed fourth place in the Miss United States contest. Today blue-eyed Donna is back in Orange Coast College, a sophomore art major dreaming at 18 of a teaching career. She drives a modest new car and has quit her job as waitress. But Donna still relies on a scholarship and part-time modeling to see her through college. Staff Photographer John H. Neagle pictures here the girl who may become California's fairest teacher.

TREED by admirers, Donna Schurr smiles at jests of Spence Rush, Stanley Weaver and Dick Williams.

AS ART EDITOR of the Log, Donna confers with Cynthia Dagit, candidate for editor of yearbook.

QUALIFIED FOR a scholarship as an art major, Donna Schurr sketches away industriously in her favorite class at the Costa Mesa college.

Burglars Loot 2 Cruisers Here

Two boats were burglarized here Friday night or Saturday morning and a total of $334 in clothing and fishing equipment taken, police reported.

Earl Humphries, 53, of Los Angeles, told officers the door on his 28-foot cabin cruiser was forced open and $222 worth of fishing equipment taken while it was tied up in front of 5719 Corso De Napoli. Arthur J. Frost, 43, of 221 Rivo Alto Canal said his 42-foot cruiser was burglarized of $112.80 worth of clothing while it was moored in front of his home.

Globe Tumbles, Cuts Fireman

Phillip E. Stanson, a 32-year-old fireman, was putting a globe over an overhead light at Fire Station 2, at 6305 Gundry Ave., Saturday afternoon when his hand slipped.

The globe fell, hitting him on the head, shoulder and hand before crashing to the floor.

Stansen, who lives at 1630 E. 63rd St., was treated at Magnolia Hospital for cuts over the right eye, on the left shoulder and hand. Fifteen stitches were required to close them.

Giant Planemakers Battle for Jet Line Supremacy

By STEVEN V. DAVID

NEW YORK (AP)—When American-built jet airliners take to the skies some four years from now, whose design will dominate?

That question, the subject of a tense, behind-the-scenes business drama right now, may be answered in the months immediately ahead.

The major contestants are two of the biggest aircraft firms in the world—Douglas Aircraft Co. of Santa Monica, and Boeing Airplane Co. of Seattle.

A prototype of Boeing's 707 Stratoliner already is flying—it made its maiden flight July 15, 1954—and the company estimates it can make its first deliveries late in 1958, with the plane going to work on the airlines in the following year.

Douglas announced in June that it will enter the jet transport field with the DC-8. Douglas plans for an initial test flight by December, 1957, with airline deliveries beginning in 1959.

* * * *

THE QUESTION IS: Which one will get orders big enough to justify setting up a line to produce the planes?

With its present lead, Boeing would appear to be in the favored position. It stresses, too, that it has built more heavy, high-speed jets than any other company. On the other hand, Douglas has built more transport planes than all other manufacturers combined and its planes are the core of many airlines' fleets.

So far, only one airline has stated its intentions. National Airlines says it will buy six Douglas DC-8s. However, the contract hasn't been signed and industry sources say it probably won't be until Douglas gets enough additional orders to go ahead.

Earlier this month, Pan American World Airways sent a team of crack engineering pilots to Seattle to study the 707 in flight. What they find out, Pan Am said, will be used in determining whose jets the airline buys.

Boeing officials say they're ready to go ahead if the firm gets a sizable order from one big airline.

THE POTENTIAL customers for the 707 and the DC-8 also include such companies as United, American, Trans World Airlines and Eastern—and foreign airlines as well. All the big domestic lines are studying the matter, uneasily aware that the company which places its orders first will get delivery first—and thereby will gain a big advantage over its competitors.

United Air Lines has said it plans to order 25 jets by the end of this year. President W. A. Patterson said United's major competitors will place orders of similar size, probably with the same manufacturer because this would bring unit costs down. Foreign orders, he added, might bring the total to 180 planes.

* * * *

A JET COSTS a lot of money: The contract drawn up with National involves a price of $4,600,000 each, plus $1,400,000 for spare parts.

Actually, you'd have to look twice to see much difference between the 707 and the DC-8. Both are beautifully sleek ships whose four jet engines are mounted in pods before and just below the wing. One difference is that the 707's wings are swept back more sharply than the DC-8's.

They will be pretty much alike in performance, too, cruising at about 550 miles an hour. Both will be powered by Pratt & Whitney engines. Both will carry from 80 to 125 passengers.

But no matter who wins, you'll get there faster. The flight from Los Angeles to New York will take only 4½ hours. And from New York to Paris will be merely a 6½-hour journey.

LB Plant Eyed in Jet Survey

Douglas Aircraft Saturday was reported to be considering several sites, including the Long Beach plant, for manufacture of the DC-8 jet transport.

However, company officials have announced no decision.

READY FOR ENCAMPMENT

He Fired 'First Gun' in War With Spain

Meet Samuel Perry, 81, credited with firing "the first shot from a gun" in the Spanish-American War. He will be a prominent figure in the national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans opening here today.

As mementoes of his service Perry has: One Navy discharge, dated 1898; three Army discharges, dated 1918, 1923 and 1924.

Perry, of 525 W. 1st St., was publicized in Ripley's "Believe It or Not" cartoon June 4, 1939 for firing "the first gun" in the Spanish conflict and for having been the only man in the Pacific fleet in 1896-98 who was not tattooed.

Ripley made a distinction between broadsides from fixed naval guns operated by crews and the individual action of Perry with a Hotchkiss, the forerunner of the machine-gun. Several engagements following the sinking of the Maine by explosion in February, 1898, had preceded Perry's one-man show.

* * * *

IN JUNE 1898, Samuel Perry was in the crow's nest of the cruiser Charleston a mile off the harbor of the Spanish island of Guam. At the command, "Commence firing!" he aimed a salvo at the fort from a brand new Hotchkiss capable of shooting 500 rounds a minute.

The transports Sidney, City of Peking and Australia were ordered to fall back out of range and the Charleston blazed away with her 16 guns. The island of Guam fell and Sam Perry had fired the first shot. They took 54 Spanish prisoners, most of them military men, left the civilian governor, and sailed to Manila.

Arriving June 30 at Cavite, the Charleston found six U.S. Navy vessels had sunk 11 Spanish ships in the harbor that day and learned that Dewey was waiting at Manila for orders to take the harbor.

Later in Hong Kong, Sam was paid off with $800 in gold, which he tied in a sack around his neck.

* * * *

FROM 1898 UNTIL 1914 Sam lived the life of an American sailor of fortune in Manila and environs. He tended bar—at the Alhambra, the Silver Dollar and the Saratoga. For a while he ran a coconut plantation 600 miles south of Manila on an island near the place where the monkeys have no tails—Zamboanga. Tiring of that he sold out for 11,500 pesos, which was about half that amount in dollars.

Signing as an oiler on the transport Sheridan, he landed in San Francisco, got a job the same day as a lineman for the Santa Fe. On Nov. 10, 1914, just past 40 years of age, he enlisted in the army as a private, and once more served in Manila and Zamboango. In 1918, his trick done, Sgt. Perry took a day off and reenlisted at Camp John Hay, 170 miles north of Manila.

In 1923 he reenlisted but within a year was discharged under an economy move that retired over-age sergeants. On Jan. 24, 1924, just crowding 50, he got his third army discharge ("conduct and performance excellent.")

City Fathers Attend S. F. Civic Meet

Twenty-six Long Beach officials are en route today by train, auto and plane for the 57th annual conference of the League of California Cities, opening Monday and continuing through Wednesday in San Francisco.

Among the delegates are five City Council members — Gerald Desmond, Mrs. Ruth H. Bach, Lewis D. Reese, John F. Baker and Virgil H. Spongberg. Thus it appeared that for the first time in several years there will be no quorum for the Council's regular meeting Tuesday.

Desmond, acting mayor while Mayor George M. Vermillion is touring Germany, will preside over a panel discussion for mayors of cities over 25,000 at the Tuesday morning session.

* * * *

OTHERS WHO HAVE MADE reservations include Sam E. Vickers, city manager; John C. Spence and John R. Nimocks, deputy city attorneys; Margaret Heartwell, city clerk; Sam M. Roberts, director of finance; H. P. Beckman, city accountant; Frank W. Brejcha, city treasurer-collector; Don Gill, administrative analyst; Dr. I. D. Litwack, city health officer; Frank Sandeman, fire chief; William H. Dovey, police chief, and Dr. Frank Harnett, assistant recreation director.

Still others are Dr. Reuben F. Pieters, member of the Recreation Commission; Mrs. C. H. Culbertson, Mrs. Thurlyne Waite and Aubrey Edwards, members of the Planning Commission; Werner Ruchti, planning director and a director of the league; Leoda Baynham, associate planner; William Feistner, a member of the Park Commission; Jess D. Gilkerson, city engineer, and Sydney Preen, superintendent of sewer maintenance.

* * * *

THE CITY COUNCIL last month authorized $125 expenses for each of the administrative officials and commission members, with "necessary expenses" for councilmen.

General sessions are scheduled for Monday and Wednesday, along with 10 parallel department meetings. Mayor Allen Thompson of Jackson, Miss., president of the American Municipal Assn., will give the principal address Monday. Gov. Goodwin J. Knight will speak at the Wednesday luncheon, the concluding event.

Erle Stanley Gardner, the author of mystery books, will discuss "The Real Cost of Crime" at a luncheon with police chiefs.

Most of the Long Beach delegates are expected to return late Wednesday. Many are accompanied by husbands or wives.

Hidden Burglar Gets $100 in Bar

Herman Lashua, 52, proprietor of a beer tavern at 1966 Orange Ave., reported to police that someone apparently hid in the building after he closed early Saturday morning and then made off with $100 in cash from a cigar box in one of the cupboards.

I, P-T Co-Sponsors Meet of Red Feather Workers

Community Chest campaign chairmen of 925 plants have been invited to Lafayette Hotel Tuesday noon for a luncheon sponsored by nine local businesses.

David E. Root, chairman for the commerce and industry unit of the campaign, announced that Hancock Oil Co., Douglas Aircraft, Buffums', J. C. Penney Co., Ford Motor Co., Mytinger & Casselberry, Independent, Press-Telegram and Procter & Gamble will be luncheon hosts.

* * * *

GUESTS WILL SEE the new slides promoting Red Feather services, hear the spot announcements for use over firm loudspeakers and view the promotion materials available for all in-plant drives. William T. J. Harris will be master of ceremonies.

Employe chairmen are expected to organize plant solicitors into teams, arrange for campaign speakers, or show films or slides explaining agency activities.

* * * *

STRESSING the importance of fair-share giving, Paul A. Nichol, campaign chairman, will point out how the new pledge cards not only carry a chart of suggested fair-share gifts for various wage levels but tell what those contributions will buy in health, welfare and youth services.

In-plant drives will begin Sept. 26 with the first report meeting scheduled for Oct. 11.

Union Masons Toil on Day Off--for Free

A group of union craftsmen Saturday spent their day off working—and without pay.

Volunteers from Brick Layers and Stone Masons Union Local No. 13, under leadership of Buz Schappel, business agent, started construction of a cement block fence at the East Long Beach branch of the Boys' Clubs of Long Beach. The clubs are Red Feather services of the Community Chest.

Fathers of club members and branch club council members served as laborers to help the masons. Food was provided by the Mothers' Club under direction of Mrs. Laverne Stoops.

The new fence is needed to protect youngsters playing in outdoor areas at the club, according to Carl Baylor, East branch club director.

Material for the fence was purchased by funds given by the East Long Beach Kiwanis Club, the East Long Beach Improvement Assn. and the Mothers' Club.

Supervisors Picked on State Association

Exceptional Children Will Gain Benefits of Classroom Monday

A different kind of school will start Monday . . . a school for youngsters who have been denied classroom companionship.

And with the opening, nearly 80 students at the Long Beach Exceptional Children's Foundation will be grateful to hundreds of craftsmen who donated their week-ends, businessmen who donated materials and clubs that gave furnishings for the school building at 4519 E. Stearns St.

A flag from Golden State Auxiliary, VFW, will be raised at opening ceremonies. Mrs. Edith Robinson is chairman of the donor group's Americanism committee.

* * * *

AN EXCEPTIONAL CHILD is one who lacks the ability to learn in the regular classroom. The new training center is designed to supply classroom benefits.

Although most of the group are in the younger age bracket, one pupil 23 years old expected to benefit from the classes.

Because of the learning block, the crowded schools have been unable to provide the necessary facilities.

Disturbed over this lack of facilities for their youngsters, a group of parents four years ago organized the Long Beach Exceptional Children's Foundation.

The group, given free use of the Sciots' Bldg. at 1005 E. Sixth St., opened a training center for exceptional children in September, 1951.

Governed by a 14-member board of directors, the foundation is headed by Mrs. Ray Stevens as president of the training center and William Hart as chairman of the board.

Members of the building committee who guided construction of the new school are Jim Orman, Vincent McDonnell, Jim Nason, Lawrence Eby, Mike Hollub and Mrs. Iris Trafton.

* * * *

AIMS OF THE FOUNDATION are to give youngsters the opportunities for an education suited to their needs and capacity, instruction by people who understand the exceptional child and a chance for the child to live without pity or ridicule.

On these basic principles, the foundation began to serve the handicapped youngsters. But permanent and expanded quarters were needed.

Land at 4519 E. Stearns St. was obtained for a token fee from the City Water Department and a grant of $25,000 toward construction of the school was made by the city.

* * * *

BUILDING CRAFTSMEN, members of the AFL unions in this area, stepped forward and donated their Saturdays and Sundays to building the school.

Members of the Culinary Alliance union donated their time to feed the workers at lunchtime. Building supply firms made materials available at or below cost. Service clubs came forward with desks and blackboards. Arts and crafts materials were supplied by the Recreation Department.

Teachers trained in the instruction of the exceptional child were employed for the school. They are Austin Shaffer, who will serve as principal and senior class teacher; Suwayne Jennings, intermediate class teacher; Sue Bremmer, kindergarten class, and Alice Mader, nursery class teacher.

* * * *

THE SCHOOL basically is like any other school in its construction. However, it has a radiant heating system in the floor to warm youngsters at play and individual fenced playgrounds for each classroom to separate age groups in their games.

"Stand up" desks assist pupils who should remain on their feet a portion of the day to strengthen their legs and backs.

Teaching the exceptional child will vary according to the capacity of the individual. While some youngsters may progress to the level of reading, others may be limited to drawing pictures.

But, with the modern classroom facilities, each youngster may enjoy the classroom pleasures of fellowship, personality growth and personal appreciation that the average child enjoys.

McCARRAN ACT TO BE SCRUTINIZED

High Court to Study Curb on Reds

WASHINGTON (UP) — Communism in America will be the major issue facing the Supreme Court when it opens its fall-winter term two weeks hence.

Before the summer recess next June, the nine justices are expected to decide the controversial cold war question of how far the government can go in outlawing the American Communist Party and still stay within constitutional bounds. The party has been ordered to register as a subversive group.

At issue is the constitutionality of the McCarran 1950 internal security act which Congress enacted over former President Truman's veto, and perhaps the existence of the Communist Party, as such, in this country.

* * * *

THE HIGH court will hear Communists' challenge — and the Department of Justice defense — within the next few months. Also awaiting it is a brief filed by more than 350 persons who asked permission to intervene, not on behalf of the Communist Party but to argue that the act represses non-communist Americans.

Under the disputed statute, the Communist Party must register as an organization taking orders from the Kremlin; membership rolls and finances must be thrown open to public scrutiny, and mail and broadcasts must be labelled as propaganda. Front groups face the same restrictions.

* * * *

DIRECTLY and indirectly, communism figures in many other important cases up for action.

One will determine the fate of the three GI's who chose to stay with their Communist captors during the Korean War and then decided to return home. The Army plans to court-martial the three for their conduct in prison camps even though they are now civilians.

A case brought by another veteran, Robert W. Toth of Pittsburgh, directly challenges the right of the military to try civilians in peacetime. If the Supreme Court should uphold Toth (not a turncoat), the three turncoats probably would be freed from military prosecution.

Another measure clamping down on the Reds is scheduled for consideration either this year or next. It is the far more severe 1954 Communist control act which outlaws the Communist Party and makes membership in it a crime if the member is aware of the party's subversive aims.

* * * *

OTHER CASES involving either communism or the national security will test:

Whether states, as well as the federal government, can enact anti-subversive laws.

Whether the government can force a witness to testify in cases involving espionage by granting immunity from prosecution.

Whether New York City has the right to discharge teachers who refused to tell congressional investigators whether they are Communists.

Dear Mr. Chan: "The day I came to your office with my mother and brother I was about to give up hope of getting rid of my asthma attacks. I spent hundreds of dollars for shots and pills but yet found no results. After reading your advertisement, I tried you for my last resort and was thrilled to find that it responded wonderfully. After the first treatment I was able to breathe normally and could sleep better for the first time in months. Now am feeling fine and hoping others will benefit from my experience with Dr. Chan's Natural Method." Signed. Mrs. Vivian Murray.

To Whom It May Concern: "Five years ago I was badly stricken with neuritis in my shoulders and extremities. My hands and knees were so badly swollen that I could hardly use them. I wasn't able to raise my arms above the shoulders. I was told by several doctors that they have done all they could for me and that I no longer will be able to work again. Finally a friend referred me to try Dr. Chan's Herbal Therapy. After the first week I felt much improved and the fourth week found me walking much easier with the pains in my shoulders disappearing; my hands returned to normal and I had use of them once more. I cannot too highly recommend Dr. Chan to anyone who is ill." Signed. E. H. Irving.

Peron Can't Keep Control, Says Expert

(Editor's note—The writer is an expert on Argentina having spent 12 years there and Knows President Juan D Peron well.)

By THOMAS R. CURRAN
Copyright, 1955, by the United Press

In the long run President Juan D. Peron of Argentina cannot win.

Even if his troops crush the present rebellion, his power will continue to decline. Somehow and some day in the near future Peron will cease to be the dictator of Argentina.

Every revolt again him—and there have been a half dozen in the last four years—chips away some of the foundation of his power. Eventually the structure will collapse.

* * * *

THE UNDERLYING CAUSE for the repeated uprisings against Peron is simple. The people are tired of being ruled by a dictator. They are tired of being spied on. They are tired of having their mail opened and their telephone lines tapped. They are tired of having friends and relatives arrested without being able to find out where or why they were jailed.

Under Peron Argentina has become a thorough police state. There is no free press. There are no civil liberties. People are arrested on whim and held without trial and the penitentiaries are packed with political prisoners. Boy students as young as 14 years are jailed.

After the Navy rebellion on June 16, Peron conceded in a public speech that he had abolished democratic liberties but said it was for the good of the people.

Peron declared a "state of internal war" four years ago after a revolt against him failed. That measure was never repealed. It permitted the president to take any step against the person or property of any Argentine citizen without being responsible o the courts. Recent announcements of a "state of siege," therefore, mean nothing.

The present Army movement was supposed to coincide with the revolt of the Navy on June 16. The time table was knocked out because bad weather delayed the Navy bombing planes.

* * * *

PERON WAS ELECTED in 1946 on a platform calling for a 20 per cent wage increase to all workers. He won and the 20 per cent increase was made effective. As a result, however, production dropped off because the workers started looking to him for raises and advancement. Those workers, among his strongest supporters, were those whom his late wife, Evita, called "descamisados," or shirtless ones.

Even their fervor has been ebbing a little in recent years.

Another factor in the widespread discontent is the corruption now rampant in Argentina. Most governmental business is done on the basis of bribes. Official permits are allocated not on merit but on the basis of the biggest pay-off.

General Dalmiro Videla Belaguer, who is leading the rebel general, Oscar R. Silva, was director general of the Military Academy when Peron came into power. Later he was ambassador to Madrid.

* * * *

THE PRESENT REBELLION, as in the case of the June 16 revolt, does not seem to be an effort of an ambitious officer trying to set himself up as a dictator to replace Peron. It seems rather to be an expression of the "fed-up" feeling with the Mussolini-type government Peron introduced ten years ago.

Another factor is the economic situation. When Peron took over, the Argentine government had fantastic reserves of blocked sterling and frozen dollars which it had received for wartime food and strategic material shipments. After the war he cashed in on a world hungry for food and vegetable oils, which Argentina possessed in abundance.

Now Argentina is faced with declining production of meat and cereals. Great Britain has abandoned government buying, forcing Argentina into bi-lateral trade deals with many countries including Russia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. All shipments from Argentina are handled by the government itself which fixes the price it pays to the ranchers and pockets the profit. That has resulted in less produce because the farmers have scant incentive to work and invest.

Peron's fight against the Catholic Church also caused a great wave of resentment.

The attack on the Catholics alienated even some of the president's strongest supporters, who resigned from the party rather than participate in the campaign.

Russ Offer to Give Back Finn Base

MOSCOW (UP)—Premier N. A. Bulganin, apparently recovered from his cold, Saturday offered to return the Soviet-held naval base at Porkkala to its Finnish owners more than 41 years ahead of time.

A foreign office spokesman said Bulganin told Finnish Premier U. K. Kekkonen Russia "finds it possible . . . to eliminate the naval base and withdraw its troops from this territory."

The Russians also offered to renew their 1948 friendship treaty with Finland, which is due to expire "soon," the spokesman said.

Easy Drive Super Road Spans Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —You soon will be able to roll through the nation's industrial heartland—the 611 miles from Philadelphia to the Ohio-Indiana line—without the bother of red lights or traffic jams.

That becomes possible at the stroke of midnight Friday when the entire Ohio Turnpike opens.

The men who turned the dream of a 241-mile superroad across northern Ohio into the nation's newest turnpike claim it is the safest in the country.

You really will be able to see where you're going as the minimum sight distance is 900 feet. There are no steep hills, because the maximum upgrade is 2 per cent and the maximum downgrade 3.2 per cent. You won't have to slow down from maximum speed limits—65 miles an hour for cars and 55 for trucks when you drive around curves, they're that gentle.

* * * *

YOU'LL BE SO FAR from traffic going the other direction that bright headlights shouldn't bother you. At no point are roadways less than 56 feet apart, and sometimes the distance is 192 feet. This center strip is depressed so it will be next to impossible for a car to bounce across it into your path.

The concrete roadway each way is 24 feet wide. Each has an outside paved shoulder 10 feet wide and an inside one 8 feet wide. Only in emergencies can you park on the shoulders.

Markers you can see at night keep you from running off the road, and the 15 traffic interchanges will be lighted brightly after dark.

The 16 service plazas are opposite each other so there is no temptation for you to make a U-turn to get gas or food—and cause an accident.

* * * *

IT TOOK MORE than six years of planning and construction and lawsuits — plus about 336 million dollars including administrative and financing costs —to lay wide ribbons of concrete over rivers and streams, across swampland and rolling hills, and to build the 611 structures that go into the pike.

The Ohio Turnpike runs past four major cities — Cleveland, Youngstown, Akron and Toledo. The Ohio Turnpike commission expects 14 million vehicles will use it the first year. Revenue for the first year is expected to hit $20,576,000 and rise to $35,403,000 by 1965.

An the commission confidently expects the turnpike will be so well received that it can pay off 326 million dollars in revenue bonds that mature in 1992 some 20 years ahead of time.

That revenue bond issue to finance the construction, by the way, was the largest ever floated in the nation. The commission made millions of dollars by reinvesting bond revenues during the time they weren't needed for construction payments and was able to build its own service plazas.

The toll for the entire 241 miles of the turnpike is $3 for cars and light panel trucks and ranges by vehicle weight up to $30 for the biggest trucks allowed, 90,000 pounds.

If you drive a car across Ohio you have save 3 hours, but if you're a truck driver you get to your destination 5 hours sooner.

Disneyland Hotel Labor Contract Discussions Over

Negotiations for a five-year contract to provide labor for the new 650-room Disneyland Hotel have been completed, Jack Arnold, secretary and business manager of the Long Beach and Orange County Culinary and Hotel Workers Union Local 681, said Saturday.

A staff of more than 200, including cooks, waiters, waitresses, busboys, maids, bartenders and other personnel will be furnished, Arnold added. The negotiations were completed by the Joint Board of Culinary and Hotel Workers and Bartenders with the Caw Corp. and the Wrather-Alvarez Hotel Corp.

Scheduled to open soon after the first of the year, the new hotel, adjacent to Disneyland, will feature swimming pools, large cocktail lounges, dining rooms and a huge auditorium.

1,000 Lobbyists Toil in Capital

WASHINGTON (UP) — Congressional files revealed Saturday that almost 1,000 individuals, firms, associations, and corporations engaged in lobbying during April to June of this year.

Those complying with congressional lobby registration laws ranged from the American Medical Association, the American Legion, and the CIO to the National Institute of Diaper Services Inc. and the Clothespin Manufacturers of America.

One Reason Why Reds Began Smiling

LONG BEACH Mayor George M. Vermillion, who is touring Germany, sent home a letter the other day which mentioned a point significant in the current relationships between East and West.

Mayor Vermillion reported that an estimated 600 to 700 refugees a day are moving into West Berlin from the Russian-controlled Eastern zone.

The East Germans cross the border to the West even though it means starting life anew in a foreign place, without property and on the charity, at least temporarily, of strangers. It means living for a time under the crowded conditions of refugee centers, and often it means the separation of members of a family for long periods or forever.

Yet they keep coming. The movement has been going on at a varying pace, but steadily, for years.

Why? The answer is that the initial hardships they have been told to expect are less forbidding than the old life under the Reds.

The Communist areas have not been good places to live. They have not been free, and they have not had anywhere near the level of prosperity prevailing in the West.

These movements are part of the whole broad picture of weakness behind the Iron Curtain. The weakness of over-extension, of an economic system that functions badly, of government by force that stirs rebellious instincts. Such things cannot be concealed even by an Iron Curtain. The weakness is of course obvious to the Reds, and they know that it is obvious to us.

When we take this into account, we can understand more clearly what President Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles mean when they say that the new spirit of "friendliness" exuded by the Soviets stems from an advantage the West has.

We talked at the Summit from a position of strength. And it was not military strength alone, though some persons think that is all the phrase means.

It means economic and moral strength as well.

200-Mile Los Angeles Yarn Was Magazine's Idea, Not Poulson's

JUST what did the mayor of Los Angeles say? Was Mayor Norris Poulson of the near-by city misquoted in those stories about Los Angeles eventually encompassing a 200-mile stretch from Santa Barbara to San Diego?

The quotations, carried on national news wires based on a story and an interview with Poulson in the U. S. News and World Report, caused hairs to bristle on civic necks throughout the area mentioned.

EPLEY

Long Beach's own officials let loose with some of the sharpest sarcasm that has emanated from our city hall in a long time. Vice Mayor Gerald Desmond said that the heat must be affecting Poulson.

The picture attributed to Poulson was obviously politically unrealistic. Major cities of Southern California are not going to give up their identity and become a part of Los Angeles.

For example, Long Beach, Los Angeles County's second city in size, has a steadily developing community spirit. It is full of ambition and aggressiveness. There's not a single indication that it will ever give all this up and become just another district of Los Angeles.

Because the statements attributed to Poulson in the news story from Washington, D. C., seemed both brash and rash, we decided to find out a little more about them. We read the magazine article and interview, and we asked the L.A. mayor's office for clarification.

Examination of the magazine material shows that Poulson did not predict a Los Angeles stretching from Santa Barbara to Mexico.

That idea was advanced by an anonymous writer who prepared an article for the U. S. News and World Report to accompany the interview with the L.A. mayor. This article said that "most analysts" believe that the "200-mile Los Angeles" will develop in the next decade.

So, to be fair to Mayor Poulson, it must be admitted that he is not the direct source of the story that aroused resentment and derision. The Associated Press, which seldom makes such mistakes, confused Poulson's interview with the magazine article in these sentences:

"A national news magazine Monday pictured fast-growing Los Angeles as a future metropolitan area stretching 200 miles from Santa Barbara to the Mexican border.

"Mayor Norris Poulson interviewed on the subject predicted the entire area would be designated as Los Angeles and would have a type of government similar to the borough system."

NOT EXACTLY IT

As we have explained, that wasn't exactly what happened.

Now, what does Poulson's office have to say about this?

Alan Williams, Poulson's chief executive assistant, said that Poulson did not speak of a 200-mile Los Angeles.

He does foresee, however, some larger unit of government embracing not all but a certain number of municipal type services, and extending over the metropolitan area of Los Angeles and Orange Counties—what is now officially dosignated as the Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan Area.

He does, not suggest when this would occur—just sometime in the future when the need is apparent. But he believes it inevitable.

By a "larger unit of govment," Poulson did not mean that the mayor of Los Angeles would be mayor of the whole metropolitan area, according to Williams. The larger government would be a new conception embracing previous subdivisions, including the Los Angeles government.

SEES EXTENSION

Poulson sees the new setup as more or less an extension if the idea exemplified by the present area-wide services—like the Metropolitan Water District, the county sanitation districts, and recreation and parks. The idea would be to unify other services in which there is now overlapping and which could be carried on more efficiently and economically under a unified setup. One exception he mentions is police departments—he thinks they should be locally controlled.

In brief, Poulson pictures a rapidly growing, filled in area which some day must integrate itself politically or be lost in a labyrinth of confusion.

This explanation puts the Mayor of Los Angeles in better light, and we're pleased to report it.

But we're not quite ready to drop the matter at that. The article, the interview, and accompanying art, indicate a failure to recognize the size and importance of Long Beach.

In the interview Poulson did not once mention Long Beach, although he had occasion to talk of other cities than Los Angeles in the county and did mention Burbank, Pasadena and Glendale. The county's second largest incorporated city likewise went unmentioned in the separate magazine article.

This oversight was carried to a map of Southern California illustrating the presentation. The map shows location of such cities as Santa Monica, Pasadena, Pomona, Santa Barbara and Oxnard, but omits Long Beach.

The magazine did not forget Long Beach altogether, however. When it needed a picture to show "sun and sea on the doorstep" it used a view of a fellow surf-fishing on the Long Beach strand, with the Villa Riviera, the Wilton and the auditorium in the background. But of course, it did not mention that the view was at Long Beach, because the magazine people evidently haven't heard of Long Beach.

That's something we ought to take care of right away.

Party Unity Can Make the Difference in 1956 and Ike Shows He Knows It

WASHINGTON — Something significant has just happened in Republican politics which has been generally overlooked. When President Eisenhower met at Denver with the 48 chairmen of the Republican State Committees throughout the country, he took a step which few occupants of the White House have ever taken fully a year before a presidential campaign begins.

LAWRENCE

The purpose of the conference was not to write slogans or to discuss whether Mr. Eisenhower will run for renomination. It was to encourage a fundamental job of organization which the Republican party has acutely needed.

What the President said about Republican philosophy got more headlines than what he said about door-to-door organization, and yet the fact that Mr. Eisenhower discoursed on it as fully as he did shows conclusively that he has learned and taken to heart the most important lesson in modern politics—intensive organization.

It is natural that there should be some passing comments about how the Eisenhower men have taken over the party and how there is no longer a Taft organization. But that's what always happens with the party in power—the man in the White House becomes the leader and preconvention factionalism tends to disappear.

Looking back as far as 1912, when Woodrow Wilson was elected, there was frequent mention after his inauguration about the ascendant influence by the preconvention supporters he had as opposed to the followers of Speaker Champ Clark, who was the unsuccessful runner-up in the bitterly fought Baltimore convention. It took only a little while for the Wilson group to become dominant in party councils and for party unity to be achieved.

The same thing happened in 1928, when the Hoover supporters quietly invaded the Republican party organizations and took over the control. There is nothing unique, therefore, in seeing the Eisenhower leaders of the party in command. But it would be a mistake to assume that this means any change either way in fundamental philosophy at the grass roots or in ideology. The party organization doesn't go in much for highbrow stuff about progressivism or conservatism or any other "ism." It is interested in control for city or county or state reasons, and the party organization works with the congressional candidates because as a rule the ticket as a whole, and not fragments of it, has to win support at the polls.

BIG WEAKNESS

The big weakness in the Republican party has been the fact that, when the "amateurs" took over in 1952 after Eisenhower was nominated, they had to learn the hard way—through defeat in the congressional elections of 1954—that it doesn't pay to keep alive party grievances or to sharpen cleavages. As a matter of fact, a big danger today to the Republicans is that, despite the outward professions of harmony, the Eisenhower spokesmen have failed to win over the small percentage of zealous persons who think the administration hasn't been vigorous enough on the anti-Communist issue. It is no answer to argue that these voters have no other place to go. In New Jersey, by staying home, they almost defeated Clifford Case, the successful Republican nominess for the Senate, and that's one of the states where they are going to need a lot of harmonizing to get the entire Republican votes to go to the polls next year. Chairman Leonard Hall of the Republican National Committee, in his talk on the "Meet the Press" television feature last Sunday, emphasized that very point, especially in offsetting the strength of the labor organizations.

For the truth is the Democrats today have the benefit of the AFL and CIO organizations combined.

The Republicans are up against a stiff battle, and they know it. The President knows it. "Popularity" with respect to a candidate is an ambiguous word in politics. The more popular or even the more able nominee doesn't always win, especially if the political climate is against him.

The President could win hands down if he ran today but, if there is anything like the economic recession under way such as the country experienced just before the 1954 congressional elections, all the Eisenhower popularity as an individual will not win for him. The practical politicians in both parties know this.

But no matter what the issues, the party organization is absolutely essential. The President's wholehearted recognition of that fact is political news of prime importance.

Chrysler Comeback Tells What Makes Detroit Tick

DETROIT—In recent months, Detroit has produced a lot of headlines.

Millions of words have been written about Walter Reuther's struggle with the motor giants for a guaranteed annual wage.

There will be more headlines when the "guaranteed annual wage" is put to the test. At this stage, no one can say for sure how this company-paid addition to unemployment insurance will work.

KNIGHT

The skeptical view is that in good times, the guaranteed annual wage is unnecessary and that in bad times it won't last very long.

But in general, the GAW agreements are being accepted philosophically on the theory that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

For business is booming in Detroit, employment is high and the great automotive concerns are engaged in fierce competition.

What makes Detroit the dynamic influence on democratic life, the hothouse for bold innovation, that it is?

Currently the answer is best found in the story of the Chrysler Corporation.

For years, Chrysler had a comfortable 20 per cent of the motor car business. Chrysler executives were facing the future full of confidence in their product and the company's competitive position.

Then began a disturbing development which caught Chrysler unprepared. The public's taste in automobiles, influenced chiefly by Chrysler's competitors, was changing.

General Motors and Ford stylists had set a new trend in motion.

The customers preferred their sleek, beautifully designed cars to Chrysler's comfortable but conservatively styled models.

In 1954, Chrysler's sales dropped almost 50 per cent from the company's former peak and earnings slacked off 75 per cent from the previous year.

Into this picture came Lester Colbert, an ebullient Texan with a Harvard law degree. "Tex" had a rich background of practical experience stemming largely from his successful management of Dodge's huge B-29 plant in Chicago during the war years.

THE COLBERT LEGEND

Colbert assembled a top team of executives, plunged into labor relations, added more than 500 regional, district and zone managers, gave the go-ahead signal to his designers and announced the Chrysler's goal was 20 per cent of the market.

An extensive advertising campaign featured the "Forward Look" in the new restyled Chrysler cars and produced an encouraging 18.1 per cent of the industry's passenger car sales.

Chrysler was on the move.

Last Monday, in company with 500 newspaper, magazine, radio and television newsmen, I attended the preview of the new 1956 cars at the firm's proving grounds.

The new Flight Sweep models are eye-catching, exciting creations with push button drives, added safety devices, improved driving visibility and even hi-fi record players for the gadget lovers.

Instead of riding along on the popularity of the successful 1955 Forward Look, Chrysler spent $175 million to tool up, equip and prepare its plants to produce the 1956 Flight Sweep cars.

TEX'S DAY

As I said before, the story of Chrysler is the answer to "what makes Detroit tick?"

It has been told in depicting the forward surge of the Ford Motor Co. under the progressive management of Henry Ford II and "Ernie" Breech. The fabulous saga of General Motors, raised from a tottering empire to a position of undisputed leadership, exudes the romance of business. The valiant fight being made by the independents in the automobile field is ample testimony that the quality of courage is not limited to the big three.

But today's salute is to "Tex" Colbert and members of the Chrysler organization for their refusal to be counted out when the going was rough.

Try Not His Patience

Be not discouraged when the way . . . Is weary where you plod . . . But keep your faith and hope in life . . . Lift up your heart to God . . . Confess the sins that weigh your soul . . . And ask Him for his aid . . . And fear not now how small may be . . . The progress you have made . . . God understands how weak you are . . . The same as everyone . . . And He will not condemn you for . . . The wrongs that you have done . . . As long as you believe in Him . . . And struggle every day . . . To make amends and try to live . . . According to His way . . . But do not put your efforts off . . . Until it is too late . . . Who knows the limit of how long . . . Almighty God will wait?

Pauley Hauls Water on Both Shoulders

WASHINGTON — Ed Pauley's entertaining of Vice President Nixon, which created such a furor on the nation's front pages recenlty, shouldn't have caused such a stir at all.

Pauley, multimillionaire oilman, friend of Harry Truman and Democratic fund-raiser, has been playing the other side of the street for some time now. He didn't advertise it, but Big Ed even made a major contribution to the Eisenhower campaign in 1952. So the lavish party for Nixon at Pauley's swank Beverly Hills home merely makes it definite that the oilman is trying to carry water (or oil) on both shoulders.

PEARSON

One backstage factor in wooing Nixon is the fact that Pauley hired young Paull Marshall to be his administrative assistant, replacing Pauley's brother who died last year. And when you consider Paull Marshall's ties with Nixon it's no wonder that Harry Truman is miffed at his old friend Ed Pauley's maneuverings.

For Paull Marshall and Nixon were once New Dealers together—young lawyers in the same OPA; for Roosevelt hired Republicans as well as Democrats. Marshall is the son of arch-Republican John Marshall of West Virginia, long-time Taft booster and Assistant General Attorney under Coolidge.

Today Paull Marshall is the No. 2 man in the Pauley empire in charge of oil, films, television, etc., for the man Truman appointed Undersecretary of the Navy despite the undying opposition of Harold Ickes, who resigned from the cabinet in protest. Ickes claimed that an oilman could not be in charge of Naval oil leases and be raised the conflict-of-interest question which recently caused the exit of Harold Talbott. In the end, Pauley was blocked by the Senate and Truman lost one of his best cabinet officers, all over a man whom Truman has now snubbed by refusing to go to the West Coast.

CIVIL WAR GHOST

On the office wall of Sen. Tom Hennings of Missouri hangs a lithograph which helped inspire the investigation of the Bill of Rights that Hennings began yesterday.

The lithograph is a copy of George C. Bingham's famous Civil War protest against the imposition of loyalty tests at Kansas City, Mo., by Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing of the Union Army on Aug. 25, 1863. It shows the people of Kansas City rising up against Gen. Ewing's suppression of their civil liberties.

"The artist who painted it," explains Hennings, "dedicated it to the friends of civil liberties. And the general who issued the order later had it come back to haunt him when he ran for Congress from Ohio. It almost defeated him."

Forestry Camps

TO THE EDITOR:

We read much in the papers of juvenile delinquency and what is to be done about it, but now one program to combat it which has, I understand, been operating successfully in Los Angeles County for over 25 years is being labeled "cruel and inhuman" since five boys lost their lives fighting the La Habra fire a few weeks ago.

The irony of it is that one of those boys was in the County Forestry Camp because he had participated in the setting of a fire in San Pedro. It seems to me that the good being done in giving boys who have made a mistake, the opportunity of a few months of discipline and useful work in order to make men out of them instead of hoodlums, far outweighs the tragic deaths of these five boys.

Was their death so much more tragic than the deaths of those killed in traffic accidents or in gang fights? At least their parents can be proud and not ashamed of what they were doing when they were killed.

In all the letters decrying the county's use of the boys as fire fighters not one word of praise for his heroism, or sympathy for his family, has been given to the county fire captain who thought enough of those boys and the others who were injured to risk and lose his life in trying to save them.

Fifth Amendment

TO THE EDITOR:

Why are some people still confused about the "Fifth Amendment" issue? There is nothing wrong with the Fifth Amendment. Since it was probably passed for the purpose of being used nothing is wrong with using it.

Those who sympathize with people who are criticized for using the Fifth Amendment when they are asked, "Are you now or were you ever a member of the Communist Party or any other subversive group," are those who do not explain what the only possible true answer could be when the person questioned replies that if he answers he might incriminate himself.

If the honest answer is, "No," then how could a person be incriminated, or convicted of perjury or any other crime if he answers, "No"?

How can the true answer be other than "yes" if a person uses the Fifth Amendment to protect himself when asked that question? Protect from what?

For the good of our country the investigating committees want to know the true answer, and for the good of our country everyone should be glad to give the true answer.

Brief Attire

TO THE EDITOR:

Some old timers of the dark ages say a good deal against the brief attire of young folks today, yet they smoke and drink and in doing so strain on a gnat and swallow a camel.

My parents used to wear underwear the year 'round, and I did the same, but now, except for shorts I wear only one thickness of clothes in summer and, when in my room, go barefooted. People wear less than they used to in summer and are better off for it.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Ike's Close Associates in Army Certain He Will Run

WASHINGTON — The guessing game over President Eisenhower's intentions for '56 serves at least to fill in a dead spot in the news. But for some of the President's closest associates during the 40 years of his military career there has never been any doubt of his intentions since a certain meeting of minds in mid-May of this year.

GRUENTHER

At that time Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Supreme Commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces, was in Washington on a liaison mission. He had a long private talk at the White House with his old friend and comrade in arms, the President.

According to close associates of the two men, the President asked Gruenther to remain at his post at SHAPE, the NATO headquarters outside Paris, for another two years. Gruenther, who succeeded Ike as Supreme Commander when the latter flew from Paris to become the Republican candidate for President in June of 1952, might well have expected a reward for his three years in a most-difficult post.

He might, for example, have expected to be named Chief of Staff of the Army. The NATO post is outside the traditional chain of command. While it looms large on the international horizon, it is not the kind of capstone to a successful military career that service men dream of. Moreover, NATO has increasingly been beset with troubles of every kind and description which call for the patience and the skill of a soldier-diplomat.

This was why, the President argued, it was imperative that Gruenther remain at NATO. Not only had he carried on successfully despite the political conflicts with NATO, but he had served for two years as Ike's Chief of Staff at SHAPE beginning in 1951 when President Truman had ordered Gen. Eisenhower to take the Supreme Commander's job. No one else, so the presidential argument went, was qualified to replace Gruenther.

But having put his old and loyal friend on the spot, the President went on to make a promise that put the situation in a much better light for Gruenther. He promised, in effect, that after Gruenther had served two more years at SHAPE he would be brought back to Washington to become Chief of Staff of the Army and perhaps also Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

That would be in August of 1957 and, obviously, if Eisenhower were not President he could not fulfill such a pledge. So ever since this word got around among military associates of the two, they have taken it for granted that the President would seek a second term. For professional military men rank and promotion are the breath of life. This was the conditioning the President had during the 40 years he wore the uniform. Such an assurance would not be given to an old friend lightly.

Basic Rights Under Threat, Probers Told

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citizens from several walks of life told a special Senate committee Saturday the traditional rights and liberties of Americans are being threatened on many fronts.

These threats, spokesmen for 11 groups maintained, range from "a constitutional crisis" involving the status of the Negro to an assertedly-too-frequent disregard by public officials of the people's right to know what their government is doing.

The occasion was a Constitution Day hearing, held in the capitol's old Supreme Court chamber, of the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights. It was the start of an inquiry to determine whether basic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution are being endangered.

Each of the witnesses presented, at the invitation of Chairman Hennings (D-Mo.), a "petition for the redress of grievances." To spotlight the importance of the individual citizen, the witnesses testified from the high bench normally occupied by senators while the lawmakers took seats in the spectator section.

• • • •

ROY WILKINS, executive secretary of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), testified the nation is undergoing "a constitutional crisis" and that "practically throughout the country Negro citizens are denied in varying degrees the full citizenship rights envisioned by the Constitution."

J. R. Wiggins, chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE), said the public's right to know about government, considered "fundamental" and "elementary" in 1789, now is "disregarded all too frequently" by officials. Wiggins is executive editor of the Washington Post and Times Herald.

Other testimony was given on behalf of these groups:

VETERANS—Donald R. Wilson, past national commander of the American Legion, said it is vital that the nation be safeguarded against those who would "destroy the government and enslave the people while proclaiming that the Constitution prohibits their being unmasked."

CHURCHMEN. — Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, president of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., said no government body may set itself up as a judge of men's beliefs. Blake said some methods of the House Committee on Un-American Activities are "of grave concern to many of the churches."

LAWYERS—John D. Randall, chairman of the House of Delegates of the American Bar Assn., cautioned against attempting to examine constitutional rights on the basis of "catch phrases" or slogans. He said a mistaken belief may arise that some branches of the government have failed in their duty.

FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS—Luke E. Hart, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, urged the subcommittee not to pay "undue attention" to those who cry out that constitutional rights are being eroded "whenever a perjurer or a traitor is punished for his crime." Hart's statement was presented by Joseph F. Lamb, the Knights' Supreme Secretary.

FARMERS AND BUSINESSMEN—John C. Lynn, legislative director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and A. Boyd Campbell, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, said collective bargaining agreements forcing workers to join unions violate the first amendment's freedom of association guarantee.

Eisenhower Asks Health Aid to Youth

DENVER (UP)—President Eisenhower said Saturday that "we can and should do more than we are now doing to help our young people become physically fit and therefore better qualified, in all respects, to face the requirements of modern life."

The President's statement, made public by the summer White House, was addressed to the 139 leaders in a dozen fields of endeavor who have been invited to the chief executive's two-day conference on physical fitness of American youth here Sept. 27-28. It will be printed in the program for the conference, at which Vice President Richard M. Nixon will preside.

"I very much appreciate your interest," the President said in his greeting. "Your conference deliberations will help guide the efforts of all of us who are interested in improving the total fitness of all our children and youth."

Yankees Roar Into Game Lead

Rizzuto Beaned as Byrne Tops Bosox

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Yankees boosted their margin over the Cleveland Indians to a full game Saturday in the tense American League pennant race by defeating Boston 4-1 on Tommy Byrne's superb four-hit pitching job.

The Detroit Tigers, meanwhile, beat the Indians 3-1 for the second straight time and this left the standings:

	W	L	Pct.	Left
Cleveland ...	90	58	.608	6

A third big name, however, was added to the growing Yankee injury list. Phil Rizzuto, veteran shortstop, was hit in the back of his plastic head helmet by one of George Susce's pitches in the fourth. The helmet split open and Rizzuto was knocked unconscious, but Dr. Sidney Gaynor, the club physician, said the injury did not appear too serious and Rizzuto may even be able to play today when he is being showered with presents by fans.

★ ★ ★ ★

MICKEY MANTLE and Bill Skowron, two other Yankee stalwarts, are on the bench with injuries.

Mantle pulled the hamstring muscle in his right thigh Friday night beating out a bunt and Dr. Gaynor said he would be out for five days and possibly for all the rest of the season. Skowron sustained a broken left big toe in batting practice, but should be able to pinch hit in a day or so.

The game ended on a note of high drama for the crowd of 40,942. Going into the ninth three runs behind, the Red Sox opened up on Byrne. Norm Zauchin singled to left, and Grady Hatton bounced a single off Joe Collins' glove. With two out, Billy Consolo walked, filling the bases. The veteran Eddie Joost then came in to pinch hit for Billy Goodman. He protested loudly at Byrne's two successive strikes, and then flied to Irv Noren in center to end matters.

The Yankees jumped into a two-run lead in the first inning when Rizzuto and Cerv singled, and then worked a double steal. Gil McDougald's sacrifice fly brought Rizzuto home and Hank Bauer's single scored Cerv.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE RED SOX presented the Yankees with a free run in the third when Bill Henry, the Boston starting and losing pitcher, walked Yogi Berra, Bauer, and Elston Howard. He was removed for Susce who walked Billy Martin on a 3-1 pitch to force in a run.

Jackie Jensen scored the single Boston run when he belted his 23rd homer of the season in the sixth with two out and the bases empty.

This only served to balance off the homer the Yankees' Joe Collins hit in the fifth, his 13th.

Byrne, who boosted his season's record to 16-4, was in command all the way except for the danger-loaded ninth.

35,051 See SC in TD Parade

By DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES COLISEUM — A slow-starting University of Southern California grid machine spotted Washington State a 6-0 lead in the first five minutes of play, then came to life to pile up 50 points and a convincing 50-12 victory here Saturday before 35,051 fans.

Despite exceptionally sloppy play on occasions, the Trojans displayed tremendous potential and great raw strength in easily whipping what has been touted as the best team in the Pacific Northwest this season.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE WHOLE Trojan bench saw action as Coach Jess Hill substituted freely against the inadequate Cougar club.

Recovering quickly after the shock of yielding a touchdown so early, the Trojans first knotted the count and then moved into a 13-6 first quarter lead. After that they steadily pulled away from the Cougars.

Jon Arnett led the scoring parade with a pair of touchdowns, one on a 19-yard sweep around end and the other on a pass from quarterback Ellsworth Kissinger.

Other Trojans who got into the scoring act with one touchdown each were Gordon Duvall, C. R. Roberts, Leon Clarke, Doug Kranz . . . and left tackle George Belotti.

BELOTTI'S SCORE will go down as one of the oddities of the year . . . a tackle returning a punt for a touchdown.

The Trojans were leading 29-6 in the third period when Belotti caught everyone by surprise, grabbing a short Cougar kick on the first bounce and rumbling 35 yards to a touchdown behind a couple of murderous key blocks by his mates.

The otherwise dull Pacific Coast Conference opener could have produced two other unusual developments, but they failed to materialize.

Strangely enough, both incidents came on the same play.

★ ★ ★ ★

INSTEAD OF punting on the first play of the second quarter, the Cougars decided to try instead for a field goal from the Trojan 46 . . . a distance of 56 yards to the goal posts.

However, the placement by Frank Sarno fell far short of its target and was fielded on the first bounce by Arnett three yards behind the Trojan goal line.

Arnett then had the unique opportunity of returning a field goal attempt 103 yards for a touchdown . . . but just as it looked like he might spring loose, he was tripped up on the SC 23-yard line by a lunging tackle.

From there the Trojans drove 62 yards to the Cougar 15 to get in position for Bob Isaacson to kick a field goal for SC from the 22-yard line.

Six interceptions by the alert Trojan secondary played a major role in the 50-12 score.

★ ★ ★ ★

ONE OF THE interceptions accounted directly for a touchdown, two more set the stage for a pair of Trojan scores, while a fourth—a spectacular one-handed grab by Jimmy Contratto—kept the Cougars from scoring what looked like a cinch TD.

The Trojans did better with Washington State's aerial game than they did their own. They completed four of their own pitches for 72 yards and two touchdowns, while they returned the six Cougar passes 100 yards.

The Cougars struck for their first touchdown the first time they got the ball.

★ ★ ★ ★

THEY WENT 41 yards in six plays with quarterback Bob Iverson setting the stage for the score with a 28-yard dash to the Troy two-yard line and a couple of plays later "sneaking" over at 4:52 of the initial stanza. Tom Gunnari's kick was wide.

A chain of three quick developments enabled SC to even it up at 6-6 three and one-half minutes later.

First, Arnett returned the kickoff 38 yards to the SC 49.

Halfback Jim Hagerty then stepped out of bounds on the Washington State two-yard line as he fielded Jim Contratto's punt, and Iverson promptly fumbled and tackle Dick Enright recovered on the Cougar five.

On the very first play from that point, Duvall swept around left end for the touchdown at 8:16. Don Hickman's kick was wide.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE TROJANS boomed into the lead a couple of minutes later after Clarke partially deflected a Cougar punt, which rolled out of bounds on the Washington State 39 after carrying only 19 yards.

A holding penalty against the Cougars set the stage for Kissinger's 22-yard scoring pass to Arnett off the buck lateral series at 10:48. Hickman's kick was good this time to make it 13-6.

Indians Suffer 3-1 Loss

CLEVELAND (AP) — Al Rosen wore the goat's horns Saturday and the Detroit Tigers, for the second time in less than 24 hours, defeated Cleveland 3-1 to dump the despairing Indians a full game behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

Cleveland's third successive defeat together with New York's 4-1 triumph over Boston put the Indians two games behind in the all-important loss column.

Rosen, in the throes of a dismal batting slump, left five runners on base, four of them in scoring position, in two successive times at bat. He also committed a glaring error which led to Detroit's tie-breaking run in the fifth inning.

★ ★ ★ ★

IN ALL, the Indians stranded 15 baserunners as time and again, Frank Lary, a gritty little righthander with a big curveball, halted them in their tracks with men in scoring position.

Al Kaline, hitless in his last 15 times at bat before Saturday's game, was the Tiger batting star. He drove in two runs and scored the other.

Bob Lemon, Cleveland's 18-game winner, was charged with his ninth defeat.

Maryland Stops Tiger Surge, 13-12

COLUMBIA, Mo. (U.P.)—Mighty Maryland struck for two early touchdowns by Ed Vered and Bill Walker then held off a determined Missouri second half rally for a 13-12 win Saturday before 18,000 fans in 92 degree weather.

Even though they lost, the game was sweet revenge for Missouri, which got trampled 73-13 by Maryland last Thanksgiving Day.

The game could easily have ended in a tie, but guard Charley Mehrer appeared nervous on his first Missouri conversion attempt and kicked too early, the ball dribbling through the Maryland line.

Maryland had been tabbed as much as a 20-point favorite. The Terps, rated one of the nation's outstanding teams, meet UCLA, favored to retain its No. 1 national ranking of 1954, next Saturday.

Maryland scored the first time it got the ball after Missouri picked up two first downs, one on two straight off-side penalties against Maryland. Vered sparked the 63-yard drive, which came mostly on short plunges by Vered, halfback Jack Healy and fullback Fred Hamilton.

★ ★ ★ ★

VERED SCAMPERED 14 yards for the touchdown. Fullback Bob Laughery kicked the game's only conversion.

Maryland scored again early in the second period as quarterback Frank Tamburello passed 22 yards to Walker.

The Terps' other big threat came late in the first half when Bob Pelligrini intercepted Jim Hunter's pass on Missouri's 33. Maryland stalled, however, and Missouri took over.

That gave Maryland a 13-0 half-time lead, but the brilliant play of Hunter, a 191-pound junior, got the Tigers back into the game in the last half.

Hunter, converted from half, guided Missouri to both its touchdowns and got able assists from halfback Jerry Curtright, son of former Chicago White Sox outfielder Guy Curtright.

CURTRIGHT set up the first Missouri tally when he intercepted a pass from Lynn Beightol and ran it back 28 yards to the Maryland 25. Hunter streaked 14 yards in the drive, then passed nine yards to halfback Sonny Stringer for the touchdown.

In the final period, Missouri started from its own 35 and drove down the field with the tally coming on a 15-yard pass from Hunter to end Harold Bernine. Hunter set up the touchdown pass with a nine-yard toss to half Bill Rice.

AS TRIBE BITES DUST

So Quiet in Clubhouse You Could Hear Pennant Drop!

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland clubhouse was so quiet you could hear the pennant drop.

The players acted as if it were all over—and appeared resigned to it.

Here and there, a player growled half-heartedly that the blankety-blank Yankees hadn't won it yet and tried to cheer the others up. But hardly anybody paid any attention to him.

Such cries as "we'll get 'em tomorrow," and "it's not over yet," were greeted with blank stares. And even those remarks sounded hollow and uncertain.

Al Lopez, off by himself, had little to say. A wonderful loser as well as a gracious winner, the Cleveland pilot plainly showed the suffering he's gone through during those last three games, all agonizingly narrow defeats.

"Sometimes I wonder whether it's worth it," he mused. "What's the use of all the honor, and the glory and the money, if it's going to kill you.

"Well," he concluded, cracking his lips in what was meant to be a smile. "It's really not over yet. They've still got two more games to play than we have. Anything can happen, you know."

Once Over Lightly
by DAVE LEWIS

It has been a foregone conclusion for many months — in fact, since early last football season—that Ronnie Knox would be UCLA's No. 1 tailback this year.

It had to be that way.

While the other tailback candidates could turn in a fair job, it was obvious that the Bruins needed a stronger all-around man to engineer the UCLA offense than Doug Bradley, Sam Brown or Gerry McDougall.

Ronnie has been Red Sanders' "boy" from the very start of the "Knox incident" when UCLA inherited the talented back from its sister campus at Berkeley.

But Knox had to be brought along slowly.

The cloud under which he entered UCLA first had to be partly dissipated before turning Ronnie loose.

Thus, a sort of "pigskin curtain" was thrown around him. Knox has been soft-pedaled for more than a year now.

Shrewd Red Sanders has been protecting him from public opinion and criticism, trying to make it a little easier for one of the most controversial figures in college football history.

THE "KNOX INCIDENT" all began after Ronnie completed his freshman season at the University of California, which outbid dozens of other colleges interested in the "T" quarterback and passing wizard from Santa Monica High's 1952 CIF championship club.

He quit Berkeley in a huff, claiming Cal had not lived up to its promises.

Harvey Knox, Ronnie's celebrated stepfather and advisor, entered the picture and soon charges and countercharges began making the sports pages look like an issue of "Confidential."

The decision of Harvey and Ronnie for the latter to enroll at the southern branch of California—UCLA—added even more fuel to the messy situation.

Ronnie lost a year of eligibility by transferring to UCLA. He had to sit out the 1954 campaign, which leaves him only this season and next to play varsity ball.

Knox began learning the UCLA system the hard way last year, playing with the Bruin redshirts — ineligibles — whose main duty is to serve as cannon fodder for the varsity.

It is heard that the rugged 1954 Bruin crew took keen delight in giving the widely-publicized Knox a good going over . . . but he soon earned their respect.

It was obvious from the first that here was a boy who definitely had everything that goes to make a star football player.

And it was in those bone-bruising sessions between the varsity and redshirts that Sanders and his coaching staff were convinced that Knox was the key man in their 1955 plans.

Big question in most everyone's minds was whether or not Ronnie could handle the tailback spot in the single wing since most of his activity had been in the role of a "T" quarterback.

KNOX DEMONSTRATED to everyone Friday night that the single wing was right down his alley . . . a fact which has been known by the Bruin coaching staff for a year, but which has not been overly broadcast under Sanders' plan to keep Ronnie in the background as much as possible until he proved himself under fire.

Ronnie declared after Friday night's go with Texas A&M that he was completely relaxed in his first start, but admitted that "this game has been a big strain on me for several weeks.

"There's no use denying that I wasn't worried, after all I was on a really big spot. If I didn't make a good showing, I would have left myself wide open for a real pounding from fans and sports writers. The criticism would undoubtedly have hurt me in future games —shaken my confidence.

"Getting off to a good start the passed for all three Bruin touchdowns in the 21-0 conquest of the Aggies) sure took a big load off me. I'm glad to get this one out of the way.

"Now I feel people won't be so critical of me from here on out even if I do have the misfortune of having a bad day.

"The fellows on the team have really been wonderful and have helped me a lot."

Sanders was particularly high in his praise for Knox, which is very unusual for the normally conservative Bruin mentor.

RED SAYS KNOX has a chance to be the best tailback the Bruins have ever had . . . "better, in time, than even Paul Cameron."

Sanders added that he's never seen a player turn in a cooler game in his first varsity start than Knox.

"He's not only the best passer I've ever had at either UCLA or Vanderbilt, but Knox runs hard . . . and hard runners can always gain yardage in our offense. What's more, Ronnie is real tough. Yes, he's real gifted," Red delcared.

Bear Bryant, Texas A&M mentor, said "amen" to that. "Knox will be a great player under the capable handling of Sanders."

Meanwhile, Sanders frankly admitted the Bruins far exceeded expectations in their more or less routine victory over the Aggies.

The Bruins methodically cut down the Texans while definitely playing "under wraps."

It was a perfect opener for the Bruins . . . a fairly rugged test against pretty much the same type of offense they'll meet

Burk's TD Pitches Top Rams, 35-21

DENVER (AP)—Quarterback Adrain Burk pitched three scoring passes to end Pete Pihos and flipped another to halfback Bobby Walston in guiding the Philadelphia Eagles to a 35-21 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in a professional exhibition football game Saturday night.

It was the sixth straight exhibition for the Eagles, who have lost only once to Los Angeles in 17 games.

The Rams were without the services of their No. 1 quarterback, Norm Van Brocklin, who appeared only in punting roles. His replacement, Billy Wade, connected with halfback Ron Waller on a 58-yard pass-run play and also fired an 11-yard scoring pass to end Bob Boyd.

The Eagles trailed only once, 14-7, early in the second period when the Rams' Tank Younger plunged two yards after a 56-yard pass play from Wade to Waller.

Les Richter missed a 25-yard field goal for Los Angeles in the first period, and his 40-yard attempt in the second was partially blocked. The Rams' Tom Fears missed a 40-yard fourth period attempt.

Burk sent the Eagles ahead to stay on his third scoring pass to Pihos, a two-yard shot in the third period.

Halfback Harold Giancanelli went 29 yards on a pitchout shortly before the final gun to ice it for Philadelphia.

The game almost developed into a brawl in the final half with the Eagles' Bill Stribling and the Rams' Larry Morris being ousted at one point for fighting.

MASTERFUL GOLF
Ward Gains Amateur Crown With 9-8 Win

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Harvie Ward's nine-year quest for the National Amateur golf championship ended in success Saturday when the young North Carolinian, near flawless and losing only one hole, smothered Philadelphia's William Hyndmann III, 9 and 8, in one of the worst shellackings in the tournament's history.

Hyndmann, a 39-year-old insurance executive little known outside his own district, was eight-down at the end of the morning round when Ward, his irons blazing, shot around the James River course in 66, four under par.

Ward, rated by his contemporaries as the finest amateur player in the world, lived up to this reputation with a brilliant exhibition of precision golf which would have done justice to the best of the pros.

He didn't miss a fairway on his drives and only three of his approaches failed to find the green in the orthodox number of shots. He had only one bogey, five birdies and a relentless string of steady pars over a long, 6,713-yard course which plays nearer a par 72 than its listed 70.

Rote Leads Packers Over Cardinals, 37-28

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The Green Bay Packers ended a four-game losing streak at the expense of the Chicago Cardinals Saturday night as Tobin Rote fired two touchdown passes of 76 and 72 yards in the final quarter of the Shrine benefit exhibition football game for a 37-28 win.

The Cards took a 21-20 lead before a minute was gone in the fourth period, the score culminating a drive that started in the third.

But Rote, the Packers' veteran signal caller, took over and flipped long paydirt passes to Gary Knafele and Billy Howton. The first ate up 76 yards, while the aerial to Howton covered 72. Those two passes put the Packers ahead, 34-21.

The cards scored once more on an eight-yard end sweep by quarterback Lamar McHan, but Rote had put the ball game out of the Cards' reach. The Packers added three more points on a field goal by Fred Cone for insurance.

The Packers outplayed the Cardinals in both rushing and passing in handing the Chicagoans their third loss of the exhibition season against two wins.

Texas Tech Tops Texas in Stunner

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—Halfback Don Schmidt scored two touchdowns, one on a brilliant 79-yard run, to lead Texas Tech to a stunning 20-14 upset victory Saturday night over the University of Texas before 47,000 fans.

The Red Raiders from West Texas took charge early in the game, scoring their first marker with less than five minutes gone in the first period, to hand Texas the first home season opener loss in its history.

Playing before the largest crowd ever to attend a University of Texas home season opener, Tech capitalized on a Texas fumble early in the opening quarter, and Schmidt, a hard-running, 185-pound back, bounced over from the one to score.

Late in the second quarter, Schmidt ran 79 yards to give Tech a two-touchdown bulge.

Texas narrowed the margin when sophomore quarterback Walter Fondren tallied from three yards on the payoff end of a 64-yard march, but Tech bounced back with what turned out to be the deciding touchdown late in the final period.

'New Look' Beavers Roll to 33-0 Win

CORVALIS, Ore. (UP)—Oregon State, showing its "new look" single-wing offense for the first time under new head coach Tommy Prothro, romped to a 33-0 victory over Brigham Young Saturday at Parker Stadium.

Brigham Young's one good scoring chance came near the end of the second period on a 60-yard drive to the Oregon State two-yard line. But the threat ended when quarterback Carroll Johnston fumbled and Oregon State recovered.

Sophomores accounted for or figured in four of Oregon State's touchdowns. Sam Wesley, a 160-pound halfback from Dallas, Tex., scored twice, once in the first period on a nine-yard reverse and again on the opening play of the second quarter on a 44-yard gallop.

Joe Francis, sophomore halfback from Honolulu, ran 25 yards for one touchdown and passed nine yards to fullback Arlo Wenstrand for another.

Hawks Close Season With 13-1 Victory

The Long Beach Nitehawks wound up one of the most successful seasons in their long, win-filled history Saturday night by trimming the service-champion Santa Ana Marines, 13-1, before 800 fans at Park Ave. Field.

Lucky Humiston got the Hawks scoring parade started in the second inning by tripling home Bill Hull. Hull banged out a three-run double to stretch the count in the third and hits by Larry Silvas, Humiston, Stan White and Cleo Goyette paced a five-run fourth.

Manager Joe Rodgers made his season's debut as a player for his national champions by taking over for Jones at shortstop late in the game. The cagey pilot garnered a single in two official trips. Pitcher Jack Randall homered for the Hawks in the seventh.

DUPAS NABS EASY VICTORY

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Ralph Dupas danced his way to a 10-round unanimous decision over Mickey Northup Saturday night in the main event at Hollywood Legion Stadium.

Dupas, 137½, New Orleans, La., won every round from Northup, 140, Los Angeles. There were no knockdowns in the fight as Dupas, No. 2 ranking lightweight contender, danced in and out during each round, hitting Northup, a recently discharged Korean veteran, with sharp uppercuts.

Referee Dynamite Jackson scored the bout 58-52, while Judges James Wallace and George Latka tallied it 57-53 and 56-54, respectively.

101-Yard Run as Florida Takes 20-14 Decision

GAINESVILE, Fla. (AP)—Jackie Simpson scooted 101 yards with an intercepted pass and went 46 yards on another scoring run as Florida defeated Mississippi State 20-14 in a Southeastern Conference opener Saturday.

Florida was throttled in the first half, but four minutes into the third quarter Simpson cut off his right guard, turned sharply and out-maneuvered the entire State secondary in the 46-yard jaunt to the goal.

Long runs of 48 yards by Jim Rountree and 22 by Bobby Lance gave Florida a 20-7 lead and they needed it for State came back with a Bill Stanton passing attack that scored in the closing minutes.

FARBER RAMBLES FOR GRADS

3,297 See Last Game of Series

By DOUG MILES

Quarterbacks Jack Price and O'Jay Bourgeois threw three touchdown passes between them while fullback Stu Farber scored twice to lead a surprisingly-potent Alumni eleven to an imposing 32-6 victory over the disorganized Long Beach City College varsity Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium in the final game of the 17-year-old series.

Farber startled the 3,297 fans on the fifth play of the game when he broke through left tackle and outsped Viking defenders for a 45-yard touchdown run.

Long Beach City College hosts powerful Modesto JC next Saturday night in a non-conference clash at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Doug Andreasen, City College's lineman star of the night, blocked Ben Aoki's conversion try to leave it 6-0 with three minutes gone.

* * * *

PRICE, WHO spearheaded the 1950 Junior Rose Bowl champions, hit Aoki on a 49-yard pass play late in the first quarter for the Alumni's second touchdown. Aoki's conversion was wide.

Farber, who rolled up 90 yards in 10 carries, scored his second and the Alumni's third touchdown on a six-yard sweep around left end midway in the second quarter. Aoki's kick was good, giving the Alumni a 19-0 halftime lead.

Midway in the third quarter the Alumni marched to the five with two to go for a first down. Jack Brannen bucked left guard for four to the one but a 15-yard penalty and eight-yard loss put the ball back on the 24.

* * * *

BOURGEOIS, with enough time to knit a football jersey finally saw Brannen shake loose and hit the scatback with a perfect aerial for the Alumni's fourth touchdown.

With a little less than two minutes remaining in the third quarter, City College seemed to show some offensive punch with Dave Proctor picking up three and then one yard.

Little Lanny Rupp, reserve Viking quarterback, hit end Henry Frese's outstretched hands for 39 yards. But as Frese attempted to bring the ball in, it squirted out of his hands and was recovered by a host of Alumni players on their own 16.

* * * *

BOURGEOIS connected with Jack Swan for nine and fullback Glen Briggs dived over guard for two. Bourgeois, who by this time could have knitted 11 jerseys with the protection he was getting, completed a 73-yard pass play to Brannen for the final Alumni touchdown. Bourgeois converted to make it 32-0.

After an exchange of punts the Alumni took over again, this time on their own six. With only 54 seconds remaining, Bourgeois attempted a hook pass that was intercepted by Andreasen and run back to the 14.

Brooks, needing a touchdown to halt the most lopsided score in the series, (Alumni defeated the Vikes, 57-25, last year), called a button hook to left end P. J. Robinson, who took the pass on the five and danced into the end zone.

With four seconds left, the burly Alumni line that had been spearheaded by Bob Angle, Leroy Hoffman, Bob Keller and Wilbur Necochea, broke through to block Andreasen's conversion.

* * * *

CITY COLLEGE fumbled eight times, recovering only two of the bobbles. Poor backfield timing and a weak defensive secondary against the pinpoint passing of Price and Bourgeois, who completed 10 out of 19 for 243 yards, logged the Vikes throughout the decisive beating.

Dick Romo led the Vike's backs, running back kickoffs 38 and 32 yards and a punt 49 yards, while picking up 4.1 yards per scrimmage carry.

Brannen, besides catching two touchdown passes, carried nine times for 75 yards. Aoki caught three passes for 101 yards.

In special halftime contests featuring local prep gridders, St. Anthony's Eddie Rodriguez took the lion's share of the honors. The baseball pitching star won the football pass for distance with a throw of 64 yards and the kicking with a boot of 58 yards. The 50-yard dash was won by Benny Sexton of Jordan over Kenny Jones of Poly and Vic Gausepohl of St. Anthony's.

Oregon Gains Vengeance Over Scrappy Utah, 14-13

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Oregon edged Utah by the margin of a point after touchdown, 14-13, Saturday night to avenge a 7-6 loss to the Utes in an intersectional game last year.

The Ducks scored first. Halfback Jim Shanley threaded his way 28 yards around left end for the score early in the second period.

After a series of pass interceptions and fumbles which went both ways, the scrappy Utes started a drive after recovering a fumble on their own 43. Halfback Stewart Vaughan went the final nine yards through center.

Oregon fullback Jack Morris carried the second half kickoff 43 yards to his own 46. The Ducks pounded straight down the field, with Morris shoving through center five yards for the score. He won the game by booting both conversions.

Utah's final touchdown was by halfback Herb Naaken, who went five yards around right end after he and fullback Lou Mele had carried on repeated plunges from Utah's 35.

Mays Blasts 47th as Giants Tip Bums

BROOKLYN (AP) — Two home runs, including Willie Mays' 47th of the season, provided the New York Giants with the margin of victory Saturday as they whipped the National League pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-5.

Mays, setting the pace in the league's home run department, also drove home two more runs on a single and a force out. Bobby Hofman also homered for the Giants.

Carl Furillo homered for the champions, sending in two runs in the third off Jim Hearn. The Dodgers drove Hearn from the mound in a three-run third but were throttled the remainder of the way by Paul Giel.

Rocky 3-1 Pick Over Ancient Archie

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time since the days of Joe Louis, there is a "big fight" tang in the fall air as Rocky Marciano prepares to defend his heavyweight title against Archie Moore Tuesday night in Yankee Stadium.

Although Marciano, unbeaten in 48 fights, remains a strong 3-1 favorite to whip the long frustrated challenger, all signs point to a roaring crowd of 50,000 and a gate of over $750,000 for the 15-round match.

The latest call down on the odds also made it 2-1 that Marciano will win by a knockout and 6-1 that Moore will not win by a knockout.

With all due respect to Roland LaStarza, Ezzard Charles and Don Cockell, the public never gave any of Rocky's previous challengers a chance to win. Ever since the September night in 1952 when he got off the floor to knock out Jersey Joe Walcott and win the title, Rocky has been head and shoulders above the division.

The carefully planned publicity campaign for Moore, followed by his victory over Nino Valdes and his knockout of Bobo Olson in three rounds, has cast the 38-year-old ring gypsy in the role of a martyr. Encouraged by the delaying tactics of Al Weill, the champion's manager, people began to believe that Marciano was ducking Moore. A Marciano-Moore match became a "must."

Not since Louis fought his return watch with Walcott or his second bout with Billy Conn has there been such tremendous interest in a heavyweight match. The International Boxing Club reports an advance sale of $500,000.

Theater television really comes of age for this bout with 128 theaters in 92 cities piping the picture to their audiences over a closed circuit TV. There will be no home TV. Theater television network officials indicate they will gross $1,000,000.

On the basis of a 40-20 percentage split for the entire receipts, Marciano should drag down about $400,000 and Moore about $200,000 for the night's work.

The fight will be heard on radio over ABC.

Marciano has trained at Grossinger, N. Y. as usual, with his customary devotion to condition. He hasn't boxed as many rounds as he has for some fights, about 120 in all.

In contrast to Marciano's rather quiet camp, Moore has been sounding off like a carnival pitchman at his retreat in North Adams, Mass., where he has predicted he'll win by a knockout in 10 rounds.

Archie the gypsy will be bucking a jinx as well as Marciano's fists. No light-heavy champ ever moved on to the heavy title although seven tried. Bob Fitzsimmons held both crowns, in fact three in all, but he went from middle to heavy and then back to light-heavy.

Marciano, larger than Moore in most of the ring measurements, gives away 7½ inches in reach—68½ inches to 75½ inches. In theory this gives Moore a chance to spear at long range, pick his spots and drop in his sharp punches. But Rocky is a swarming, brawling type who bulls in with his head, arms and elbows. Archie loves to stand in one spot, turning in mid ring while an opponent forces the action. When he finds his opening, he lets go.

In 48 fights Marciano has won every one, 42 by knockouts. He has been down only once, in the first round of his first scrap with Walcott. Moore has a 120-19-5 record for 144 bouts dating back to 1936. He has knocked out 82 opponents and has been stopped four times by Jimmy Bivins, Eddie Booker, Ezzard Charles and Len Morrow.

The Moore camp, brimming with confidence, calls attention to the fact that Archie beat Nino Valdes in 15 rounds in May and Marciano needed nine rounds to stop Don Cockell at San Francisco, May 16. Their clincher is Valdes' knockout of Cockell in London last week.

This will be Marciano's sixth defense and his second of 1955. He expects to weigh 187 pounds, about a pound more than Archie at the Tuesday noon weigh-in.

Indians Display Mid-Season Form, Rout COP, 33-14

PALO ALTO (CP) — Coach Chuck Taylor's Stanford Indians, presenting a diversified running and passing attack that displayed mid-season form, walloped College of Pacific, 33-14, Saturday in the opening game of the season.

With quarterback Jerry Gustafson passing for two touchdowns and fullback Bill Tarr plunging for two more, the Indians roared back after spotting COP a touchdown in the first minutes of play to take 14-7 halftime lead before 29,000 fans.

The two Pacific touchdowns came in lightning thrusts at the opening of the game and at the opening of the third period.

The first came when halfback Ken Swearingen cut through center and went 61 yards to score. Then at the start of the second half, end A. D. Williams stole the ball from Stanford's Ernie Dorn on the Indian 26 and raced it back for a touchdown.

* * * *

THE ONLY OTHER time the Tigers threatened came two minutes from the end of the game when Stanford held on its own three.

The Tiger team was hurt defensively early in the game when its great tackle, John Nisby, was kicked out of the contest for "unsportsmanlike conduct" A brawl involving COP's Bob Lee and Stanford's fine end, John Stewart, in the fourth quarter also ended with those two on the sidelines.

Tarr got the first of his two touchdowns in the first period on a four-yard plunge after a 69-yard drive that was helped along with 25 yards in penalties against the Tigers. Stanford went ahead in the second quarter as Tarr scored from the five on a pitchout from quarterback John Brodie.

After COP had tied the score in the third period, Stanford came back again on a 52-yard drive in 12 plays with the payoff being Gustafson's 15-yard pass to Paul Camera in the end zone.

IN THE FOURTH, the Indians cinched it with Gustafson passing to Camera again from the three yard line for the score. Sophomore Al Harrington of Honolulu, taking a pitchout from the five, finished it off with the final tally midway in the last period.

Scores 20 Points in 4th Period

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Dick Bowen, a limber-legged sophomore playing his first varsity game, and veteran fullback Bobby Grier scored two touchdowns each Saturday as Pittsburgh spotted the University of California one touchdown and stormed back in the final period to win, 27-7.

Bowen entered the game in the final period with the score tied 7-7. On his first running play, he made four yards for a first down on the California 27. He took a pitchout from Corny Salvaterra on the next play and streaked to the six. Then he cut, took Salvaterra's pass in the end zone for the score.

* * * *

A BREAK GAVE Pittsburgh the ball on California's nine a few minutes later. End Fred Glatz recovered Hugh Maguire's fumble and Bowen was back in business again. He slicked off right tackle into the end zone to give the Panthers a 20-7 edge. John Paluck converted.

The Californians, who played Pittsburgh to a stalemate in the first half, were visibly wilted by the 92 degree heat and the steam turned on by Pittsburgh.

Grier, hard-hitting fullback from Massillon, Ohio, completed the scoring with a 33-yard touchdown gallop with four minutes remaining.

A hometown crowd of 34,976 sat stunned as the underdog and outmanned Bears from the West Coast easily moved in front after slightly more than three minutes elapsed in the first period.

Billy Vallotton recovered a Pittsburgh fumble on his own 45 and four plays later was on the receiving end of a 30-yard scoring pass from Maguire. Nick Poppin converted.

* * * *

Day-Led Rebels Win, 26-13

ATLANTA (AP) — Eagle Day, supposedly shunted to the bench on pre-season performance, passed, punted and ran the Mississippi Rebels to a 26-13 victory over a slower Georgia team Saturday night in a Southeastern Conference football opener.

The 23-year-old senior quarterback staged a brilliant offensive show in the aftermath of Georgia Tech's defensive struggle against Miami in the day half of Atlanta's football doubleheader.

Day passed to halfback Billy Kinard for two first half touchdowns and ran six yards in the fourth quarter for the clincher score.

Mississippi, which hadn't kicked a field goal since 1932, got two from fullback Paige Cothren in the second quarter.

Georgia treated the 30,000 Grant Field crowd to both its touchdowns in the first half. Halfback Conrad Manisera capped a 71-yard drive with a six-yard scoring sweep in the first quarter. A pass from second string quarterback Dick Young to halfback Jimmy Orr covered 46 yards and gave Georgia a brief 13-12 lead in the second period.

SECOND HALF IMPROVEMENT

Rugged Razorbacks Overcome Tulsa, 21-6

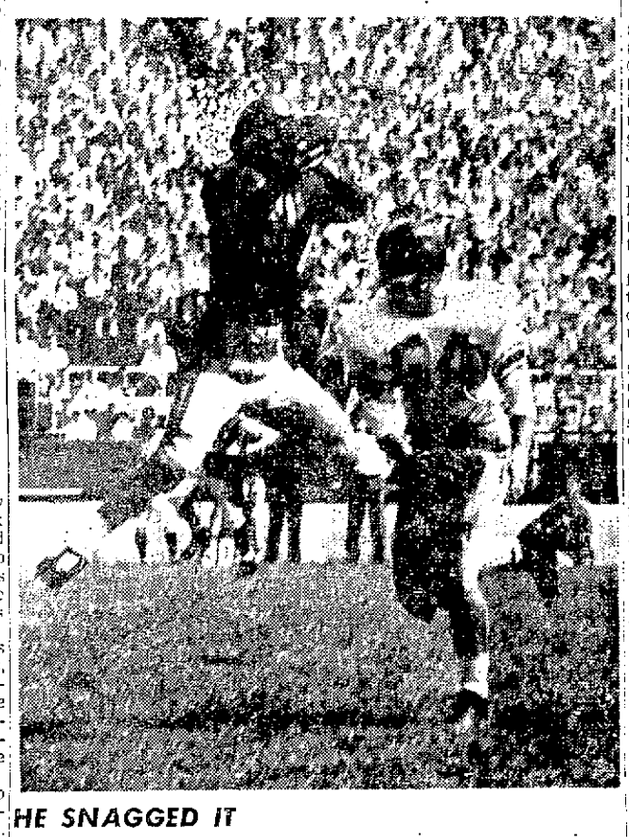

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UP)—The University of Arkansas, surprise of 1954 in the Southwest Conference, opened its 1955 season Saturday by beating a fiercely resisting University of Tulsa team, 21-6, before 18,500 spectators.

Both teams were playing under new coaches and they both looked a little disorganized the first two periods. In this respect, Arkansas had the edge on disorganization, but in the last half showed spots of the brilliance that gained it the conference crown last year.

Tulsa scored midway in the first period when fullback Dick Scholtz cracked over from the two. Charles Wynes' conversion attempt failed.

Arkansas took a 7-6 lead in the second period as fullback Hank Moore sped 64 yards off left guard.

The Razorbacks looked like a different team in the second half. They marched 54 yards in nine plays in the third period with halfback Joe Thomason plunging over from the three. In the last quarter George Walker threw 34 yards to halfback Ronnie Underwood for their final TD. Walker kicked all three extra points.

Hawaii Pulls 6-0 Surprise on Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP) — Skippy Dyer, a hula-hipped halfback weighing only 160 pounds, paced Hawaii's underdog Rainbows to a 6-0 upset win over Nebraska's Cornhuskers Saturday before 23,000 sweltering football fans at Memorial Stadium here.

Rocking Nebraska on its heels through three scoreless quarters, Hawaii punched across the game-winning touchdown with five minutes of the fourth period remaining and squelched Nebraska's desperation passes in the waning moments.

It was the elusive Dyer who kept Nebraska off balance during most of this long afternoon.

A 37-yard sprint by reserve halfback Bill Taylor put Hawaii within seven yards of pay dirt to set up the touchdown. Halfback Ed Kanawaki plunged to within inches and Hartwell Freitas, 185-pound fullback, bucked it over.

against Maryland next Saturday.

On the other hand, it wasn't a tough enough game to sap their strength or interfere with the Bruins reaching the necessary physical and emotional peak against mighty Maryland.

THE BRUINS appeared more concerned with sharpening their timing and blocking and maintaining a perfect defensive record rather than running up a score.

The Aggies' refusal to "open up" also kept the score respectable. It appeared to most observers they were mainly concerned in keeping the score down.

After all, Bryant didn't want his sophomores humilated by a lop-sided score in their first varsity game. Such a result would definitely have been demoralizing to a group of youngsters who are destined to give Aggieland one of the nation's great teams in another year or two.

The Texas A&M camp definitely was impressed by the Bruins, "Bear" going as far as to say "UCLA certainly gets my No. 1 rating off this week's showing."

Best crack of the night came when Bryant was asked what he thought was the turning point of the game: "When Papa Knox brought his boy down from California."

The notorious switch in schools also could mean the national championship.

Chisox Keep Faint Hopes Alive by Beating A's, 12-8

KANSAS CITY (UP)—The Chicago White Sox picked up a free run on a bases-full walk in the 10th inning Saturday night and went on to beat the Kansas City Athletics 12-8.

The White Sox filled the bases in the 10th with the score tied 8-all, on a walk, a safe bunt, a sacrifice bunt, and still another walk off Ray Herbert, fourth Kansas City pitcher.

Southpaw Art Ceccarelli came into the game and walked pinch-hitter George Kell, forcing in the winning run. The Sox added two more runs on Bob Kennedy's single and another on an error.

Kentucky Surprised by Hustling LSU, 19-7

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University, showing off a new coach, outhustled, outplayed and outscored favored Kentucky, 19-7, Saturday night in the season's football opener for both squads.

Junior quarterback Matt Burns pitched two scoring tosses to halfback Vince Gonzales, and halfback Joe May raced a kick-off back 95 yards to get Coach Paul Dietzel off to a winning start at LSU.

All-America candidate Bob Hardy was humiliated by the hustling LSU squad, having a key pass intercepted and being thrown for large losses in the fourth quarter.

Dietzel, 31-year-old former Army and Kentucky assistant, displayed a well coached, scrappy team that fought back viciously every time Kentucky threatened.

When Hardy hit his favorite target, end Howie Schnellenberger, for a 16-yard scoring pass in the third quarter, May ripped off his long scoring dash on the next kickoff.

NEGRO STARS BOOKED FOR WRIGLEY FIELD

Perhaps the finest major league Negro all-star team ever assembled has been booked for two Wrigley Field appearances against a group of Southland major league stars Nov. 4 and 6, promoter Bill Feistner announced Saturday.

The Negro lineup will feature Don Newcombe and Junior Gilliam of the National League champion Brooklyn Dodgers, the Cubs' flashy double play combo of Ernie Banks and Gene Baker, Willie Mays and Hank Thompson of the Giants, Larry Doby and Al Smith of the Indians and Sam (No-Hit) Jones of the Cubs.

Bill Wilson, Rocky Bridges, Dick Cole and Bud Daley are among local major leaguers who will face the Negro stars.

Georgia Tech Clips Miami in Bone-Cracking TV Game

ATLANTA (UP)—Paul Rotenberry, a plug-shaped halfback from Norfolk, Va., seized an opportunity with a penalty flag down — and also the enemy's guard—Saturday to go 48 yards for a touchdown and give Georgia Tech a 14-6 victory over Miami in a bone-cracking season opener. The game was televised coast-to-coast in color.

Tech. Capt. Jimmy Morris went 25 yards with an interception for a second score in the last 54 seconds. But that was all anticlimax, made possible only by Rotenberry's quick thinking in the first period.

Rotenberry acted in a sudden rule-book situation and proved that he knew the rules. Miami had punted from within its 10-yard line and Miami's co-captain, Guard Joe Kohut, ran into Tech Fullback Ken Owen who had signaled for a fair catch.

* * * *

DOWN WENT OWEN and the ball skittered aimlessly while most of the Miami defenders were watching the area of the foul. Rotenberry picked it up, broke away from the scattered Miami defenders and went all the way.

Tech used eight and nine men to plug its line and it wasn't until the third period that Miami could drive 69 yards to a matching touchdown. Fullback Don Basseler was the hero of the drive, starting it with an eight-yard run and twisting 13 yards for the score. But halfback Ed Oliver, trying to tie the score, sent his placement wobbling wide to the right.

Miami had one more great surge left but it ended at the Tech 36 after a holding penalty set the Hurricanes back. Tech's Stan Flowers stopped Johnny Bomkman with a chilling tackle just short of enough to make it up on fourth down.

* * * *

TECH THEN WAS stopped by a penalty on a drive led by fullback Dick Mattison to the Miami five. In a final exchange of punts sub halfback Johnny Menger of Tech set one down on the Miami two and that was it. Marion Bonofiglio's final desperation pass was eaten up by the eager Morris as he went all the way.

Denver Cops, 19-7

AMES, Iowa (AP)—Denver University's Skyline Conference football champions, pulled out of possible danger by Ray Willsey's 63-yard touchdown run in the fourth period, whipped an unimpressive Iowa State team 19-7 in unseasonable, pound-shrinking 90 degree temperatures Saturday.

The visitors from the Rocky Mountain area, fronting an all-veteran line that carried them to a 9-1 record last fall, broke in front for a 13-0 lead with only 27 seconds gone in the second period. The Pioneers gave up a touchdown to the sophomore-dominated Cyclones later in the period and then broke up the game on Willsey's spectacular dash.

A crowd of 14,000 saw Denver commence the scoring with 4 minutes and 58 seconds remaining in the first period.

COUGARS WEAKER, SAYS HILL

Secret Out on Success of Trojans' Multiple Offense

By DICK ZEHMS

MEMORIAL COLISEUM, LOS ANGELES—The secret is out on Jess Hill's multiple offense. He's using 233-pound tackles to run punts back for touchdowns!

Frank Sarno, second string Washington State College quarterback, punted from the shadow of his own goal posts late in the third quarter of the SC-WSC Pacific Coast Conference game here Saturday afternoon.

It bounced once . . . right into the hands of George Belotti, a 6-3, 233-pound junior tackle. George grabbed it, whirled around and headed for the goal line 35 yards ahead. He ran over one unfortunate WSC warrior, then sailed down the north sidelines toward the west goal line. A Mack truck was out of control.

Three onrushing Cougars made a desperation tackle as George hit the five-yard line. He dived across the goal line. This was the first touchdown of his entire football lifetime. George served his apprenticeship at Oxnard High before winning a starting job at Troy as a sophomore last year.

"Chuck Leimbach threw a great block, or I'd never have made it," said the jubilant George in the dressing room after the Trojans had posted a 50-12 inaugural triumph. "No, I didn't have any idea there was a fairly clear field ahead. I just grabbed the ball when it bounced at me, whirled, and set sail.

"I knew I was going to make it even though two Cougars were coming at me from an angle. I figured I would dive over if I had to. I did."

George's conspicuous first wasn't alone. Leon Clarke, the timber - topping end, finally scored his first touchdown for Troy in this, his senior year. He took a 16-yard pitch from C. R. Roberts in the waning seconds of the second period.

"Boy, it was great," said Leon afterwards. "There ought to be dancing in the streets tonight. I hope there are more ahead."

Thus Hill is exposed. His multiple offense puts the emphasis on the beef trust. Belotti and Clarke are good examples of what Troy's opponents can expect to oppose this year. Irresistible forces on the loose!

* * * *

"WASHINGTON STATE was not as tough as last year," offered the Trojan boss in the immediate post-game dressing room huddle. "We had a lot of trouble with them a year ago. We got some good breaks today.

"I can't make a comparison with our showing of a year ago with this one. We played some good football, some bad, but you get that when you use as many boys as we did today.

"We went down to the third and fourth groups. I sent the firsts back into the game late in the last quarter for work. You can't get them ready for the tough ones ahead by letting them play only seven minutes of the last half. They needed it. They need some more.

"I can't tell yet on the quarterback situation between Jim Contratto and Ellsworth Kissinger. They're a standoff on offense, and Kissinger has the defensive edge. But Jim played some mighty fine defensive football today. We'll have to let time work it out.

"Washington State held up our ends today, which didn't do our passing game any good. They did a marvelous job in this respect."

* * * *

"SC'S RIGHT GUARD gave us trouble all day long," said Al Kircher, WSC coach, in the post-mortem session. "What's his name . . . Orlando Ferante?

"I can't compare SC this year and last year. They made some breaks today. There were some cheap touchdowns scored on the field today. They made some breaks and took advantage of them. We gave them too many easy scores.

"Trojan speed impressed me more than anything else. They'll hurt a lot of teams. Those little guys scoot, don't they?"

* * * *

TOM GUNNARI and Vaughan Hitchcock, a couple of battered and bruised Cougar linemen, agreed with their coach on Troy.

"You have to give them credit," observed Gunnari, a senior tackle and bulwark of the front wall. "They made the breaks and then got rich on them. They appear greener than they were last year."

Hitchcock, nursing a few aches and pains after battering away at the walls of Troy all afternoon, was in accord. "They were rustier this time than a year ago," he said.

DUVALL SCORES SC'S FIRST TD

Wearing a smile of triumph, SC's Gordon Duvall falls into end zone for first Trojan score in first quarter of game against Washington State Saturday. Duvall went five yards on play after tackle Dick Enright had recovered a Cougar fumble to set the stage.—(Staff Photo by Don Webster)

From then on it was just a matter of how much the Trojans would run their scoring total.

Isaacson's field goal from the 22-yard line at 3:58 of the second quarter launched Troy's 16-point attack in that period.

Arnett took a lateral from Contratto and circled right end for 19 yards and a touchdown at 6:41 after Contratto's interception on the 34 had paved the way.

THE TROJANS fumbled away another scoring opportunity moments later on the Washington State 15, but Ernie Merk quickly put them back in point-production by recovering a Cougar fumble in mid-air on the SC 42 and returning to the Cougar 41. Ernie Zampese boomed 25 yards around right end to the 16 from where Roberts, highly touted sophomore fullback, flipped a pass to Clarke for the touchdown just 13 seconds before the first half ended. Kissinger's kick was wide, leaving the score at 29-6.

Incidentally, it was the first touchdown ever scored by the 6-4, 219-pound Clarke, who is a strong candidate for All-American end honors.

The Trojans racked up two more touchdowns in the third period, the first by Belotti at 11:59. Frank Hall's kick made it 36-6. Like Clarke, Belotti also registered the first TD of his career.

TWO MINUTES later, Kranz slammed over from the one-yard line after he had set the stage for the score by intercepting a Cougar pass on the SC 46 and returning 27 yards to the Washington 27. Hall again booted the conversion to make it 43-6.

The Cougars had a good rally going in the final period before Hill rushed his regulars back into the fray to put out the fire.

Washington State marched 61 yards in 10 plays for a touchdown at 4:38 of the final period highlighted by Iverson's 31-yard aerial to end Ernie Pelluer on the eight-yard line. Bob Miller finally plowed over from the one for the tally. Gunnari's kick was wide.

An interception on the SC 37 was the signal for another Cougar advance that carried to the nine-yard line before Contratto squelched the threat with his one-handed interception.

Moments later, Washington State took to the airlanes again and Roberts picked off one of Iverson's pitches and rambled 24 yards to pay dirt. Arnett added the extra point at 12:31 to wrap up the scoring.

IN THIS CORNER

with DICK ZEHMS

Graybeards in the point of service, Orian M. Landreth and Eddie Wagner began blowing their officials' whistles on the Pacific Coast Conference football traffic again last Friday night. For Orian it was season No. 32. For Eddie it was season No. 11.

They worked the UCLA-Texas Aggie game, in the Coliseum by way of tearing the wrapper off another football season. From now until late November, they'll be hard at it checking the maneuvers of the collegians in the Coliseum and on other coastal battlefields.

These two Long Beachers are walking rule books . . . with stripes. Both have been on the main stem of football officiating so long that they are considered higher echelon authorities. They've called 'em in the Rose Bowl on occasion, too.

Time was when Orian was a referee, a job which used to call for fast and constant movement. In the last seven years, however, the Long Beach City College dean of activities has confined himself to the umpiring role—perhaps a little less demanding physically. Eddie, however, still is the "take charge guy" in his role as referee.

They're specialists in the field of officiating. In fact, Eddie continues to serve as instructional chairman for the Southern California Officials Assoc. Of this says Orian:

"Eddie is continuing to do the officials' circles a marvelous job. N

Preps Open Play in Milk Bowl Friday

The eighth annual Milk Bowl Carnival, matching Poly, Wilson and Jordan football teams in a round-robin championship, opens the local high school season Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium with the first kick-off scheduled for 7 p.m.

Bee teams from the three Coast League entries play 15-minute games. Jordan vs. Wilson at 7, Poly vs. Jordan at 7:20 and Wilson vs. Poly at 7:40 to start the night's activities.

Varsity teams take the field at 8:20 p.m. to give the expected crowd of 12,000 a preview of the local prep season.

Jordan kicks off to Wilson at 8:20, Poly kicks off to Jordan at 8:45, and Wilson kicks off to Poly at 9:10 p.m.

* * * *

BOB PARKE's Jordan Panthers, on paper at least, appear to be the team to beat. Jordan welcomed back 11 lettermen from a team that won only one game last year, but the Panthers have an edge over both Poly and Wilson in experience.

Poly, with new coach Doc Cure at the helm, can count only three "active" lettermen as Henry Wallace, all-city varsity "player of the year" is still on the shelf recovering from a fractured leg.

Wilson, last year's runner-up to perennial Coast League champion Compton High, welcomed back six lettermen, but all were reserves.

All three varsity teams run from a straight-T with split-T variations.

Last year's Jordan varsity quarterback, Roland Boyd, is still waging a first string battle with Mike Magee, ball-handling magician from the Bees, and Chuck Buckman, ex-junior varsity quarterback.

* * * *

WILSON HIGH can probably boast of the fastest halfbacks in the city should Dick Hollis, an all-city Bee gridder and track man, and Danny McMillen, who has been running wild in practice.

Poly may be the league "sleeper" although definitely a green team. Jim Hanna, last year's 6-5 reserve quarterback, has been shifted to end to pair with letterman Alan Roebuck at the flanks.

PREP DEBUT

Pretty Wilson High drum majorette Jeanne Wood and four Bruin lettermen strut on practice field as they prepare for Friday night's high school football opener in annual Milk Bowl. Left to right: tackle Bill Muse, center Warren Nelson, Miss Wood, guard Frank Lawler and halfback Jerry McMillan, also shown in inset. Wilson, Poly and Jordan, varsity and Bee teams will be seen in round-robin carnival.

Oxy 1st Foe for State '11'

The 49ers of Long Beach State College open their first grid season, Friday, against Occidental College on the Oxy home field in Eagle Rock.

Coach Mike DeLotto and his staff, which includes backfield coach Bob Downey and line coach Bob Pestolesi, have been molding the first 49er squad in two practice sessions daily since September 1. An original practice-turnout of 51 hopefuls will be cut to a traveling squad of 33 before the opener.

* * * *

MOST LIKELY to win first-team honors are ends John Miller and Neil Peck, tackles Carleton Corey and Herb Tanner, guards Bill Bruffey and Bill Price, center Ron Albertson, quarterback Bob Smith, halfbacks Gene Ashwill and Ivan Seaton, and fullback Ron Kredell.

Kredell could be tumbled by either Ralph Chalifoux or Johnny Gasparian, who have been in and out of the starting lineup since practice began.

Halfbacks Seaton and Ashwill are being pushed hard by Ed Barksdale, Harlow Richardson and Dick Ballester.

* * * *

QUARTERBACK Smith, ex-Santa Ana Jaycee great, has a tight hold on the starting position, but Frank Iacono and John Pembrook are not out of the running.

The firmest grips on first-string honors are held by guards Bruffey and Price. Bob Ashcraft, recently shifted from halfback, may develop starting talent later in the season, and Myron Hitch and Jim Mays are likely to see action.

Tanner, recently nosed out of a starting tackle position by James Alexander, regained his post with a gleaming performance in scrimmage Friday.

Saints Gird for Carnival, Apache Tilts

St. Anthony's High opens its 1955 football season Tuesday night in a 20-minute skirmish against Mt. Carmel as part of the annual Catholic League Carnival. The grid festival will be held at East Los Angeles Junior College.

Following the Carnival tilt, the Saints will engage defending SCIF champion Centennial in their first regular season contest Friday night.

The Saint-Mt. Carmel session of the Carnival will get under way about 9 p.m., following 20-minute jousts between Cathedral and Serra; Cantwell and Notre Dame, and Pius X and Loyola.

Coach Leo Haggerty continued to concentrate on defense in the week's final scrimmage, giving his squad the opportunity to become accustomed to the single wing attack used by Centennial.

Haggerty has also spent some time in defensing the split-T as employed by the Mt. Carmel Crusaders who will have three of last year's backfield starters returning.

Stern, Szabo Battle Togos at Auditorium

It all went for naught last week, this terrible tussle between the talented Togos and Ray Stern plus Sandor Szabo, so it will be tried again Thursday night at Municipal Auditorium.

The rematch was nearly essential since the Togos gained a draw with the rising team of Szabo and Stern a week ago. And the two S's want their record cleaned up.

CHANNEL TRY

2 L.B. Girls Eye Swim

Long Beach's top two feminine distance swimmers—Mrs. Amy Hiland and Mrs. Daisy Murchie—will attempt to cross the Catalina Channel this week.

Mrs. Murchie will begin her swim Thursday night from Catalina Island while Mrs. Hiland is set to leave early Saturday night.

Full details can be found on page A-7. In addition, Mrs. Hiland tells her own story of her swimming career in an interesting article in today's Southland Magazine.

Rockets Tangle With L.A. Stars

The Long Beach Rockets return to Recreation Park this afternoon to face the powerful Los Angeles All-Stars, champions of the recent Compton Semipro Tournament. Game time is 2:15 p. m.

Manager Walt Carson expects some additional help for the Rockets from local minor leaguers who have completed their seasons.

Larry Jones is expected to get the starting mound call as the Rockets seek their 14th victory in 23 games. Tim Knorzer or Tom Lloyd will do the catching.

The rest of the lineup finds Ev Pearson at first base, Bob Senske at second, Red Meairs at short, Bob Howard at third and George Selfridge, Bob Carter and Roger Hull in the outfield.

Bev-Tony Duo Wins Pair in L.A. Net

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Beverly Fleitz of Long Beach and national champion Tony Trabert of Cincinnati led the mixed doubles into the semifinals as play began Saturday in the Pacific Southwest tennis championships.

The Fleitz - Trabert tandem mowed down Connie Bowan, Los Angeles, and Atsushi Miyaga, Japan, 6-1, 6-0, and Marlene O'Connor, Los Angeles, and Enrique Morea, 6-2, 6-1.

Mrs. Pat Yeomans, Los Angeles, and Roger Becker, England, pulled a couple of upsets to keep pace. They defeated Nell Hopman, Australia, and Ted Schroeder, La Canada, Calif., 7-9, 6-2, 6-3, and then eliminated Julie Sampson, San Marino, Calif., and Rex Hartwig, Australia, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5.

Other semi-finalists in the mixed doubles will be Darlene Hard, Montebello, Calif., and Ken Rosewall, Australia, and Barbara Breit, North Hollywood, Calif., and Vic Seixas, Philadelphia. They also won two matches apiece Saturday.

Singles play will begin Monday.

Set Lakewood Area Kid Baseball Meeting

Interest in a Babe Ruth baseball league in the Lakewood-Bellflower area for the 1956 season will be discussed Sept. 22 at 7:30 p. m. at Mann-Wilson Cafetorium, 6024 Clark Ave.

Further information on the league for 13-15 year old boys can be obtained by phoning Jack Lemanski at ME 3-8229 or Gene Sampson at TO 7-1969.

PARTICULARS

by JERRY WYNN

The lady professionals will make an overdue Southland appearance this week in the $5,000 Clock CC Ladies Invitational.

The 72-hole event will begin Thursday over the narrow Whittier course and headline such talent as Patty Berg, Louise Suggs, Fay Crocker, Betsy Rawls, Bev Hanson, Betty Jameson, Mickey Wright and Long Beach's Betty Hicks.

Although a number of the ladies played in the L.A. Open this year, their participation was in the nature of a sideshow rather than a main event. This week the course, the cheers, and the rewards will be theirs alone.

Clock owner Forest Smith has gone all-out to make the tourney a success. He spent $10,000 altering the ninth and 18th holes to avoid parallel fairways and, in doing so, made over the 16th and 17th into splendid water holes.

In addition to donating the entire purse — which will include $1,000 in merchandise prizes for the amateurs — Smith has ticketed all receipts to a children's hospital charity.

Notable by their absence from the field will be Babe Didrikson Zaharias, who may never again be able to golf, and Alice Bauer Hagge. Alice and sister Marlene strangely have never returned to Long Beach since their departure many years ago. Marlene has retired from golf but Alice has been playing exceedingly well recently and her decision to pass up the meet is a puzzling one.

The tournament will be televised Saturday and Sunday but a large attendance on the course would not only insure the perpetuation of the event but add dollars to charity. Let's give the ladies a big welcome!

WILLIAM DICKENSON, 75-7, won the Virginia Men's Club Saturday Sweepstakes with a 68.

Tied for second place at 69 were O. M. Slosson, 79-10; T. F. McCarry, 77-8; and Milt Arthur, 79-10. Recording 70s were L. H. Conley, 88-18, and Mel Collins, 80-10.

Blind bogey (75) victors were Harry Bouchier, Henry Robertson, C. G. DeCoudres, Stan Smith, Ralph Irwin, Carl Haymond, John Mead, G. D. Gurley, Fred Burrell and Dr. Malcolm Todd.

Fishin' Around

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

The slowdown in ocean fishing, always a source of worry to boat operators after Labor Day, has hit hard this year despite the fact that the fish have been cooperating extraordinarily well. All except the albacore, that is! The longfins just pulled a disappearing act.

Bluefin tuna, however, still remain around Catalina Island, and the kelp bass—big ones—are showing their usual September voracity for bait—most any kind of bait.

As we pointed out recently, September and October are ideal months for local fishermen to try their hand at ocean fishing. The passenger lists are small and there's good opportunity to use light tackle and have a lot of fun.

There have been few changes in schedules, but with the crowds dropping off, undoubtedly some skippers will start to curtail operations soon. One change was announced Friday. The Neleh, (Seal Beach Pier) is canceling its half-day runs and changing to an all-day rock-fishing trip, effective Monday. The boat will leave the pier at 8 a. m.

I fished aboard a private boat last Sunday, caught a dozen kelp bass of fair size and had a picnic catching mackerel on a light spinning outfit. There's no fish—in salt or fresh water—that can fight like the mackerel, size for size. I, like many others, do not have any use for mackerel, but the fish can be released, usually without harm, and it's a lot of fun to take them on light outfits. Try a fly rod sometime and if the mackerel doesn't put more bend in that rod than any trout of equal size ever did, I'll donate a fly outfit to anyone who can prove otherwise.

There will be no boat trips to San Clemente Island, Monday through Friday, inasmuch as the Navy is firing a few shells in that direction. All skippers have been warned to keep away from the area.

TROUT PLANTINGS declined again last week, with the Department of Fish and Game taking Deep Cat Lake (Ventura County) and Little Rock Creek (Los Angeles) off the list because of unsuitable water conditions.

Streams and lakes stocked were the following: Crystal Lake and the East and West Forks of the San Gabriel River (Los Angeles); Lake Arrowhead, Green Valley and Gregory; creeks, Deep, Hook, Little Bear, both forks of Lytle, Mill, Mountain Home Creek and South and Main Forks of the Santa Ana River (San Bernardino); Matilija Reservoir and Santa Paula Creek (Ventura).

COASTAL DEER season ends today and the inland period begins next Saturday. The inland season will continue through Oct. 30, except in Inyo and Mono Counties where it closes Oct. 23. Wardens report that deer are plentiful in the higher country and this year should see a record kill. The hunters will have to work hard for their game, however, unless a storm sends the animals to lower elevations.

Some hunters feel that the coastal deer season, with the total kill down 25 per cent from last year's figures, has been a flop because of the heat and fire conditions. They have been pushing, as usual, for a winter season, but there's no indication that any of Sacramento's brass will order such a special shoot.

So, if you want meat, you'd better take off for the inland season.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — Jasper Nutter, one of those I-am-a-camera boys about town, took his family northward to Klamath for a vacation and came home with a beaming smile. He took three limits of steelhead on Terwar Riffle, between the Highway 101 bridge and Klamath Glen. His fish ranged from 3 to 5 pounds. Jasper saw one 9-pounder caught on the same riffle.

Merle Stockton, co-operator of Seal Beach's sportfishing pier, has left on an antelope-hunting trip to Wyoming. Bet we hear of other ocean-fishing operators leaving for vacations soon; they have earned a rest.

Sherwood Bailey and family of the Long Beach Outboard Boating Club tried the Upper Trinity country this year, camping at Del Loma, a resort inland from Eureka, where Sherwood got a 16-pound salmon. They reported a wonderful trip, but it was HOT! And they got back here just in time for the finish of our own heat wave.

If you are interested in Dumbo, the 42-foot cruiser that eight Long Beach men built from an old LSVP, you may read about it in the September issue of Motorboating. Your columnist is the author. Dumbo now rides the waves at Mead Lake and its owners are getting ready for some fall, winter and spring fishing excursions aboard her.

THE CENTURY is what Denison-Johnson Corp. calls its new-type spinning reel, which can be used by righthanders or southpaws, and on spinning, plug and fly rods—and for salt or fresh water.

That's quite a claim, but Joe Brooks, widely known light-tackle angler, tried it and said that he clobbered a bulls-eye at 100 paces.

In the Century, Johnson has changed the line opening to the front instead of the side as in other models and has added a electo-drag, which takes all the guesswork out of that operation. The drag can be set from 0 to 6 and the braking is smooth at all tensions. The reel holds 125 yards of 6-pound test monofilament and extra spools with smaller-test line are available.

'MEET LOCALS' BACK MONDAY

The Independent's oustanding local sports feature—Meet Your Local Athletes—will be resumed Monday morning and as in the past will appear several times weekly.

The feature has included pictures and short biographical sketches on some 1,000 local school athletes annually for the past several years.

Athletes from Poly, Wilson, Jordan and St. Anthony's High Schools, Long Beach City College and Long Beach State College will appear during the next nine months in football, basketball, swimming, track, gymnastics, golf and tennis.

United Speedboat Assc., headed by Commdr. Dick Job, will conduct the Marine Stadium meet.

A likely eight or more of the top-rated east-south-midwest inboard drivers, plus "everybody west," are to be expected Oct. 21-24 in the national desert regatta on Salton Sea, it was reported at Southern California Speedboat Club Saturday night at South Gate.

TI Navy Takes on Compton Saturday

The Terminal Island Islanders, 1954 champions of the 11th Naval District League, move into their final week of practice sessions Monday before opening their season Saturday night against Compton College at Ramsaur Stadium.

Coach Frank Kirkland of the Islanders is working with a 57-man squad. Four returnees from last year's titleholders are currently holding down first team berths.

Back from last year's team, which had a 7-3 record, are ends Homer Bledsoe and George Hitchens, guard James Grace and quarterback Jim Bivens.

Bivens, 23-year-old W. Va. athlete, has six years of service football experience and has played for several area champions. He is a righthanded passer and had a high accuracy rating last year. Teaming with Bivens in the starting backfield in the opening game will be halfbacks James Fennell and Bill Richardson and fullback Wayne Boyd.

Slated to open in the line are ends Bledsoe and Hitchens, tackles James Wright and Wendell Scott, guards James Barth and Crace and center James Baker. The line averages 195 pounds with Scott topping the list at 225.

Kirkland's assistants include line coach Russ Faulkinberry of Vanderbilt, Veryl Lillywhite of SC, Pat Patterson of LSU and Sam White of LSU.

The mighty midgets open Huntington Beach's 1955 daylight auto racing season today at 2:30 with a 30-lap main headlining the eight-event card. Trials begin at 1 p. m. on the Legion Stadium clay.

Burbank's Billy Garrett is currently leading the field in point standings. Garrett, only 22, has monopolized the midgets for the past three years.

Area entries are Don Cameron, South Gate; Ed Edmen, Anaheim, and Termite Jones and Jim Hayes from Long Beach.

An intermission race between 5-14 year-olds of the Quarter-Midget Racing Association will highlight the added attractions, according to promoters Bill Cantrell and Norm Hall.

The First Major Contribution to your Driving Safety

Ford Lifeguard Design

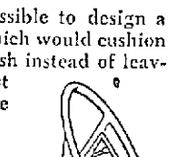

For more than two years, Ford engineers, in cooperation with universities, medical associations and safety experts, have been working to determine the principal causes of accident injuries. They established that most serious injuries occur in three major areas.

These are: when the driver is thrown against the steering column; when passengers are thrown forward against hard surfaces inside the car; or when they are thrown completely out of the car.

With this vital information in hand, the challenge was to find really effective safeguards to reduce these hazards.

Dr. R. Arnold Griswold, Chairman of the Committee on Trauma, American College of Surgeons, has asked:

"Why isn't it possible to design a steering wheel which would cushion the effect of a crash instead of leaving only a post which damages the driver's chest?"

Ford's answer to the problem is this new Lifeguard steering wheel, mounted on a shorter steering post, and with three uniformly spaced spokes connecting the rim to the hub.

The deep-center construction acts as a cushion under impact . . . to decelerate the driver and give him extra protection against striking the steering column.

But how about the other crash danger factors? How about those hard interior surfaces which have practically no "give."

Here's what Dr. Frank H. Mayfield of the Sub-committee on Traffic Injury Prevention, of the Committee on Trauma, American College of Surgeons, has to say:

"... If there were some practical way to cover the instrument panel with adequate energy-absorbing material, there is not the slightest doubt that head injuries would be lessened or, in many cases prevented."

Ford engineers not only found a practical way to pad the panel, but, after hundreds of tests, selected a special expanded plastic material that is unique in its ability to absorb shock. It is so effective that an egg dropped from a roof top onto a one-inch thick pad of this material did not break.

This new Ford Lifeguard padding is available, as an option, for the control panel and sun visors of all 1956 Ford models.

Now, what about the dangers outside —when doors spring open under impact and occupants are thrown from the car? Tabulations of over 1000 accident reports at Cornell University Medical College show that 20.1% of accident injuries are caused this way. Further, the chance of injury is twice as great if a person is thrown from the car.

Mr. John O. Moore, Director, Crash Injury Research at Cornell Medical College, makes clear what he thinks:

"We have found that passenger ejection from open doors more than doubles chances of serious injury. For double protection against being thrown from a car, safety door locks, in addition to safety belts, are a most significant step forward in passenger protection."

Let's take the door latches first. It is possible for conventional, single-grip door latches, strong as they are, to disengage when the door and doorpost are temporarily spread apart by a severe jolt. The illustration of hands, above, demonstrates conventional "single" grip. Ford's new Lifeguard double-grip door latch, standard in all '56 Fords, works something like the hand clasp shown here. The "fingers" engage and overlap for a double grip. This gives added protection against doors springing open under impact—to help keep you safer within the car.

As for seat belts, most authorities agree that seat belts, properly made, properly installed and conscientiously worn, could substantially reduce the annual highway death toll!

That's why Ford engineers set out to develop the most effective seat belts ever offered in a car. To keep you from being thrown from your seat in a sudden stop, Ford seat belts are one-third stronger than those required by CAA for commercial aircraft and they're anchored to a double-reinforced area of the floor structure. They're available for both front and back seats on all '56 Fords at modest extra cost.

Lifeguard design is not the only thing new in the '56 Ford.

You'll be delighted with the entire new Ford trend for '56. It's Thunderbird through and through. For not only does the new '56 Ford offer Thunderbird styling . . . but Thunderbird power, too!

Of course, we're anxious to have you see the new 1956 Ford . . . and to Test Drive it, too. So, won't you please accept our cordial invitation to visit your Ford Dealer on Friday, September 23rd? Make your plans . . . today!

See and drive the '56 FORD Friday, September 23rd

Defense Official Cites Arms Gain Under Ike Rule

ROANOKE, Va. (U.P.)—A Defense Department official said Saturday night that America's military strength has grown "immensely" under the Eisenhower administration while military manpower and spending have been slashed.

Assistant Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess said the nation has built a "flexible but steel-sinewed" defense which puts maximum emphasis on technology and minimizes numbers of men.

He spoke at a time when military men are restive over the possibility of further defense cuts although administration officials have asserted that no major changes are in prospect.

UAW Reaches Agreement With Int. Harvester

CHICAGO (U.P.) — United Auto Workers and International Harvester Co. reached agreement Saturday on a new three-year contract providing for a guaranteed annual wage and a 10-cent hourly wage boost to end a 26-day strike against the farm equipment firm.

The contract, covering 40,000 workers at 18 Harvester plants in six states, also provided for additional increases of 5 to 10 cents an hour for employes in the five top labor grades, a full union shop and a cost-of-living adjustment.

It also assured employes against a reduction in piecework rates.

The contract is subject to membership ratification and approval is expected.

Test Scrambled Video; Opponent Dubs It Flop

CINCINNATI (U.P.)—Three pay-as-you-see television systems were demonstrated Saturday on a free television program, and an opponent of the plan promptly dubbed them "the three most colossal engineering blunders ever conceived in the electronic laboratories of America."

Zenith Corp., Skiatron Electronics and Television, and International Telemeter Corp. showed their methods of scrambling and receiving TV signals.

MILTON SHAPP, president of Jerrold Electronics Corp. of Philadelphia, who want television by wire rather than decoding devices, said:

"I can state emphatically that none of the proposed systems for scrambled broadcasting are practical for bringing the great box-office events into your home."

Representatives of the three concerns hotly disputed Shapp's statements.

IF THE WIRE system is cheaper, then the whole concept of broadcasting is a blunder, and the nation should have radio by wire instead of wireless sets, said Ted Lietzell of Zenith.

A Jerrold representative said the series of WCPO panels over a three-day period marked the first time the Philadelphia firm has been permitted on the same public platform with representatives of the pay-as-you-see systems.

No Guns for U.S. MPs in Britain

LONDON (U.P.) — U. S. Army traffic police in Britain have been ordered to leave their guns behind when they go on duty.

The command was issued by U. S. Army headquarters here after motorists in Norfolk complained they had been held at rifle point by an American soldier while an Army convoy passed.

In announcing the new rule, American officials said U. S. troops had "strict instructions not to point a rifle or any other weapon at civilians."

Dancing Ruby Settles in Balboa

By BOB THOMAS

BALBOA ISLAND (AP)—The famous legs of Ruby Keeler today get more exercise on the golf course than on a dance floor.

Miss Keeler, who tapped her way from Broadway hits to stardom in early talkie musicals, is content to be a housewife and mother, with an occasional fling at show business.

The dancer is now Mrs. John Lowe, mother of four grammar school-age children. Since the youngest just entered school, she has more time to devote to her longtime hobby, golf. She's an 8-handicap player at nearby Irvine Coast Golf Club.

"WE USED TO LIVE in Van Nuys," said said, "and we had a summer house here on Balboa Bay. This year we decided to stay here all the time. It's a rather small house, but it will do until we find a bigger one.

"I play golf and swim. Sure, I'm in a rut, but it's a good rut. And the recreation is wonderful for the children."

Miss Keeler manages to escape her so-called rut in this sunny resort community for an occasional appearance on TV.

* * * *

SHE SAID that she doesn't keep up her tap practice. "I always think maybe I'll get started, but I never do."

Her active life here, though, keeps her in good trim. Tanned, slim and attractive, she looks much less than her 45 years.

Born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Miss Keller became famed as a star for Florenz Ziegfeld. She married Al Jolson in 1928 and retired as a performer. She returned to her greatest success as co-star with Dick Powell in Warner Bros. musicals. She dropped out of the movies in the late '30s.

After divorcing Jolson, she married John Lowe, who handles investments. Their children are Teresa, 11, Christine, 10, Johnny, 9, and Kathleen, 7.

Daylight Saving Time Adding Grief to TV and Trains

NEW YORK (AP)—One of old Ben Franklin's ideas is winning new popularity with a lot of folks—and causing extra grief for a lot of others.

It's daylight saving time.

Several states and some of the big cities have decided they want even more of it than before. In general, they've continued it from the last Sunday in September to the last Sunday in October.

Now there are growing howls of anguish from some quarters where the hour hand of the clock is king, notably railroads and television networks.

"It's causing us one helluva lot of trouble," moaned harassed TV officials.

"What a headache!" wailed a railroad industry spokesman.

At first glance it wouldn't seem that such a relatively small change in the existing situation would make much difference.

Not so, though, for the television networks, railroads and possibly a few other industries.

* * * *

SOURCES in the two major fields say the daylight saving extension, even though in a proportionately small geographic section, is creating a hodgepodge time situation with endless difficulties and confusion for them.

The trouble appears to stem from the fact that a very small dog will be wagging a gigantic tail.

In this case, the little dog is the northeastern section where the added daylight has found most of its favor. The rest of the country is the tail.

Last fall, most of New England extended the daylight time period.

This year that area will be joined by New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Vermont, along with a number of Pennsylvania cities including Philadelphia and several cities in Illinois including Chicago. Numerous Ohio cities are following suit.

This puts about 40 million people, or about one-fourth of the nation's population, in the extra daylight area.

* * * *

NORMALLY there is a three-hour time spread between the east and west coasts. This remains the case in daylight saving months as far as New York and California are concerned, because both set their clocks forward an hour.

This year for the first time, though, New York sticks with the fast time until Oct. 30, while California quits Sept. 24. During the period between those dates the two coasts will be four hours apart.

Thus it is plain to see what is causing TV network officials to lose their sunny disposition.

Programs timed for the largest audiences on the east coast at night will hit the western seaboard while folks are still out in the yard relaxing from work.

And west coast programs at the best hours there will find New Yorkers catching their 40 winks.

* * * *

AS FOR RAILROADS, there is just enough of a checkerboard pattern on the forthcoming time situation to make things tough.

Railroads usually run on standard time, but generally their operations are geared to peak requirements in areas served. Local time is a big factor in this.

Many railroads also publish their time tables with local times, which will mean two publishing jobs this fall instead of one. Too, there is the matter of train connections between daylight and non-daylight areas.

"We're in a quandary," said the railroad spokesman, who declined use of his name. "It's an unusual kind of a headache for us because it's the first time this sort of thing has come up. It's creating great confusion."

CAPITAL CAPERS

By WALTER T. RIDDER AND ROBERT E. LEE
(of the Independent-Press-Telegram Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—GOP National Committee chairman, G. Leonard Hall, is credited with creating the latest wise-crack to circulate around Washington. Speaking of Democratic attacks on President Eisenhower, Hall quipped: "That's the first time I ever heard of people hitting a man when he's up."

Speaking of Hall, the affable former judge and congressman is keeping a wary eye on the GOP's latest slogan: "Everything's booming but the guns." He thinks it's pretty good if it remains true, but admits the possibility that it could backfire thunderously.

That the presidential hopes of Gov. Averell Harriman of New York are rising and being taken more seriously can be measured by the fact that anecdotes about him are increasing. Harriman is admittedly not the easiest person to get to know. At a recent Washington cocktail party, one lady was divesting herself of some forthright opinions, none of them favorable, about the New York governor. "What have you got against Harriman?", plaintively asked her husband. "Obviously," said a bystander, "she knows him."

There's a lot of sound and fury around labor union headquarters here that doesn't have anything to do with the guaranteed annual wage or other industrial matters. The boys are arguing about the authorship of an innocent-sounding three-word phrase.

John L. Lewis started it all by criticizing the forthcoming AFL-CIO merger as a "rope of sand." The AFL promptly took out after the miners' chief, accusing him of having cribbed the phrase from a blast at the American labor movement leveled by Lenin more than 30 years ago.

Lewis' staff then recalled that one chapter of the autobiography of Sam Gompers, first president of the AFL, is entitled "Rope of Sand" and describes how nothing stronger is needed to maintain American workers' voluntary organization.

The mine union people went even farther and helped reporters trace origin of the phrase all the way back to Thucydides, B. C. Greek historian.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. was paying recent testimony to the wisdom of John Marshall, fourth and most renowned of our chief justices. "In Marshall's day," Brownell recounted, "the judges of the Supreme Court dined together. It was their custom to have wine only when it was raining. Occasionally on a sunshiny day, he would say: 'Brother Story (one of his colleagues), will you step up to the window and see if there are signs of rain?' Reluctantly Story would be obliged to report there was none. Thereupon the Chief Justice would reply cheerfully: "Well, this is a very large territory over which we have jurisdiction and I feel sure it is raining in some part of it.'".

Demand for Homes Keeps Pace With Construction

All signs indicate that our home production is traveling a well charted course — a course meeting demand, but without over-building.

This is the view of E. T. Moore, president of the Long Beach Board of Realtors.

Moore declared that a series of current government reports demonstrate that home construction is closely geared in practice to the nation's housing needs. He cited these items:

1. Home production is now at the annual, seasonally-adjusted rate of 1.2 million home units a year, a slight drop from the seasonally-adjusted rate the month before of 1.3 million units.

2. During the past five years, the annual increase in the numbers of non-farm households averaged about 1 million a year, according to a recent Census Bureau sample survey.

3. Removal of housing from our inventory, through demolition, condemnation, or other withdrawal, is estimated to be at the rate of 250,000 to 300,000 units yearly, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

"These figures," the board president said, "demonstrate that production is roughly meeting the year-by-year demand. In other words, the annual production of 1.2 million approximates the sum of family formations (1 million) and the removal from the inventory of 250,000 units annually.

* * * *

"BUT THESE figures don't tell the whole story. In addition, there is still left over some of the immediate post-war demand for housing. This must be supplied in addition to the year-by-year needs.

"And the evidence is that there is the desire, as well as the need, for good housing. A current survey of the Federal Reserve System reports that in early 1955, the proportion of those planning to buy homes within two years was larger than the proportion in three earlier annual surveys.

"Moreover, reports of personal income indicates individuals are in position to make good their plans. Government reports show that personal income is running over $300 billion annually.

* * * *

"IMPORTANT IN THE housing supply and demand estimates has been the figure of withdrawals from 'housekeeping' of the unfit, or condemned, units. The estimate of 250,000 to 300,000 units is well above the previous estimate of 40,000 to 50,000. Certainly, a good part of the stepped up demolition of unit dwellings has resulted from the Build America Better program of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"This program is designed to spark neighborhood conservation in our cities by eliminating dilapidated homes, improving others, and encouraging community planning to prevent slum recurrence.

"Realtors—members of the national association — have been active in leading this work in many communities."

No, it isn't ridiculous!

Never before, and possibly never again will we be able to make this startling statement! Understandably then, when residences in the third and final unit are gone, there will be no more at the low, low price of from only $11,595.

FIRESIDE HOME

Robertson Opening Two New Fullerton Tracts

Adding luster to the continued observance of National Home Week this week-end in Fullerton will be the grand opening of the final units in two new home communities developed by W. E. Robertson Co.

Openings will take place at Fireside Homes, located on Chapman Ave., just east of Raymond Ave., and at Orangewood Estates, on the south side of W. Orangethorpe Ave., just east of Brookhurst Rd., where more Sterling Series homes will become available.

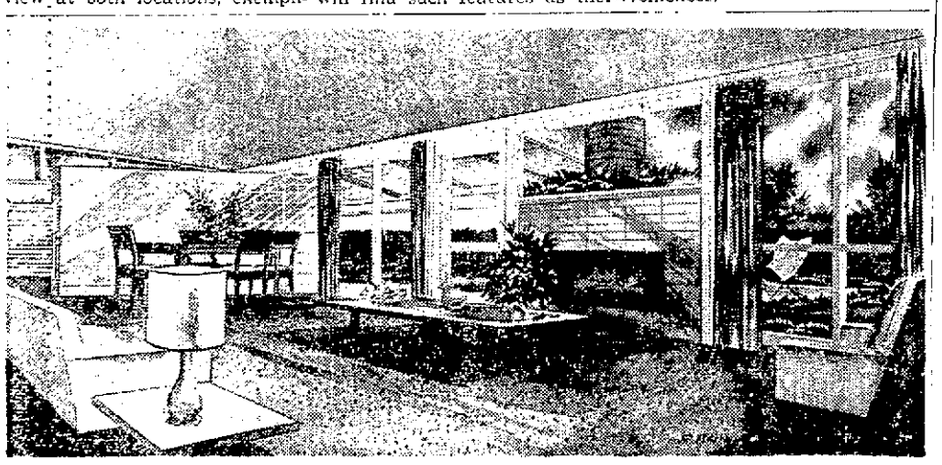

Attractive model homes, all completely furnished, will be on view at both locations, exemplifying 70 new three and four-bedroom, two-bath residences designed by Architect Max Maltzman. All have color schemes by Margaret Hargrove.

Pleasant surprise offered veterans at both developments, the spokesman promised, are terms which still feature no down payment, except for nominal costs and impounds. Monthly payments at Orangewood Estates for vets are from $73.65 and, at Fireside Homes, from $74.68, it was noted.

Homes are priced at Orangewood from $14,300 to $15,540 and at Fireside from $14,660 to $16,125.

"In both developments, buyers will find such features as thermostat-controlled forced air heating, large wood-burning fireplaces of slumpstone or brick, rugged built-in barbecues in paved patios, sliding glass doors joining indoor and outdoor living areas, built-in breakfast bars with concealed storage space, built-in ranges and eye level ovens and many other outstanding quality features," the spokesman said.

Earlier buyers, he reported, have shown great interest in the two units, largely because of their choice locations, off the Santa Ana Freeway, in the fully established city of Fullerton with its wealth of pleasant living conveniences.

ABUNDANCE OF ROOM
The spaciousness and airiness of the homes at Jupiter House and Gardens in Garden Grove is pictured in this architect's rendering. Complete landscaping, as well as custom details inside the house are included with the four-bedroom, two-bath homes.

Jupiter House-Gardens Homes Stress Outdoor-Indoor Living

Outdoor living, an important part of the Southern California scheme of things, is exemplified at Jupiter House and Gardens in Garden Grove. Cognizant of this, Tobin Companies, builders of the homes, have included a complete "outdoor-indoor" package for prospective buyers.

The outdoor living features include seeded and fertilized level lots, seasonal flowers, shrubbery, 6-foot high redwood fences and an all-inclusive sprinkler system for the front and back lawns. A patio in the back lawn, complete with overhead trellis and planter, adds to the charm and livability of the Tobin homes.

The outdoor feeling is carried inside the house where gable end windows set above huge picture windows admit an abundance of light and sunshine to give spaciousness and airiness within the house.

The homes are priced at $12,700 to $12,900 for 4-bedrooms 2 baths and a 2-car garage. A partial wall divider between the living room and the kitchen makes it possible to look outside through the gable end windows in the kitchen while sitting in the living room.

Custom details and features for convenient and comfortable family living are found inside. Families with children will welcome the fact that there are two separate eating areas, one in the spacious kitchen and one in the living-dining area.

There is ample closet space, too, as each bedroom boasts a huge wardrobe with sliding doors. A natural brick fireplace, with a window over it, adds warmth and charm to the living room.

The kitchen is equipped with softly colored steel cabinets and the top cabinets have sliding frosted glass doors. Other advantages in the kitchen are a dishmaster, garbage disposal and vent fans.

The homes are designed with a central floor plan. Children can walk from the kitchen to their bedrooms without going through the living room.

Another important advantage of Jupiter House and Gardens is its proximity to schools and shopping centers.

Jupiter House and Gardens, located off the Santa Ana Freeway, can be reached via the freeway, turning south on Stanton to Highway 39. Follow signs, 3 miles south of the freeway, turning east on Katella to the homes.

Retail Sales on Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—Shoppers, lured by stepped-up promotions of fall and winter merchandise, increased their spending in the nation's retail stores last week, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

Total spending ranged from 5 to 9 per cent higher than in the comparable week of 1954, Dun & Bradstreet said. Merchants reported a noticeable gain in sales of men's fall clothing; women increased their purchases of sweaters, blouses and skirts.

Sales of home furnishings mounted, with the more popular items including modern bedroom furniture and dining room sets, blankets, linens, draperies and carpeting. There was an upsurge in buying of "do-it-yourself" paints and hardware.

All major areas reported gains for the week ended Sept. 14. Percentage increases from the like year-ago week were as follows: New England up 6 to 10, east and southwest up 7 to 11, south and Pacific Coast unchanged to up 4, midwest up 5 to 9 and northwest up 3 to 7.

Sun Estates Still $40 Down for Vets

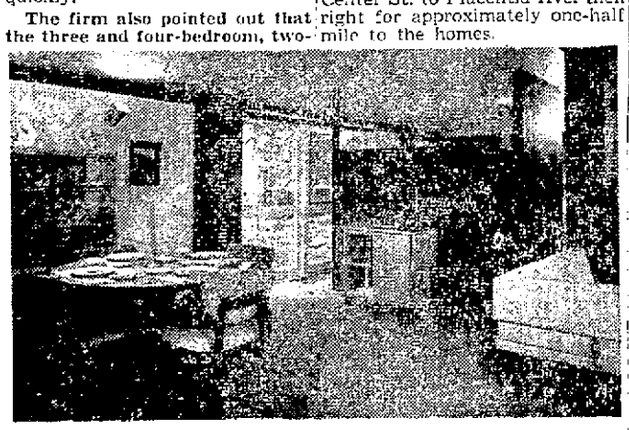

The new regulations governing veteran financing will alter the $40 down payment to vets now in effect at Sun Estates in Anaheim, it was announced by a spokesman for sales agents Walker and Lee.

Due to the restrictions, the $40 down which covers all costs and impounds, will be revoked in a few weeks it was stated, in urging prospective buyers to act quickly.

The firm also pointed out that the three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes are available for immediate occupancy.

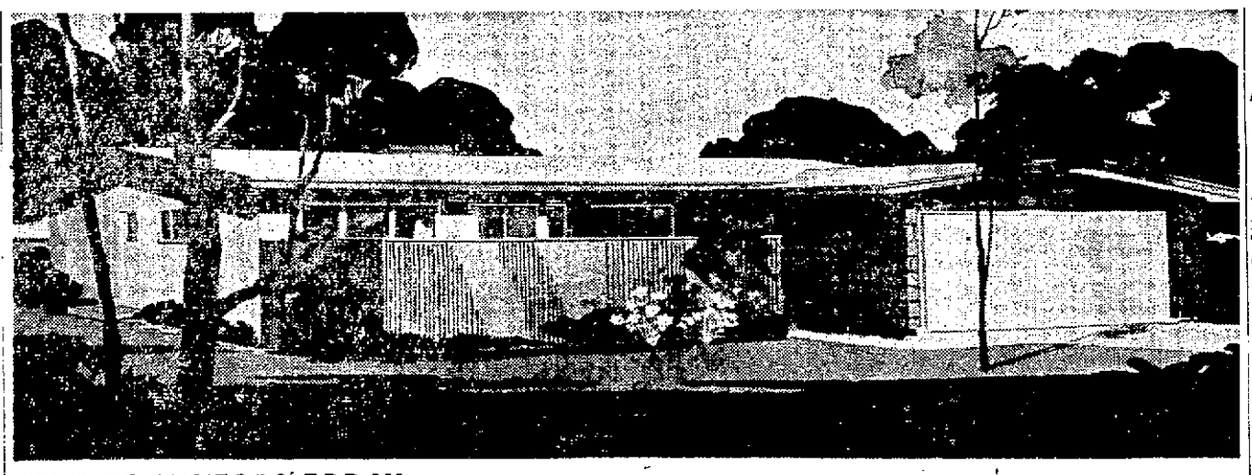

Fireplace, forced air heat, natural finish kitchen cabinets, interior planters, breakfast bar, and draperies with drapery hardware throughout for the full floor-to-ceiling windows were among the features cited by the sales agents.

To see the contemporary ranch style homes, visitors from Long Beach may drive out Lincoln Blvd. (Carson) to Center St. in Anaheim. Through Anaheim on Center St. to Placentia Ave. then right for approximately one-half mile to the homes.

IN SUN ESTATES

Spacious living and dining areas are among the features of the three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes at Sun Estates in Anaheim. It was announced that the $40 down payment to vets would be altered within a few weeks due to the new veteran financing regulations.

OPEN TO VISITORS TODAY

Cameo Park, new Santa Ana fine-home center, will be open for inspection today for the first time. This is one of the contemporary homes offered, which were designed by Architect Hugh Gibbs of Long Beach and developed and built by J. W. Lenney. Five exhibition homes were furnished by W. & J. Sloane of Beverly Hills. The homes adjoin the freeway at Marbury and Fruit Sts., at the eastern border of Santa Ana.

Much Appeal in La Mar Terrace

Opening of La Mar Terrace last Sunday resulted in great buyer enthusiasm, reports the sales agency. Especially strong was the enthusiasm shown for the kitchens.

The visitors saw for the first time the complete all-electric kitchens installed by Frigidaire, which features stove burner units which actually disappear into the wall when not in use.

Kitchen planning was by Pamela Masters and the design was made to save 510 steps per meal for the housewife.

Other distinctive features include 20 by 20 foot living room, ceiling to floor brick fireplace, large mirror-wardrobe-drawer built-ins in bedroom.

Over 1,300 square feet in each La Mar Terrace has 3 and 4-bedroom homes available in 29 different designs.

Vets may buy with no money down.

From Long Beach La Mar Terrace homes may be reached by driving east on Carson (Lincoln Blvd.) to Gilbert Ave. Turn north three-fourths of a mile.

From Los Angeles the homes are reached by driving the Santa Ana Freeway. Turn right on La Palma, then a block west to La Mar Terrace.

Delhi Gardens Kitchens Prove Big Selling Point

"Convenience-zoned" kitchens by Mary Olsten and massive, floor-to-ceiling fireplaces of Texas sandstone are two major drawing-cards at Delhi Gardens in suburban Santa Ana.

Visitors and prospective home buyers in record numbers visited the new home community during the past week, it was reported by Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents.

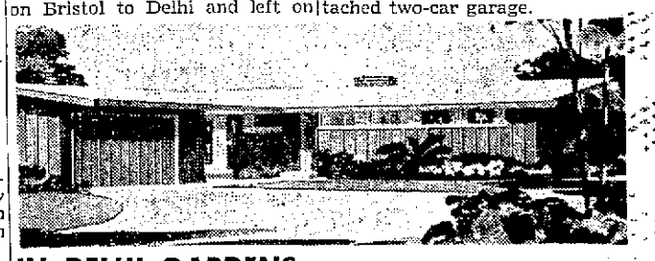

It is within half an hour drive from both Los Angeles and Long Beach via the Santa Ana Freeway or Garden Grove Blvd. From Long Beach take Seventh St. (which becomes Garden Grove) to Bristol St. in Santa Ana, south on Bristol to Delhi and left on Delhi to the furnished model homes.

Three national awards of merit have been presented to the builders for the outstanding efficient arrangement of work areas in the kitchen with its many step and labor-saving devices.

Crammed with luxury features, the California Contemporary homes are in 4 bedrooms or 3 bedrooms and a den.

Prices start at $12,999 and veterans still may buy for nothing down except closing costs and impounds, Chandler said.

All homes have 2 baths and a choice of either attached or detached two-car garage.

IN DELHI GARDENS

"Convenience-zoned" kitchen and a huge floor-to-ceiling fireplace are features of the Palau model (above) at Delhi Gardens in suburban Santa Ana.

$10,750 Full Price of Big Hazelwood Home

Four-bedroom, 2-bath homes for a total price of $10,750 are selling rapidly at the Hazelwood Freedom Homes development just east of Long Beach on Garden Grove Blvd., (7th St.)

Ivan P. Andes & Associates, the sales agency, also revealed that veterans may buy the homes for nothing down except closing costs and monthly terms are $54.94 per month, principal and interest.

The homes, containing 1510 square feet under the roof, have 4 bedrooms, colored American Standard plumbing fixtures, 2 bathrooms, tile stall shower, big outside storage room, electric heater in bath, Youngstown Steel kitchen cabinets, flush slab doors, gas furnace, Rockwool insulation, steel window sash and there is a large carport.

Quality hardware is used throughout and an abundance of cabinets has been provided. A large attractive carport blends into the designing of the home.

Wood burning fireplaces are available in some models.

"When the developer launched Hazelwood Freedom Homes and said he would sell 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes for under $11,000 everyone said it couldn't be done," declared Andes.

Floor Affects Room Comfort

The extended heat wave which has roasted Southern California focuses attention on insulation values in home construction. One of the most important structural members affecting room comfort is the floor, according to the Hardwood Flooring Council of Southern California.

The Council points out that the floor is the only surface of the room that people come in direct contact with in the ordinary course of home activities. Hardwood flooring is resistant to the passage of heat and moisture. It gives protection against floor drafts and dampness and does not become excessively hot or cold, regardless of the temperature of the room, the Council declared.

Ruby Eveland, Broker, Has Had Varied Life

A woman who gave up school teaching for family life, then after becoming a mother five times, served in the Coast Guard Reserve during the war, is the Realtor of the Week honored by the Long Beach Board.

"My life is rather uninteresting," said the petite broker, Ruby Eveland, as she was approached for an interview.

"You see I was born and educated near Waterloo, Iowa. After graduation I taught a short time in country school and then married Emery Eveland.

"We moved to Long Beach from Denver years ago and reside at 1701 E. Ocean. We have five children, two married daughters and three sons, Ed, who teaches at Wilson High, Bill in construction work and Robert who sails for the Pacific Far East Lines. Oh, yes, we have 15 grandchildren."

Ruby served during World War II in the Coast Guard Reserves and has been a real estate broker 14 years.

She is president of the Women In Real Estate club and is a member of the White Shrine and Eastern Star. Her office is at 21 39th Pl., where Irene Anderson is an associate.

Build your home on a SOUND FOUNDATION with BAXCO PRESSURE TREATED LUMBER!

Safeguard these foundation "WEAK SPOTS" against
TERMITES-WOOD-ROT-EARTHQUAKE DAMAGE

WHY PRESSURE TREATING?
Only pressure treating, which drives and deposits the chemical preservatives deep into the wood cells, results in maximum protection. Over 100 years experience in pressure treating railroad ties, telegraph poles, bridge timbers and dock piling has proven its effectiveness. Building Codes stipulate "pressure treating" for approvals.

Every year thousands of home owners are faced with huge, sudden repair bills, caused by termites or decay. Working unseen these wood destroyers often go undetected for years . . . then damage repairs can run into hundreds of dollars.

BE SAFE—and insist on Baxco Pressure Treated "Chemically Preserved" Foundation Lumber up to and including the first floor joists—it will add less than one half of 1% to your total building cost.

BE SURE—if your home is built on a concrete slab, laid on the ground, that all sills are pressure treated—it will save you money in the long run.

This is the first showing of this select group of only 20 executive homes, Coleman said, stressing that buyers should see the homes this week-end for the best choice of floor-plan, color scheme and model.

Priced from $15,885 to $15,975, they bring the buyer a choice of provincial styling with heavy cedar shake roofs or contemporary design with sturdy rock roofs. All of the large homes have massive fireplaces, louvered wardrobe doors, large pullman baths, service porch and all homes feature a convenient circulating floor plan.

Built by Dale Properties, Inc., President Paul Bonzer stressed that the Princess Estates' kitchens, were designed for the "Princess of Today," with built-in range and oven in color, beautiful cabinet work, ceramic tile, large breakfast area and hood over range. Other quality features include hardwood floors, large sliding glass doors and musical inter-com with radio and four speaker outlets to various parts of the house.

Visitors from Long Beach may drive out Lincoln or Garden Grove Blvd. to Stanton (Hiway 39). The homes are located just off Ball Road, east of Stanton Blvd. on Dale Ave.

PRICED FROM $12,025

Orangewood Manor offers homes such as this to veterans for no cash down and non-vets may buy for $750 down. They are priced from $12,025.

Orangewood Manor Homes Offering Vets Low Terms

"Veterans will be able to buy Orangewood Manor homes in Garden Grove with no cash payment for a limited time," stated Thomas Helt, spokesman for the McCarthy Co., builder of the 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes.

Payments will be as low as $61.94 monthly, priced from $12,025, Helt said, and urged that veterans who qualify should make their selections as soon as possible. Non-veterans may move in for as little as $750 down.

Custom features that have been lauded by home buyers are the Columbia steel kitchens with built-in Roper gas ranges in pastel colors and the spacious living rooms with Ski-Vue aluminum frame sliding glass walls and real fireplaces.

"To meet Southern California's demand for indoor-outdoor living," Helt said, "Orangewood Manor homes also have big patios with built-in barbecues."

Some of the other custom features listed by Helt are: bathrooms with Zolatone walls and asphalt tile floors, Thermador electric fans, stall showers and American Standard colored plumbing fixtures, forced air heating, Pioneer 50-gallon water heaters, resilient cork tile flooring, walls of genuine lath and plaster, rockwool insulation, weatherstripping on exterior doors, heavy rock roofs in five decorator colors and exteriors of California redwood siding.

From Long Beach, drive out 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and south on Magnolia. From Los Angeles, take the Santa Ana Freeway, turn south on Magnolia and continue four miles to Orangewood.

Cliff May Homes on Two Sites

The award winning Cliff May homes are available to buyers at two choice locations with terms of nothing down except impounds to veterans.

In Tustin and Anaheim, the 3 and four-bedroom, two bath homes are priced from $13,800 to $16,500.

Situated on estate-size lots, the Tustin homes are in a secluded suburban area, without through streets yet near schools and shopping center.

At the Anaheim location, the contemporary ranch style homes are off the Freeway with community centers and shopping just minutes away. Only a few of these homes remain to be sold, it was stated.

The award winning indoor-outdoor living design of nationally famed Cliff May is a feature of all the homes. Also included in the homes are fireplace, forced air heat, built-in range and oven, disposal, and natural finish kitchen cabinets. Buyers at the Anaheim site receive free draperies with drapery hardware for the full floor-to-ceiling windows.

To see the Tustin homes, drive out Westminster Blvd. (17th St.) through Santa Ana to Main St. Turn right on Main St. to First St. and then turn left on First St. and drive through Tustin on Highway 101 to Redhill Ave. (first street past Tustin High School) then left to the homes.

The Tustin location is very near the Coast and is less than 60 minutes from downtown Long Beach.

The Anaheim homes may be reached by driving out Lincoln (Carson) to Euclid Ave. Turn right on Euclid Ave. to Ball Rd. then left on Ball Rd. to the homes.

Feather River Project Favored

SAN DIEGO (UP)—The San Diego County Water authority has given preliminary approval to a resolution urging development of the Feather River project as a means of bringing water to Southern California.

Directors said in their resolution that the need for water is increasing at so great a rate that no delay can be supported.

Custom-Type Homes in Braeburn Forest

National Home Week visitors' response to the grand opening of Braeburn Forest, new custom-styled community of 125 landscaped 3- and 4-bedroom, 2-bath dwellings in the close-in Anaheim area, has resulted in a 30 per cent sellout of the property, it was reported at the George D. Buccola development.

Preparations have been made to welcome additional thousands of viewers this weekend, during the close of National Home Week, to the attractive model homes, furnished and decorated by Elsie Feindell.

"Home Week visitors responded with enthusiasm to the beauty and luxuriousness of Braeburn Forest," a spokesman reported. "Especially popular with buyers is the convenient Anaheim location, just north of the Santa Ana Freeway at the Magnolia Ave. turnoff on Houston St."

Fashioned upon spacious sites, with attractive orange trees and developed lawns, the Braeburn Forest homes are available on equally attractive terms, it was noted, because financing arranged well in advance of recent government credit restrictions enable vets to buy on terms of nothing down but costs and impounds, with low monthly payments. Non-vets are offered FHA terms.

"Individuality is the word for homes in Braeburn Forest," an official explained. "From exterior design, floor plan and color scheme, to structural detail and placement on the site, these homes are custom-quality in planning and execution."

He particularly noted the large number of built-in conveniences, such as dressing tables in baths, oversize stall showers with glass doors, writing desks, range hoods with fans, garbage disposers and breakfast room off the kitchen.

The homes boast shake roofs, big master bedrooms with large double-door closets, brick fireplaces with log lighters, picture windows with walls of glass, flush birch kitchen cabinets, oversize two-car garages, forced-air unit heat with summer cooling fan and exterior brick planters.

BUILT TO PLEASE

Shown above is one of 20 different architectural stylings offered at Braeburn Forest, new Anaheim community of landscaped three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes on Houston St., just off Santa Ana Freeway at Magnolia Ave.

DRAWING BUYERS

Chapman-Magnolia Park Setting Record in Sales

Record-breaking sales were reported again last week at Chapman-Magnolia Park in nearby Garden Grove, a spokesman for Ajax Construction Co., said.

Furnished models of the California Contemporary and modern 4-bedroom, 3-bedroom-and-a-den and 3-bedroom homes with 1, 2 or 3 baths are open for inspection daily.

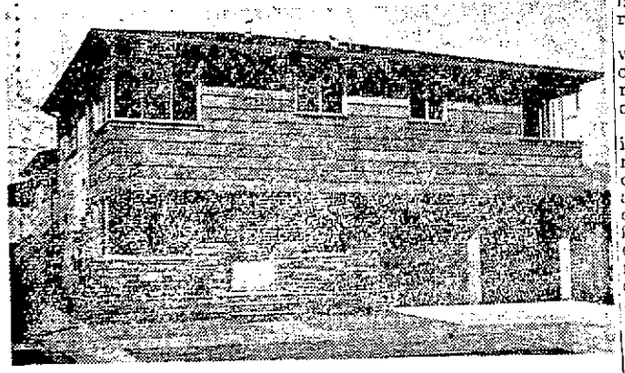

They are reached from Long Beach by driving east on 7th St., past the Veterans Hospital to Highway 39, north one-half mile to Chapman Ave. and east to Chapman-Magnolia Park.

Of special importance to GI home-seekers is the fact that these homes are still available for no down payment, no closing costs and no impounds. Monthly payments on homes ranging in price from $11,600 to $13,900 run from $61.41 to $75.39 for principal and interest.

Country life features of residences in this final unit, themed as "distinctive rustic," are interiors where wall space, windows and use of floor space make effective and restful decoration.

Imaginative use of modern wall textures, finishings and color stylings spur individual decorating talents, it was pointed out.

Appointments and conveniences are built-in gas ovens and ranges in a virtual rainbow of colors and hues complete with automatic timing devices and controls, spacious built-in breakfast nook; large picture windows especially engineered for maximum light and controlled draft-free ventilation.

NOW SELLING

Built by Paul McKenzie Jr., well known developer and builder of apartments and luxury homes, "Bixby Manor," an 11-unit own-your-own apartment, is now open for sales, Realtor Marion Davisson announced. It is located at 1825 E. 3rd St., within walking distance of the beach, Bixby Park and shopping. The apartments are singles and one or two bedrooms. Miss Davisson will maintain her office in the manor until it is sold.

Brookhurst Plaza Quality Construction Is Stressed

"Brookhurst Plaza Unit 2 is a real investment in quality construction and a future of good living," said Frank R. Hart, sales manager for Walker & Lee, Inc., agents for the Anaheim development. "Brookhurst Plaze incorporates all the excellent features home buyers are seeking today," Hart said, in noting the outstanding qualities of these homes, built by R. & W. Construction Co., "and one of the added attractions at Brookhurst Plaza is the completely enclosed rear yard for privacy and hours of relaxation or entertaining in the patio area."

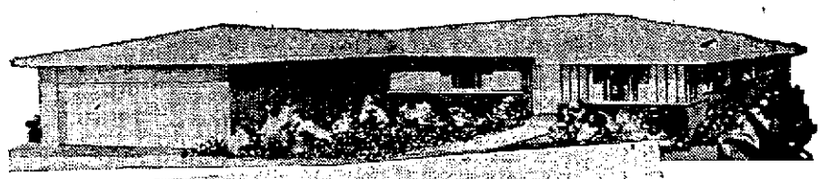

The 3 and 4 bedroom, 2 bath homes are priced from $12,900 with payments from $66.44, Hart said, and veterans may purchase them for no down payment. Non-veterans can get new FHA 30-year terms for a down payment as low as $1,900.

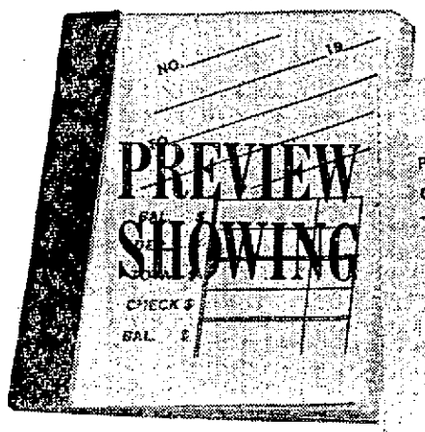

Brookhurst Plaza is on Brookhurst Ave., just north of La Palma and is reached from Los Angeles by driving out the Santa Ana Freeway to La Palma, then east to Brookhurst and north to the model homes. From Long Beach, drive out Carson (Lincoln Highway) to Euclid, turn north, cross the Freeway to La Palma, west to Brookhurst and north to the model homes.

IN RANCHO SANTIAGO

The ultimate in custom home design is being offered at Rancho Santiago in Santa Ana with the grand opening slated for today. Built by the firm of Norwood and DeLonge, 4 models located at Bristol Ave. and Memory Lane, are now on display.

Rancho Santiago Custom Homes in Grand Opening

The official grand opening of Rancho Santiago will take place today when 4 beautiful models of the select group of custom homes go on display in Santa Ana.

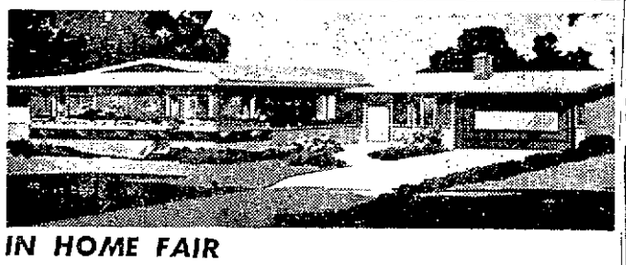

Built by the firm of Norwood and DeLonge, the "Coronado," the "Monterey," the "LaJolla," will join the "Santiago House" in showing the newest trends in building, landscaping and "friendly contemporary" furnishings, according to the sales agents Hoffman and Pilant.

"The spacious family room, separated from the kitchen by a large serving bar and situated just off the patio area is one of the many innovations by the builder in designing a luxurious but completely livable home," a spokesman for the sales firm said.

Other quality features listed were large double fireplace, built-in range and oven, dishwasher and offered as optional equipment in the new Dustronic air cleaner. Designed to eliminate most causes of hay fever and allergies, the Dustronic air cleaners acts as a filter keeping out dust and other impurities.

Easy financing arrangements may be made, the builder stated, and the Rancho Santiago homes may be custom designed to the desires of the buyers.

Located at Bristol and Memory Lane (Garden Grove Blvd.), visitors may see the models by driving straight out Garden Grove Blvd. to Memory Lane.

IN HOME FAIR

Near the Long Beach area, the Anaheim Village Home Fair is offering 16 different exterior designs in provincial and contemporary styling to buyers. Qualified vets may buy for nothing down, except costs and impounds, and low FHA terms are available.

Wide Selection Offered Anaheim Village Buyers

Sixteen different exterior designs in both contemporary and provincial styling are being offered at the Anaheim Village Homes Fair, with a wide variety of floor plans and features, according to a spokesman for the sales agents, Walker and Lee. Prices suit every budget, it was added.

The "Blue Ribbon" kitchen with the built-in range and oven, dishwasher, washer-dryer in color to blend with the embossed floor covering and large wallpapered dinette, is the ultimate in kitchen beauty and convenience, according to the sales agents, along with the disposal and copper-tone hood over the range area.

Rich paneling, a choice of fireplace styles, glass walls to patio and conveniently arranged floor plans in the three and four-bedroom homes were other advantages cited by the firm.

Available to qualified vets for no down payment except costs and impounds, the homes may be purchased on easy FHA arrangements, it was stated.

Within a few miles of the Long Beach area, the homes may be reached by driving out Lincoln (Carson) to Euclid Ave. Turn south on Euclid to the furnished models.

Says Walnut Manor Price Low on Present Market

Buyers of the first unit at Walnut Manor are really going to get a bargain, explains the builder. This tract was late in getting started, and sales prices were based upon VA appraisals made last March. Since then, costs have risen at least 10 per cent, he added. So those fortunate buyers who purchase homes in the first unit will save $1500.

"Don't take our word for it. Just come down and see for yourselves," stated Louis Herson, the builder.

Walnut Manor is ideally located between Disneyland and the new Broadway Department Store, just one block south of the Santa Ana Freeway, in the fine residential area of Anaheim.

Vets may still purchase for no money down and 30 years to pay while non-vets may yet avail themselves of low FHA terms.

Three and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes are priced from $12,450 with payments from $63 monthly.

Some of the luxury features to be found in these customized homes are choice of 4 kitchen appliances with no money down; raised oak floors; wood burning fireplaces; natural birch kitchen cabinets; 75,000 BTU forced air heat with switch for summer ventilation; steel sliding windows; genuine lath and plaster; 2 large dining areas; living room wall mahagony paneled; center hall plans; sliding glass doors or walls of glass; front yard landscaped.

From Long Beach and vicinity, drive east on Carson (Highway 91-Lincoln Ave. in Anaheim) to Santa Ana Freeway; right 3 blocks to Walnut, then right on Walnut, to models.

Skylark Terrace Offers California Living

A new home model which features a built-in barbecue in the kitchen has been introduced to Skylark Terrace Town and Country unit, according to Bill Tietz, of the Tietz Construction Co.

"This plan also includes the family room, its large, sandstone fireplace with raised hearth in addition to the regular three bedrooms and two baths," Tietz explained.

"We incorporated this design," Tietz continued, "because it fits so pleasantly into the Southern California style of living, especially in an area such as Skylark Terrace, where all the lots are spacious and suitable to the indoor-outdoor tempo of living and entertaining."

Besides the family room plan, there are still many Skylark Terrace homes available with 4 bedrooms and 2 baths, Tietz said.

Located in a preferred section of smog-free Garden Grove, Skylark Terrace homes include such luxury features as sliding glass "lanai" walls in the living rooms, extra large closets and cabinets, 80,000 B.T.U. furnaces, genuine lath and plaster throughout, golden hardwood floors and efficiently designed circular floor plans.

In the Hotpoint all-electric kitchens there is ceramic tile, Zolatone wall finish, electric exhaust fans and built-in ranges and ovens, dishwashers and garbage disposals. The two ceramic tile baths also have Zolatone wall finish and etched glass shower doors.

Exteriors have brick trim, shingle and dolomite rock roofs and 3-foot eave overhangs. Front yards are landscaped.

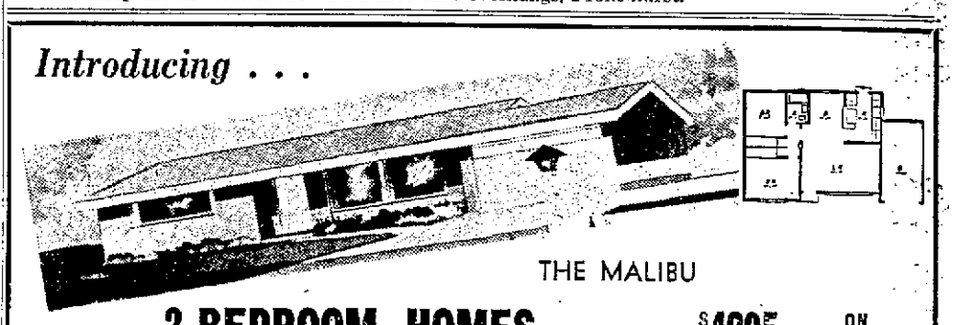

To reach the models furnished by Lloyd's of Long Beach, from Los Angeles take the Santa Ana Freeway, turn south on La Palma, which becomes Brookhurst, to Skylark Terrace Town & Country unit at Brookhurst and Chapman. From Long Beach take 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and turn north on Brookhurst.

ROOMY AND CHEERFUL

There's plenty of space, both indoors and outdoors, at Skylark Terrace Town & Country unit for gracious Southern California living. These homes have spacious living rooms with sliding "lanai" walls of glass that overlook large back yard areas planned for relaxation and entertaining.

SIGNATURE HOME
Shown is one of many three and four-bedroom, two-bath Signature Homes with built-in electric ranges and ovens, now exemplified by a display of five model homes at Hansen and Crescent Aves., Buena Park.

Signature Homes Expected to Sell Fast

National Home Week showing continues today for Midwood Construction Co.'s new three and four-bedroom, two-bath Signature Homes now rising in Buena Park at Hansen and Crescent Aves.

Priced at approximately $14,000, the new homes, it was stated, are the first in their price range to feature color-matched all-electric kitchens.

Terms for the new homes, it was stated by Midwood officials, will be nothing down for vets, except nominal costs and impounds, on long-term VA-guaranteed loans.

Included in the price and terms are color-matched built-in General Electric ranges, ovens, combination automatic clothes washer-dryers, automatic pre-rinsing dishwashers and garbage disposals. The built-in range, it was noted, has push button controls, while the eye-level oven is clock-controlled.

"The appliances are all built in as part of the house and make this offering of 169 three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes not only one of the last 'no down payment' opportunities for vets, but the best in our opinion," it was stated by Jerome Snyder and Max Levine, who head the Midwood Construction Co.

"These homes will sell fast because of their superior Buena Park location near Knott's Berry Farm, their quality construction, their all-electric color-matched kitchens and their no down payment terms," the builders stated, pointing out that 220 Signature Homes offered recently in North Long Beach were sold in one week end.

Other kitchen features which will be displayed in five model homes furnished by Lloyd's of Long Beach—include natural finish birch cabinets, ceramic tile counters, electric fan over range and Forentine pattern linoleum.

The homes have wood-burning fireplaces, forced air heating, Pre-View aluminum sliding windows and Panaview sliding glass doors.

May Co. Sales, Earnings Show Big Mid-Year Gain

ST. LOUIS—Net sales of The May Department Stores Co. were $208,918,000 in the first half of 1955, or 8.9 per cent greater than sales of $191,792,000 in the same period of last year, Morton D. May, president, announced in a report to stockholders on the six months ended July 31.

Net earnings totaled $4,331,000, as compared with $3,202,000. Earnings, after deduction of preferred dividends, were equal to 64 cents per common share in the first half of 1955, as compared with 45 cents a share in the corresponding period of 1954.

May reported that new branch stores had been opened in St. Louis and Los Angeles, that a 13-floor addition to Kaufmann's department store in downtown Pittsburgh had been completed, and that a new branch store in Denver was nearing completion.

* * * *

THE ST. LOUIS STORE, the third branch of Famous-Barr Co., opened Aug. 19. It is the major unit in the new Northland Shopping Center, which, May said, is designed to serve 500,000 persons living in suburban areas north of St. Louis and across the Mississippi River in Illinois.

The fourth branch unit of the May Co. in Los Angeles opened Sept. 12 in North Hollywood. This store, built to serve the suburban San Fernando Valley area north of Los Angeles, is the May Department Stores Company's largest branch store. It has four upper floors and a basement, with a total area of 452,500 square feet, and parking space for 3,000 cars.

* * * *

A BRANCH OF THE MAY Co. in Denver, located in the University Hills Shopping Center, will open within two weeks.

He reported that a second Denver branch, to be located in a shopping center, will be erected on a recently-acquired 44-acre site seven miles west of the downtown district.

The 13-floor addition to Kaufman's in downtown Pittsburgh is complete and in full operation, May said.

Homes in Glen Dell Park Still Sell at Old Price

At today's market buyers would have to pay at least $1,000 more than just a few months ago for a quality home but the builders of Glen Dell Park in Garden Grove have not raised prices.

That was the announcement of Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents for the third and final unit, where several first-choice residences are back on the market due to the failure of a few veteran-buyers to qualify.

With homes starting at $11,595, the $4,100,000 planned-home community is easily reached via the Santa Ana Freeway to Harbor Blvd.; right on Harbor to Chapman Ave.; right on Chapman to West St., then right again on West to the model homes.

Each buyer of a home at Glen Dell Park is given free a mortgage payment insurance policy with premiums paid for one year. The policy provides enough money to pay monthly installments in the event the buyer is unable to work because of an insured disability.

There is a wide choice of three-bedroom or two-bedroom-and-a-den homes, all with covered concrete terraces; separate service porches and natural finish wood kitchen cabinets.

Other luxury appointments include genuine hardwood floors laid over diagonal sub-floors; waste disposers in double sinks with ceramic tile drainboards; genuine lath and plaster walls; copperized range hoods with exhaust fans; inlaid "spatter" linoleum in kitchens and bathrooms and coralite tile in the bathrooms.

PRICED FROM $11,595

Despite the rising costs of labor and materials, the price of homes at Glen Dell Park have not been raised and a three-bedroom home such as shown above still may be bought for as little as $11,595, the developer announced.

Oil Firms Mum on Cut in Imports

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—Eighteen major oil importing companies grimly kept their silence Saturday on whether they will voluntarily reduce their imports or risk government-imposed curbs.

A cut-or-else ultimatum was delivered to them Sept. 13 by Defense Mobilization Director Arthur S. Flemming. He gave them until next Wednesday, Sept. 21, to submit recommendations on what should be done but added bluntly that unless excessive imports were reduced to protect domestic producers, the government would have to act.

The 18 companies named by Flemming were Asiatic Petroleum, New York; Atlantic Refining, Philadelphia; Cities Service, New York; Eastern States Petroleum, Houston; Gulf, Pittsburg; Phillips Petroleum, Bartlesville, Okla.; Shell Oil, New York; Shell Caribbean, New York; Sinclair Refining, New York; Socony Mobil, New York; Southwestern Petroleum, Fort Worth; Standard Oil of California; Standard (of Indiana); Standard (of New Jersey); Sun Oil, Philadelphia; Texas Company, New York; Tidewater Associated, San Francisco, and McBride Oil, LaBlanca, Texas.

Yugoslavian Idyll

BELGRADE (AP) — The semi-official Yugopress agency reports Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan plans to vacation with his family in Yugoslavia. He was a member of the Kremlin delegation that visited here last May.

Award Homes Still No Down to Veteran

Emphasizing that all their homes will be available to veterans with no down payment, Award Homes are showing their newest development now at Golden West and Garden Grove Blvd., between Long Beach and Garden Grove.

Seven model homes, completely furnished, and all different styling, have been arranged in a courtyard for convenient inspection and comparison and will be open daily until 9 p.m.

These famous Award Homes are being made available to veterans for the first time by the builders, a Volk-McLain Co., who have built more than 3,200 homes throughout Southern California.

All of the dwellings have 4 bedrooms, or 3 bedrooms and a den, and 2 bath and 2-car garages. Monthly payments are set at sixty-one dollars.

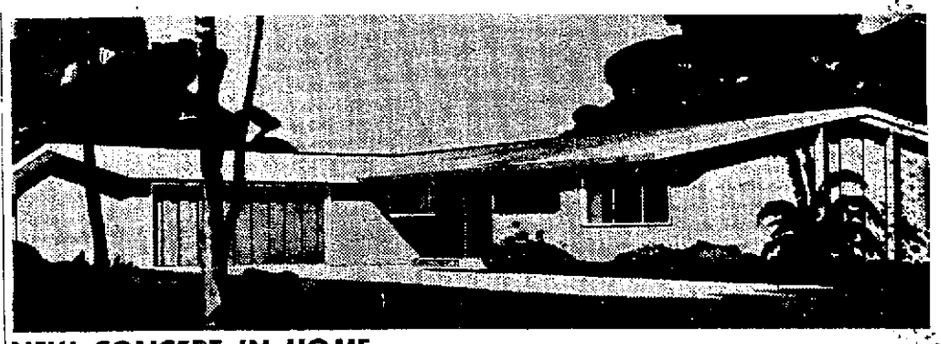

The Award Homes are reached from Long Beach by taking 7th St. (which becomes Garden Grove Blvd.) to Golden West St., then south to the site.

With their central location, Award Homes are close to markets and shopping centers in adjoining Garden Grove, and within 15 minutes drive from Long Beach, Los Angeles, Lakewood Village, recreation centers and beaches.

Many features, usually found only in luxury type dwellings, are included in Award Homes. A combination radio and intercommunication system from a master panel in the kitchen enable conversation to be carried on in different areas, and also pipes music to different rooms.

The extra large, ranch type kitchens are a homemaker's dream. Included are full-formed plastic sink tops with back splash in newest colors and patterns, custom designed food bar, and natural birch kitchen cabinets. Also featured are garbage disposers and a forced air exhaust fan.

Large wall-of-glass picture windows face the patio to bring into relief the architect's design of outdoor-indoor living. Bermuda roofs with generous overhang are topped with white, red, green, or pink crushed rock. Added to the outdoor motif are oversized covered and trellised porches and terraces.

NEW CONCEPT IN HOME

One of 14 new 1956 Award Homes being offered to veterans on no down payment terms at Golden West St. and Garden Grove Blvd. is shown here. This home is a totally new concept in modern living. Basic idea is a big ranch kitchen and an adjacent family room, all with an expensive, "open" feeling. Family room is a dual purpose room, a play area for children or grown-ups during the day, a recreation room at night; or, a dining room during the day, a tap room at night. It is separate from the living room and sleeping wing.

There's Big Business In Little Ponies

PONCA CITY, Okla. (U.P.) — Raising ponies is big business. E. P. Gonterman and his brother, Ray, paid a record $8,500 for a four-year-old blue roan mare and a copper sorrel colt at the annual Perry, Okla., Shetland pony sale this summer.

E. P. started raising the Shetlands as a hobby 10 years ago. The hobby developed into the Beau Cheval Shetland pony farm at the green gables farm west of here.

Back-Seat Driver

CHASKA, Minn. (U.P.)—A tipsy motorist slipped into the back seat of his car, fumbled around for a moment in alarm, then telephoned Sheriff Lester Melchert: "They stripped it clean, sheriff; even the steering wheel and foot pedals are gone."

To Wed Realtor

HOLLYWOOD (U.P.) — Actress Mary Castle, who bears a striking resemblance to actress Rita Hayworth, announced her engagement to Wallace Asbury, local realtor. The couple will be married New Year's Eve.

A DEVELOPMENT OF GEORGE M. HOLSTEIN & SONS

ONE OF THE NEW MODELS

Added power and new cab comforts, plus a wide selection of two-tone color combinations, are features of the new International truck S line introduced by the motor truck division of International Harvester Company. The International S-165 truck-tractor with gross vehicle weight rating of 16,000 pounds and gross combination weight rating of 29,000 pounds, is one of scores of models in this new line.

International Has New Line of Trucks

A colorful, attractive new line, designated the S line, has been introduced by the motor truck division of International Harvester Company, it was announced by J. B. Speers, branch manager, 537 W. Anaheim, Long Beach, International sales headquarters for the Long Beach territory.

New models from the line, combining style-setting design with new, rugged power and durability, will go on display at the International Harvester showroom Monday night.

Speers said the S line offers a range of 4 and 6-wheel gasoline and LPG-powered motor trucks with gross vehicle weight ratings from 4,200 to 33,000 pounds.

"New appearance and cab comfort, a wide selection of eye-catching two-tone color combinations, and the solid all-truck power and performance that has always characterized Internationals are leading features of the new line," he said. "Light and medium-duty truck specializations are offered in the S line to a degree never before achieved in the new-line intoduction."

S-line models, Speers explained, range from the light-duty S-100 series through the heavy-duty S-180 series. The line includes a wide range of pickup, panel, stake, and multi-stop delivery models with factory-mounted, added-capacity bodies; farm trucks, Roadliner truck-tractors, and other conventional chassis models for medium and heavy-duty hauling requirements in general or specialized fields; five cab-forward models; fire truck, school bus, and 4 and 6-wheel Loadstar dump-truck chassis; and three 4-wheel-drive models including a new light-duty S-120 (4x4) rated at 7,000 pounds GVW.

Larger International engines with increased horsepower have been made standard equipment in many S-line models, providing maximum usable horsepower for normal truck-driving requirements.

Here's Proof Advertising Pays

MANILA (AP) — Someone stole two air conditioning units from the shop of Victorino Sablan. The shopkeeper advertised in the newspapers next day that he wanted to buy a couple of air conditioning units and got a prompt offer.

Sablan went to buy them, taking a policeman with him.

The policeman arrested a suspect who tried to sell Sablan his two missing units.

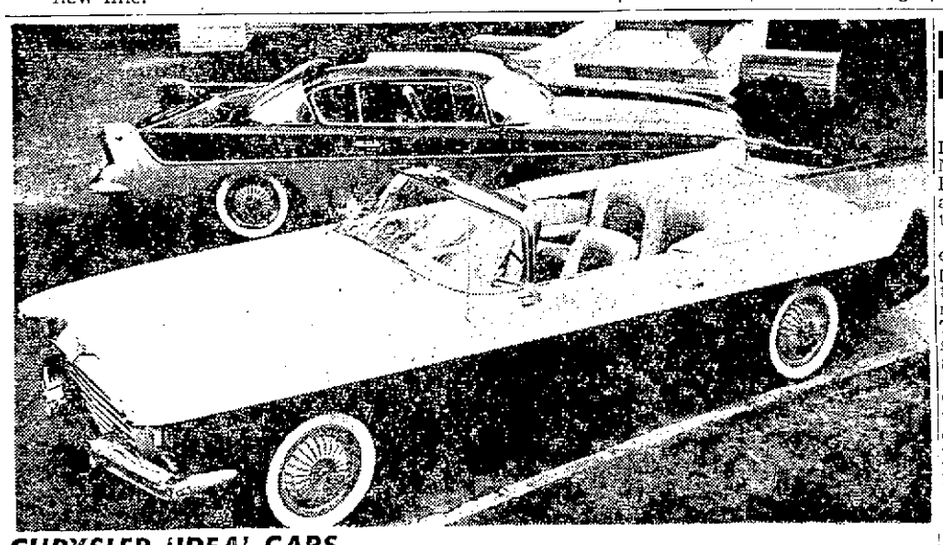

Auto Hits "Boat"

TRENTON, Neb. (AP)—A little Council Bluffs, Ia., boy received only bruises when his "boat" was hit by an auto here. The "boat" was a log Sidney Porter, 2, was floating on in Swanson Lake. The log was hit by a runaway car that ran into the lake.

CHRYSLER 'IDEA' CARS

Here are Flight Sweep I and Flight Sweep II, new "idea" cars from the styling studios of Chrysler Corporation's engineering division. Flight Sweep I is the four-passenger sports convertible and Flight Sweep II the sports hardtop. Identical with the exception of interior and exterior colors and roof treatment, the companion cars were built to compare hardtop and convertible styling on the same basic body form. Although these cars will not be manufactured for sale to the public, some of the new ideas may be employed in the production cars of the future. A prime purpose in designing and building the new "idea" cars was to sample public acceptance of new automotive styling concepts. Although the cars are of a sports type, they were designed to suit American tastes and have no European influence whatever.

Car in Wreck Lands in Junkyard

McCOOK, Neb. (AP) — A McCook man was fined $100 for reckless driving following an accident, but officers had to admit he couldn't have picked a better place. The new car, badly wrecked, spun off the highway and rolled into a junkyard.

Vets Need No Down in Shamrock Park

One of the most appealing factors in the popularity of Shamrock Park after its grand opening last week is the terms available to veterans, according to Frank Hart, sales manager for Walker & Lee, Inc., exclusive agents for this new Garden Grove development.

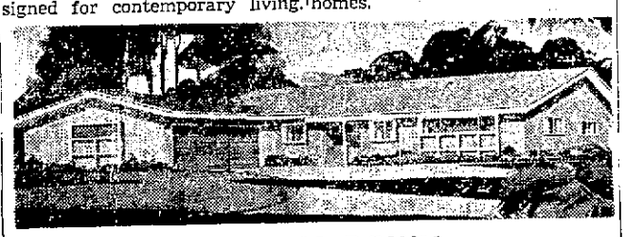

"For a limited time only veterans may purchase these 3 and 4-bedroom, 1 and 2-bath homes at Shamrock Park for absolutely no down payment," Hart said. The homes are priced from $11,575 with monthly payments as low as $58.68, including principal and interest. Non-veterans may purchase the sleek, modern-designed Shamrock Park homes for as little as $750 down, on FHA terms.

Refrigerators, stoves, washing machines and such appliances may be purchased and the cost included in veterans' monthly payments, Hart stated.

Shamrock Park homes are designed for contemporary living. They are available in a variety of floor plans and attractive elevations, and one of the most important features in keeping with the trend for indoor-outdoor living are the large living rooms with walls of glass and real fireplaces, adjoined by barbecues in the spacious patio areas.

Other luxury features include: efficiently designed kitchens with ceramic tile and garbage disposals, family-size bathrooms with colored plumbing fixtures, large bedrooms with Woodall sliding wardrobe doors, forced air heating, cork and asphalt tile flooring, walls of genuine lath and plaster, steel sash windows, and large two-car garages with storage space and work areas.

Shamrock Park is reached from Los Angeles by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to Harbor and turning south. From Long Beach take 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and turn south at Harbor to Shamrock Park model homes.

OFFERED VETS FOR NO DOWN

Shamrock Park is offering homes such as this to veterans for a limited time with no down payment while non-vets need but $750.

Gas Price War in Colorado

DENVER (AP)—A full-fledged gasoline price is raging in Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo. The last of the larger oil companies—Standard Oil has entered the scrap.

About 1,000 service stations in the three cities are involved. There is talk that the price cutting may spread all along the east side of the rockies.

the Petroleum Retailers Assn. of Colorado, said the war could be "a long, drawn-out thing."

Indications were that prices might not go much below present levels. Independents offered regular gasoline at 23.9 cents a gallon and most larger firms at 25.5. Independents were selling premium gasoline at 26.9 and James A. Coffman, director of larger companies at 28.5.

E. M. Stringer, president of Oriental Refining Co., said prices at the company's outlets "might go lower" and added: "It's up to the other fellow if the war ends. We try to sell what little we can and they can do what they want."

Oriental cut its gas price to 23.9 cents two months ago, stringer said, as part of a long range marketing program.

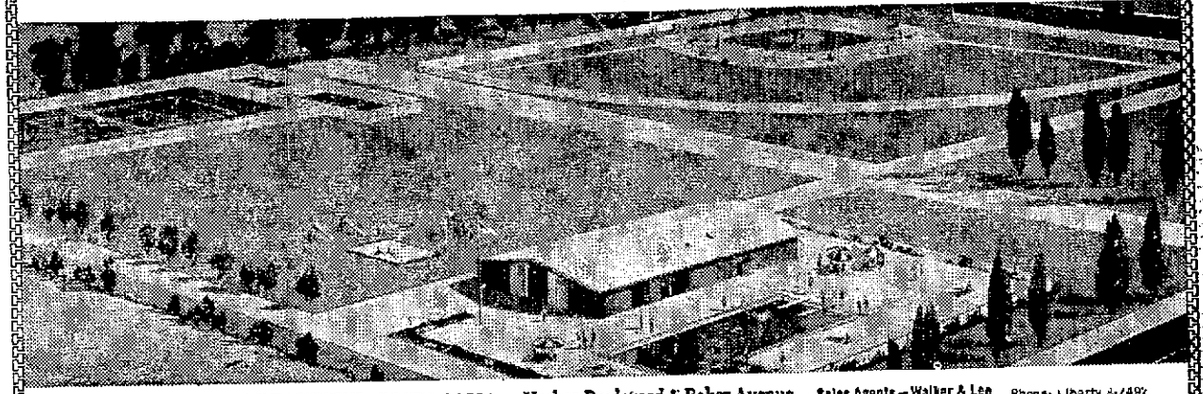

Sales Set Record

DETROIT (AP)—General Motors reported its retail sales of passenger cars from Jan. 1 through Sept. 10 this year reached a record total of 2,701,040.

Used car sales for the same period totaled 3,478,415, also a new high mark.

Aldon Buena Park Homes Attract Record Throngs

Buena Plaza's new 1956 "Triumph Series" exhibit of eight furnished model homes has established a new record of attendance by visitors during National Home Week, it was reported by the Aldon Construction Co., developers of the new $50,000,000 2,100-home planned community in Buena Park.

Opening of the Home Week observance last weekend brought to the furnished display dwellings the largest crowds in the history of the fast-selling development, and plans were set for additional thousands this weekend, during the close of the observance.

"We are proud that national attention has been focused upon Buena Plaza as part of this important Home Week show," an Aldon spokesman commented. "Our visitors have included, not only thousands of home-seekers from over the Southland, but also builders, architects and industry representatives from a number of adjoining states."

The Buena Plaza "Greatest Home Show on Earth" consists of eight "Triumph Series" 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes, furnished by Aaron Schultz of Long Beach and Anaheim. It is located, just off the Santa Ana Freeway, on La Palma Ave., east of Miller St., in fast-growing Buena Park, close to Knott's Berry Farm and Disneyland.

E. (Billy) Hamburg, general sales agent for the property, said vets' terms of nothing down but costs and impounds, approved prior to the latest government credit restrictions on GI building, still are available, with monthly terms from $66.67 principal and interest.

IN BUENA PLAZA

Aldon's newest "luxurized" homes, typified above, are three and four-bedroom, two-bath dwellings in the "Triumph Series" in Buena Plaza's new unit located conveniently in Buena Park at Miller St. and La Palma Ave.

Home Week at Buena Plaza underscores such Aldon "Luxurized" features as four different floor-to-ceiling fireplace treatments in brick or slumpstone and solid hardwood paneling.

The 3 and 4-bedroom homes have built-in Western-Holly gas range and oven with copperized range hood.

Other features include sliding glass walls, rich oak block floors, natural finish kitchen cabinets, Waste-King garbage pulverators, Dish-Whiz semi-automatic dishwashers and folding partitions to separate kitchens from service areas.

The Aldon Construction Co., developers of many planned communities with a total of more than 25,000 "luxurized" homes in recent years, announced that Buena Plaza is to have its own $7,000,000 super shopping center and schools.

Car Dealers Urged to Seek Highway Aid

WASHINGTON — America's new car and truck dealers were admonished to stand solidly behind Federal road legislation in 1956, or face a slowly contracting market for their products.

National Automobile Dealers Association, warned auto dealers that the condition of streets and highways has reached emergency proportions. Harlow H. Curtice, president of General Motors Corp., said he could think of no group of citizens "who have a greater capacity or a more compelling reason" to take positive action in the highway field than the nation's automobile retailers.

Although everyone knows we need more roads, Curtice pointed out, "there is a very real need to stimulate public demand and support for the kind of action that will really meet our highway needs—fully and quickly."

To illustrate the pressing need for more highways now, Curtice said he anticipated that motor vehicle registrations will rise in just 10 years from today's 58 million to 81 million—an increase of 40 per cent. All dealers were called on to lead and support local, state and national movements to solve our road shortage in 1956.

The present highway shortage is costing the nation far more than delays, irritation and money, the association said. It is also costing lives. An adequate Federal aid highway program would save 3,500 lives a year in the next decade.

Homestead Gardens Sales Soar; No Down to Veteran

Large crowds and stepped up sales were reported last week at Homestead Gardens following the opening of newly furnished model homes on Trask Ave., between Wright and Cypress Sts., south of the Santa Ana Freeway via its La Palma St. turnoff and Brookhurst St.

Spokesman for Walker & Lee, sales agents, said favorable terms for both vets and non-vets are stimulating sales of the 81 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes in the first unit.

Terms for vets, it was emphasized, still feature no down payment except costs and impounds, and monthly payments from $56.48, including both principal and interest.

FHA terms for non-vets also feature low monthly payments with down payments as low as $950, plus costs and impounds, the spokesman said.

Spacious lots containing a minimum of 7,200 square feet, he said, are a popular feature.

The model homes, with furnishings by Aaron Schultz of Long Beach, exemplify the many features which are being built into the new residences, including thermostat-controlled heating, 8-foot wide sliding glass walls, Modernfold doors in many models, sliding door wardrobe closets and a snack bar in addition to a spacious dining room.

Also featured are mahogany kitchen cabinets, Waste King garbage pulverators, steel casement windows, fibre glass insulation, acoustic ceilings, lath and plaster walls, extra-large garage with storage space, wide driveways, weatherstripped doors, king-size glass-doored shower stalls, heavy multi-colored rock roofs, and attractive redwood exterior trim.

MODELS ON DISPLAY

Shown is one of 81 new three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes now rising at Homestead Gardens on Trask Ave., between Wright and Cypress Sts., south of the Santa Ana Freeway and Garden Grove Ave. via Brookhurst St. Two newly furnished models are on display.

IN EXCELSIOR VILLAGE

The fourth bedroom of the family-sized homes at Excelsior Village in Garden Grove, with an entry to the patio area, may serve as playroom, den or it is ideal for a child's room. The no-down terms available to vets may expire very soon, it was announced this week.

Urges Vets to Act While No-Down Terms Prevail

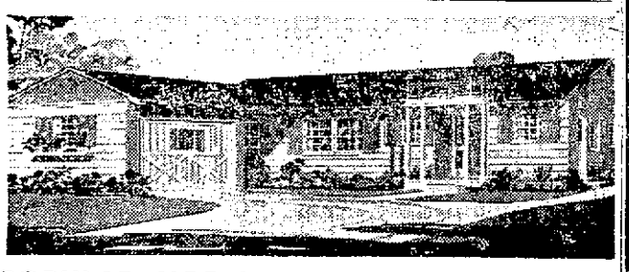

The "not one penny down" terms at Excelsior Village may expire very soon it was announced by a spokesman of the Don Coleman Co., sales agents. The present finance arrangements allow a qualified vet to move in for nothing down and with monthly payments as low as $65.48, including principal and interest. According to Coleman, however, the new restrictions placed on veteran financing will increase the down payment shortly.

The large 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes are part of a planned community that will include a large shopping center and school.

On large pool-size lots, the homes include the new Fire-Belle alarm system, built-in range and oven, washer-dryer, wood Bel-Air kitchen cabinets and built-in forced air heat with summer cooling switch. The fourth bedroom, with its own entry to the patio area serves a multi-purpose as den, playroom or ideally suited for a child's room.

Buyers were urged by Coleman to see the homes this week in order to take advantage of the no down terms to veterans.

Visitors from Long Beach may see the furnished models by driving straight out Westminster Blvd. to Wright St. in Garden Grove.

POPULAR MODEL

Beverly Gardens Builder Holds Outstanding Record

Imagine a skyscraper 869 times higher than the Los Angeles City Hall occupying a site equal in area to that of 2,271 football fields!

That, in effect, is the achievement of George J. Heltzer, veteran Los Angeles builder, who has constructed more than $219,000,000 worth of buildings.

Observing his 30th anniversary in the building industry this week, Heltzer was informed of the dramatic "skyscraper" as computed by a firm of statisticians and confirmed by Univac.

Since breaking ground in 1925 for his first structure, the president of George J. Heltzer and Associates has completed 21,738 buildings covering a total ground area of 108,690,000 square feet.

Each floor of the mythical tower represents a single Heltzer-built unit. Currently his firm is selling the second unit of Beverly Gardens, residential community in nearby Garden Grove, where sales now total $1,400,000.

Construction schedules have been advanced to meet the mounting demands, it was reported by Seymour R. Berman, a Heltzer executive.

"Qualified veterans still can buy a home in Beverly Gardens for nothing down but costs and impounds," Berman said.

Here in the "Beverly Hills of Orange County" families of young executives and others of discerning taste will find homes with 3 and 4 gedrooms or three bedrooms and a den, with two spacious baths. Two-car garages are either attached or detached.

Fourteen model homes on a landscaped street are open for inspection. From Long Beach, drive out 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and turn left on either 9th or West St. to Chapman Ave. and sales office. From Harbor Blvd. turn west on Chapman Ave. to West St.

Fairview Rancho Homes Provide Complete Colorful Landscaping

Every home at Fairview Ranchos in suburban Santa Ana these days is a veritable individual "Fall Flower Show," Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents, said yesterday.

As word of the colorful floral displays spreads the number of visitors and prospective home buyers has zoomed, he added.

Complete landscaping with lawns, trees, shrubs, plants and ground cover, planned by registered landscape architects, is included in the purchase price starting at $12,850.

Three bedroom or 2 bedroom-and-a-den homes are still to be had by qualified veterans for nothing down except costs and impounds on 30-year maturity loans payable from $65.11 monthly for principal and interest.

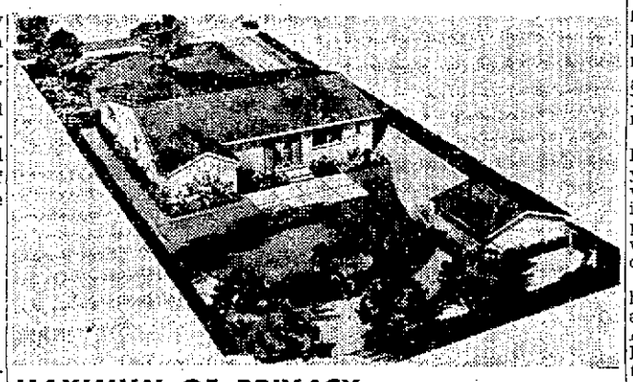

Fairview Ranchos can be reached from Los Angeles via the Santa Ana Freeway to Harbor Blvd.; south on Harbor to Edinger; left on Edinger to Bristol; left on Bristol to Fairview.

Centered in the rear garden area is a 120-square foot concrete patio with decorative redwood dividers plus an attractive redwood planter box and seat that faces the patio. A bug-repellent light increases night enjoyment of the entire garden and the rear area is floodlighted by two lights.

Surrounding the entire garden is a redwood 5-foot-high fence in smart basket-weave.

Lots have a minimum of 6,000 square feet and big two car garages with built-in storage rack, are available either attached or detached.

Three basic floor plans with front or rear living rooms are available with a choice of 23 distinguished conventional exteriors accented by brick planters, flower pot shelves, redwood trims and ornamental window shutters.

MAXIMUM OF PRIVACY

Orange trees and complete sprinklered landscaping surround the attractive three-bedroom homes at Fairview Ranchos in Santa Ana. Note the five-foot redwood fence which assures maximum privacy in this typical home.

Champion Park Is Approaching Sellout

Champion Park, new Arnold Construction Co. residential community of 148 3- and 4-bedroom, 2-bath quality-built homes in Anaheim at the intersection of North and East Sts., is nearing a sellout, it was reported yesterday by the builders.

Success of highly individualized homes was attributed to such features as fully-draped walls of glass with sliding glass doors, built-in intercom systems taking music to all rooms, built-in Western-Holly gas ranges and ovens, built-in barbecues and a choice of brick or slumpstone fireplaces.

Also contributing to rapid sales is the opportunity for early buyers to choose color schemes, as well as to make a choice of draperies, all included in the low price of the homes.

"Buying picked up noticeably following the July 31 order boosting terms on many new homes," it was stated by a spokesman for the sales agents, Hoffman and Pliant Co.

"Terms remain the same at Champion Park, at least temporarily, and this is boosting sales," he said.

Qualified vets still can buy for nothing down, except costs and impounds with monthly payments from $66.70, principal and interest. Non-vets can still buy on low FHA terms.

Other features include 70,000 to 75,000 BTU thermostat-controlled heating, natural beech kitchen cabinets, Waste King garbage disposers, redwood fencing, front and side lawns and shrubs, and two-car garages with extra space for storage.

ANAHEIM HOMES

Custom-built appearance is stressed at Champion Park where 18 home stylings in three and four-bedroom, two-bath residences are being shown, as exemplified above. Built by Arnold Construction Co., the homes are located at East and North Sts., Anaheim.

Kitchens Are Highlight in Imperial Estates Home

Kitchens with natural wood finish cabinets, hammered copperized hardware and copperized range hood with exhaust fans are high lights of all homes in Imperial Estates Unit 9, now almost sold out.

So reported Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents, yesterday, adding that qualified veterans still may buy for nothing down except costs and impounds at prices from $12,050 with monthly payments of $61.08 covering principal and interest.

Inspection is invited of 3 model homes at Unit 6, which immediately adjoins Unit 9. From Los Angeles take the Santa Ana Freeway to Pioneer Boulevard; turn right on Pioneer to Imperial Boulevard; turn right on Imperial to Curtis and King Road.

From Long Beach, take Lakewood Blvd. to Imperial, right on Imperial to Curtis and King Rd.

Construction features include genuine hardwood floors over raised subfloors; genuine lath and plaster ceilings and walls; sliding glass doors; garbage disposers; double sinks with colored ceramic tile worktops and splashes; service porches; colorful coralite tile around tub areas in bathrooms; 40-gallon gas water heaters; 65,000 BTU forced-air heating systems and semi-automatic dishwashers.

With a choice of 3 bedrooms or 2 bedrooms and a den, each of these high-quality homes has a larger-than-average 2-car garage.

NO DOWN FOR VETS

Three-bedroom homes, such as this, still may be purchased by veterans at Imperial Estates for nothing down but costs and impounds.

Ike, Mamie Fail to Sign Register

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UP)—The deadline for registering to vote in the November elections passed today without the registration of President and Mrs. Eisenhower.

John J. Basehore, Adams County Republican chairman, expressed disappointment over the President's failure to register to vote from his farm home here. The President has announced he was changing his voting residence to Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Interior Department Saturday announced the opening of 520 acres of Wyoming forest lands for mineral leasing and mining. The acreage is located in the Teton National Forest in northwest Wyoming. Bids should be filed by Oct. 1 with the Bureau of Land Management office at Cheyenne, Wyo.

Three Schools Open Pools to Public Use

Public use of the city's three high school swimming pools will continue through the fall and winter as a feature of the Long Beach plan of co-ordinated school and municipal recreation, according to Walter L. Scott, director of municipal recreation.

"As in former years, the Jordan, Poly and Wilson pools will be available for public use whenever these facilities are not required for school purposes," Scott said.

The Jordan and Poly plunges will operate on identical evening schedules. All three pools will maintain the same Saturday schedules. There will be lifeguards on duty at each of the pools and an expert swimming instructor will give free lessons to beginners.

* * * *

EXPERTS RATE the three high school pools as among the finest in the nation. Each is equipped with underwater lighting.

Evening use of the pool features two periods, 7-8:15 o'clock and 8:15-10 o'clock.

Jordan and Poly schedules, first period: Mondays, recreational swimming, open to all persons; Tuesdays, junior and senior high girls; Wednesday, junior and senior high boys; Thursdays, recreational swimming; Fridays, family night. Second period: Mondays, recreational swimming; Tuesdays, adult women; Wednesdays, adult men and women; Thursdays, recreational swimming; Fridays, family night.

Wilson pool schedule: First period, Mondays, recreational swimming; Tuesdays, family night; Wednesdays, junior and senior high boys; Thursdays recreational swimming; Fridays, junior and senior high girls. Second period: Mondays, recreational swimming; Tuesdays, family night; Wednesdays, adult men and women; Thursdays, recreational swimming; Fridays, adult women.

* * * *

SATURDAYS (all three pools have the same schedules): From 9 a. m.-10 a. m. and again, 10-11 a. m., boys' beginning instruction; 11-noon, boys' and girls' intermediate instruction; 1-2 p. m. and again, 4-5 p. m., recreational swimming open to all.

Admission is 15 cents for youngsters attending elementary schools; 25 cents for junior and senior high school pupils and 35 cents for adults. Admission includes use of lockers, shower, towel, swim suit and pool. Women and girls must wear swim caps in the pools and must provide these themselves.

Pacific Law School to Reopen in October

Everyone is familiar with this area's educational system, ranging from kindergarten through post-graduate courses at State College, but few people know of Long Beach's own factory for potential Jerry Geislers.

It's the Pacific Coast University Law School, which will resume its classes on Oct. 3. The school, previously conducted at Poly High School, now will be held at Wilson High School.

The school boasts a courtroom full of successful graduates.

Dr. Carl H. Manson, school dean, will register beginning students Wednesday at 236 Newport Ave., while returning students will register there Sept. 29 and 30. The dean is a veteran of 25 years of teaching law here, at Loyola University and his alma mater, the University of Michigan.

* * * *

NEARLY 75 practicing attorneys in Long Beach were graduated from the local law school, Dr. Manson explains.

"Before the war, classes were conducted in Los Angeles," he says, "but after the war the demand was such that we established the Long Beach school."

Dr. Manson makes no pretense that the law course is easy.

"It requires work and study," he explains, "but approximately 75 per cent of the students who continue past the first two weeks actually complete the entire four-year course."

Freshmen start off with courses in contracts, torts, civil negligence cases, criminal law and legal methods. Then they move into more involved legal studies.

Among those who obtained their legal training at the local law school are Mark Corcoran and Al Williams, formerly of the City Attorney's office, and Dan Barnes of the Public Defender's Office.

Gov. Goodwin J. Knight served on the law school's advisory board while a Superior Court judge in Los Angeles.

THE CLASSES, conducted Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, attract a wide range of pupils. Each pays an average of $38 a month for tuition and books.

"The youngest in our classes last year was 24 years old," Dr. Manson notes, "while pupils range to retired people."

The students include court bailiffs, police officers, mechanics, city employes, insurance adjusters and clerks. Many enroll in the school to gain knowledge which will help them in their work.

About half of the school's graduates eventually enter law practice, Dr. Manson explains, after receiving the school's bachelor of laws degree. About six students a year study for master of law degrees.

Appointed Dean

BOSTON (UP)—Winslow R. Hatch of the State College of Washington has been appointed dean of Boston University's College of General Education. Hatch, a native of Lexington, Mass., will assume his new duties here Oct. 15.

Mozart Fete Scheduled at City College

Commemorating the 200th anniversary of th birth of Wolfgang Mozart, the music department of the Evening Division of Long Beach City College plans a four-day Mozart festival.

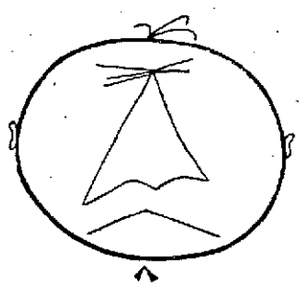

The first concert will be given Thursday evening, Jan. 26 at City College, and will be climaxed Sunday afternoon, Jan. 29 when the Schola Cantorum will present the great Mass in C Minor.

* * * *

COMBINING TALENTS in the festival will be the College Symphony, chamber music groups, College Choir, Madrigal Singers and the Schola Cantorum.

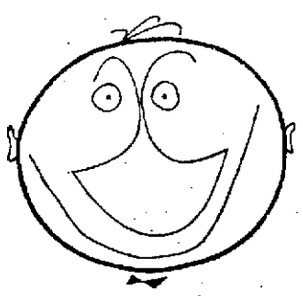

Featured soloist for the festival will be Marilyn Horne, who recently won first place on Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts. Royal Stanton, choral director, and Dr. Gerald Daniels, orchestra director at the college, announce several openings in each class by audition only.

THIS VETERAN IS SORRY

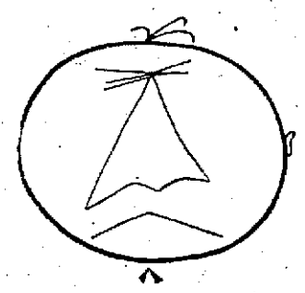

He qualified for a $13,700 house, so he bought it. Now he realizes that an Award Home at only $11,700 would have given him just as much.

THIS VETERAN IS HAPPY

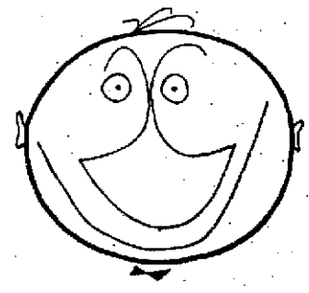

He could easily qualify for a $13,700 house, but he chose an Award Home for only $11,700. He finds the size, construction and luxury features superior.

THIS VETERAN IS SORRY

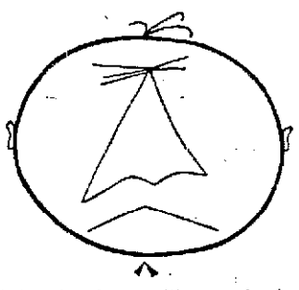

His monthly payments are so high that his budget is straining at the seams, and he can't afford any fun for his family.

THIS VETERAN IS HAPPY

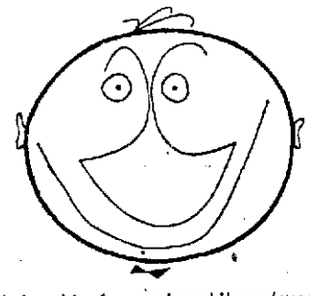

He pays less than rent — just $61.00 a month — for his new Award Home. Plenty of money left over to enjoy life!

THIS VETERAN IS SORRY

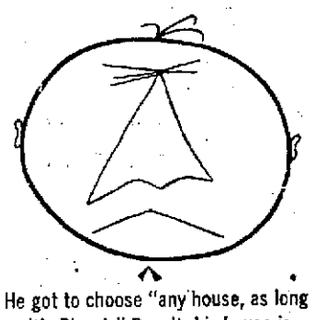

He bought a house with no professional architectural planning, built by a little-known builder with little previous experience. None of the colors in the rooms seem to go together, and they clash with his furniture.

THIS VETERAN IS HAPPY

He bought a famous Award Home (over 3200 have been built). Designed by architect Edward H. Fickett, A.I.A., joint winner with Volk-McLain of the 1955 National Award of merit awarded by the National Association of Home Builders. Each room has its own distinctive color scheme (color consultant: William Manker).

THIS VETERAN IS SORRY

He got to choose "any house, as long as it's Plan A." Result: his house is a monotonous duplicate of all his neighbors.

THIS VETERAN IS HAPPY

He chose his Award Home from a variety of 14 different California Ranch-Modern exteriors, 7 different convenient floor plans.

Regardless of how high-priced a home you can qualify for, it will pay you to

TV Tele-Vues

by TERRY VERNON

To all intents and purposes the feud between Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin that flared last winter and carried through the summer is over—at least so far as making movies and doing TV shows together is concerned.

Martin and Lewis will be back at 8 p.m. (4) to headline the "Variety Hour" with the same type of comedy that skyrocketed them to the top. The exact nature of the bedlam hasn't been divulged but it'll be typical, and Tracy Morgan will make her debut as the feminine interest.

Over (2) at 8p.m. Ed Sullivan has winners of the U. S. Navy's annual talent contest along with Julius LaRosa, the Marquis Chimpanzees and Capt. Richard McCutchen who cracked the $64,000 question. Sullivan learned last year that his show couldn't beat Martin and Lewis in the ratings so he hasn't wasted money on trying tonight.

NEW TO MANY—Last season a show called "It's A Great Life" debuted at a 10:30 p.m. time, so many viewers have failed to see it. Program is a situation comedy show starring Michael O'Shea, James Dunn and William Bishop and is really very good. Starting today, it gets a 7 p.m. slot (4) (which will be in opposition to "Private Secretary" and the "Jack Benny Show"). But it should jump up in the national ratings (on the live network it bucks only "Lassie").

DIAL-LITES—Eleanor Powell returns with her award-winning "Faith of Our Children" (4) at 1:30 p.m. aided by husband Glenn Ford and son Peter. This program is a supplement to Sunday School and not designed to replace it. On this first fall program she'll give a general introduction to the study outline for the season. . . . The UCLA walloping of Texas A&M will be seen on film at 7 p.m. (13). . . . ABC comes in at 7:30 to the Sullivan-Colgate 8 p.m. domination with a movie series microwaved from New York. First of the "Famous Film Festival" movies is "Old Man Out" starring James Mason, Kathleen Ryan and Robert Newton, to elude the police.

DRAMA—Barbara Stanwyck is hostess to the "Loretta Young Show" at 10 p.m. (4) and presents Teresa Wright and Scott Forbes in "My Uncles O'More." Miss Wright plays a new schoolteacher who is romantically involved by two of her pupils with their uncle in an effort by the whole family to marry off its eligible bachelors. . . . Macdonald Carey, Phyllis Thaxter and Dick Foran star on "Stage 7" at 9:30 p.m. (2) in a comedy about an advertising executive who tries to run a farm on weekends. Play is based on the famed "Mr. Blandings" novels. . . . Eli Wallach heads the cast of the "Television Playhouse" (4) at 9 p.m. in a tale of hatred and rebellion in a small, explosive South American country. . . . A young American, in Italy, heavily in debt, wins a lottery but is afraid to collect it. He asks a little native boy to collect the prize and agreement is reached only if the American will marry the boy's sister. "Appointment with Adventure" is (2) at 10 p.m. . . . The surrender of General Cornwallis at Yorktown is the "You

TRACY MORGAN

Are There" subject at 6 p.m. (2)

TELE-TIPS—An actual Nike, the Army's supersonic guided missile, will be shown on a special hour-long presentation of "The Dan Lundberg Show" (13) at 6 p.m. Lundberg will also talk with the men who operate the various Nike installations that ring the Los Angeles area. . . . The Los Angeles Angels and the Hollywood Stars play their final game in the special series to decide the third place spot in the PCL and the winner of the cross-town series (9) at 2:25 p.m. . . . Dave Willock and Cliff Arquette cast an eye at approach cold weather and show how to make a practical storm sash during "Do It Yourself" (4) at 7:30 p.m. . . . "The Adventures of Kit Carson" come to an end after four years when the show is seen (11) at 5:30 p.m. Story tells of the hijacking of a new repeater rifle by some outlaws. . . . Ahamed Bokhari of Pakistan, Peter Freuchen, Danish newspaper reporter and famed explorer, and a man who washes the windows at the United Nations building will be among those interviewed by Morgan Beatty on "People" at 5 p.m. (4). . . . Experts will discuss school problems during the "American Forum" (4) at 12:30 p.m. . . . Films of the controversial "POW Survival Course" being taught at Stead Air Force Base near Reno will be seen on "Sunday News Special" at 11 p.m. . . . "You Asked For It" journeys to a buffalo ranch and Death Valley Scotty's castle during the show (7) at 7 p.m.

STORY LINES—Susie MacNamara teaches her boss how to "throw a slow curve" when an effort is made to sign up Whizzer Wade, a baseball star, during "Private Secretary" starring Ann Sothern (2) at 7 p.m. (Next Sunday Jack Benny returns). . . . When Lassie is attacked by an unusually vicious bull terrier it leads Gramps to believe that illegal pit bull fights are being staged near the farm during "Lassie" (2) at 6:30 p.m. This starts an investigation in which the famous dog plays an important part. . . . "Dr. Hudson's Secret Journal" unfolds "The Foundling Story" (11) at 9 p.m. A baby is left on the doctor's doorstep and this leads to a new children's wing for the hospital.

Words and Music

By JOHN B. CALLAGHAN

CBS-TV program chieftain Hubbell Robinson says situation comedies aren't dead on TV . . . only the bad ones. He claims CBS has a couple of good new ones, "Joe and Mabel" and the Phil Silvers show. And in these shows, Robinson says, "(1) There are no jokes; the fun comes from characters and situations; (2) They are not typical American families; (3) The stories are not located in that typical American town." Well, they must be different, anyway!

More than 65 television editors from the U. S. and Canada flew to England recently for a visit to Sherwood Forest at Nottingham . . . and a preview look at the filming of the new CBS "Robin Hood" series. It stars Richard Greene as the man who robbed the rich to feed the poor.

CBS-TV throws another big dramatic gun at the rival networks this season on Sunday night with the new "Alfred Hitchcock Theatre" half-hour series. The famed movie director will bring his specialty, the suspense story, to the TV screens.

Look for Dunninger, the mentalist, who did summer replacement duty on NBC-TV this past hot spell, to remain on with a regular winter show. Guess they figure he's got his audience hypnotized.

COMPARE THE 1925 HOME WITH THE 1955 HOME

COMPARE WHAT YOU CAN BUY TODAY
WITH WHAT WE BOUGHT YEARS AGO

During the Boom Days of the "Twenties" a seven-room frame bungalow on Molino sold for $13,600. It had living and dining room, two bedrooms, den, breakfast room and kitchen. One bath. NO TILE. Single garage.

Recently a Home was advertised in this paper for $13,600 that beat the old frame "forty ways for Sunday." SAME PRICE — yet the same dollar is only worth HALF what it was then.

This Home had two bedrooms and a large den. The living room, dining room and den could be thrown together into one large, beautiful room for parties and such. The most modern kitchen you ever laid eyes on! Breakfast nook, built-in washer and dryer, built-in stove, oven and dish-washer. Cupboards and drain-boards a delight. SWELL TILE BATHROOMS.

A perfect Home! Outside and inside! Every room a Beauty. Lot 65-feet wide—and all landscaped. Double garage with handsome doors.

THAT is the kind of a Home $13,600 will buy you TODAY. It all adds up to just this:

TODAY YOU GET TWICE AS MUCH — FOR HALF THE MONEY!

TRULY—NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO BUY!

AND WHEN YOU BUY—BE SURE TO BUY THROUGH A REALTOR!

International Flavor to GOP Fashion Show

TAKING THE SPOTLIGHT, temporarily, is Susie, a French poodle, with Mrs. Earl B. Milton, as she poses, also, with Mrs. Leslie H. Smith, Mrs. Minerva Anderson and Logan H. Goodknight, from left, prior to the annual fashion show Thursday at Lakewood Country Club by Long Beach Council of Republican Women, Federated. Susie wants you to know that Mrs. Milton is wearing an original DeDe Johnson dress, one of the many door awards. John Hersey of Buffums' will present the show, theme of which is "Fashion Is a Linguist." Special guest will be Dennis Morgan, stage and screen star.—(Staff photo.)

Styles Star Thursday at GOP Review

It is only four days before the Long Beach Council of Republican Women's big fashion event of the year. All roads will lead to the Lakewood Country Club Thursday where smartly clad, style-conscious women of the community will gather on the spacious lawn to view the exciting and glamorous fashions for fall and winter presented by Buffums'. Highlight of the day will be the talk by Dennis Morgan, stage and screen star.

A coffee hour at 11 a. m., will precede the fashion showing and program at 12:30 p.m. "Fashion is a Linguist" will be the theme for the extravaganza of fashions and accessories to be paraded. John Hersey, Buffums' fashion coordinator, will act as commentator.

In presenting the international theme, Hersey will divide the show into well-defined groups of completely accessorized fashions, each group to be prefaced by the costumes from which they were adapted. Many noted designers will be represented in the collection.

Favors will be presented to every guest at the fashion review and there will be special door awards including choice of any hat in Buffums' noted designer collection; a DeDe Johnson original, a generous bottle of fine imported perfume, and many others.

A special feature of the show will be a 14-skin full let-out natural Starlite ranch mink stole.

Background music will be played by Phil Horton and his group.

Mrs. Cartwright Hunter, president, will welcome guests and the program will be directed by Mrs. Betty Maude Benwell, general chairman.

Arrangements for the coffee hour are being made by Mrs. J. L. Routh, hospitality chairman, and Mrs. Doris Burgess, co-chairman. Hawaii Sets Mood for Third Nighters' Evening

The melodic strains of soft Hawaiian music and gaily colored lanterns festooned between graceful trees greeted Third Nighters, local dance group, as they gathered for a pre-dance punch bowl party Saturday at the home of the president, Dr. Claire E. Pike, and Mrs. Pike, 3833 Pine Ave.

Hosts and hostesses for the event, which preceded the group's first dance of the new season at Recreation Park Clubhouse, were new officers, their husbands and wives.

"An Evening in Hawaii" was the romantic theme for the night's festivities, with island decor and music used unsparingly at both gala occasions. More than 80 club members and guests, in gay South Sea attire, were greeted at the Pike home by a lovely hula maiden and were directed down a lighted path to a punch bowl table centered with a miniature tropical isle complete with waving palms and dancing girls.

Co-hosts and hostesses with Dr. and Mrs. Pike were Messrs. and Mmes. A. L. Fisher, E. N. Bailey and O. B. Curtis.

Highlighting the clubhouse dance, which kept merry-makers in proper island mood with more sweet tropical music, was an exhibition dance by Philip Albanese and partner. Members in charge of the later event were Messrs. and Mmes. Eugene Morath and Don Hedley as the social committee, assisted by Messrs. and Mmes. Otho Slaton and Elmer Sorensen.

Presidents Club

Officers of Presidents Club will be hostesses when the group meets Saturday for a noon luncheon and meeting at Brower's Restaurant. Reservations may be made before Wednesday with Mrs. Wallace Askew or Mrs. Hallie Bridges.

Dramatic Nightingale Ball to Headline Fall Season

Myriads of white French balloons striped in black—at the entry way, centering each dining table and billowing from the chandeliers—will transform the Cavalier Room of Lafayette Hotel into a striking and exciting scene for the Oct. 1 Nightingale Ball.

The Nightingales, junior organization of the Auxiliary to Children's Memorial Hospital, is hostessing the dinner-dance as a fund-raising project to assist needy children at the hospital.

Baskets of white flowers will adorn each dinner table, with jeweled perfume bottles for ladies and bottle openers for men as table favors. At the entrance, a large French balloon will center a revolving table on which will be placed baskets filled with gay boutonnieres for male guests. Billows of festive balloons, released from their ties at each chandelier, will float toward the outstretched arms of eager dancers.

With reservations limited to 300, the ball will be open to members and guests. Festivities will begin with pre-dinner cocktail parties at the homes of various members. Dancing will be to the delightful music of Jack Collins and orchestra.

For the past three months, Mrs. Kenneth Henry, ways and means chairman, and her committee have been hard at work to make this affair one of the most enjoyable and exciting social events of the year. Mrs. Loether Buck is in charge of decorations.

Wild Waves Say

By IOLA MASTERSON

An occasional butterfly drifted lazily through the air, it's brilliance lost on an audience already enthralled with beauty more enduring. This was Thursday afternoon when Assistance League was hostess at an exclusive fashion show of fall and winter modes, given poolside in the gardens of the Lester Lawson Jr. home, 3903 Pacific Ave.

Those poor butterflies. They didn't stand a chance being noticed as creation after shining creation brought murmurs of delight.

A happy wedding of summer styles and fall fashions was visible everywhere one looked, with some women in the audience taking their cue from the weather and wearing summer shades while others paid heed to the date and wore transitional tones (light weight, however) topped with autumn chapeaux.

Tawny-haired hostess Elva Lawson wore a black cotton with white. Others noted were Ann Settle, Dorothy Dunlap, Hart Davis, Winifred Morris and Sara Savoie.

Elizabeth Jones wore pink while slim Helene Drown, cool in her vantage point under an elm tree, wore sheer navy. Others choosing navy were Dorothy and Laddie Macrate while Dottie Munholland was in a black and toast transitional.

President Grace Rowe began the afternoon with words of welcome, soon turning the microphone over to Sally Nesmith who, with typical "Sallesque" verve and fun lead the guided tour through fashion land as commentator.

Chlora Hall was present and so were Mildred Mead, Etta Arthur, Martha Gould and Bettye Mitchell, Marie Kiseau, Clare Hossom and Madeleine Roberts. Eyes that swept the viewing crowd also noted Dorothy Goodnight, Flo Newton, Jane Hosmer, Rosemary Wilson and Marge Davis.

Show co-chairmen were Tess Heusel, Mildred Brayton and Ann Yunker and for their committee members they had nothing but praise. Women like Ponnie Ridder who accomplishes the impossible in a twinkling; Polly Chace whose decorations on the refreshment buffet tables were fabulous; Stella Kellogg, Flossie Rene, Mildred Wing, Nell Taylor, Ann Noble, Elva Pritchard and Margaret Davis all did yeoman duty! Now let the fall begin.

And speaking of fashion shows, there weren't any "clearance sale" signs, not by any stretch of the imagination, on the lovely things viewed by Downtown Kiwanis wives and their husbands when the gals were invited for one of their extra special ladies days last Tuesday at the Lafayette Hotel. Walt Jordan, naturally, was chairman of the day and not only that but served as one of the most "fetching" models on the ramp showing the latest in men's threads.

Chic Wilma Hastings was commentator and viewing with approval were such Kiwanians and Kiwaniannes as prexy Hal and Helen Moore (Hal was named "Mr. America of 1955" by Wilma who claimed his title was won in a secret poll of women's opinions). The guffaws that followed the announcement left some people wondering!). Flo and Dr. Ward DeWitt, Dixie and Hal Reece, Mary and Wendell Wilson, Helen and Clare Hamman, Claire and "Phil" Phillips, Estelle and Dr. Ken Mooney and Virginia and Tom Russell.

Others glimpsed whilst they were glimpsing were Catherine and Larry Smith, Barbara and Ted Corcoran, Beryl and Howell Honeywell, Blanch and Earl Drown, Betty and Bill Bennett, Fae and Harvey McCafferty, Donna and Bud Ridings, Irene and Dr. Dwight Sigworth Kay and "Smitty" Smith and Elizabeth and Harold Judson.

"September 17 is a day to be free for that's when St. Mary's Hospital Guild will go on a spree." That's a reasonable facsimile of the informal invitations which caused well over 100 St. Mary's Guild members and their husbands to converge on Nancy and Joe Bogdanovich's home at 31 Saddleback Rd. in Rolling Hills last night for a friendly and completely successful get-better-acquainted party.

Assisting Nancy and Joe were Nadyne and Ralph Caneer, Peg and Bill Kirk, Beverly and Jackson Mense, the Drs. Cliff and Orville Cole with their wives, Janice and Florence, Dr. Leo and Maxine Bach, Lin and Johnny Arkush, Ina and Jay Reed, Joan and John Twitchell, Dolores and Herman Weissker, Millie and Dr. John McGill and Laura and Ed Killingsworth. And, of course, president Barbara Davis and husband, Donnell, were indispensable.

Swimming in the Bogdanovich's big pool was followed by the most welcome of picnic suppers served atop good, old red and white tablecloth to keep every one in a saucy mood.

The "kids" and the "graduates" got together last weekend for another of Dames Club's always splendiferous annual reunions at which members from the days when the club was known as Debs and current ones renew the embers of acquaintance.

Given at the Mounted Police Clubhouse, the gals planned a charcoal broiled steak dinner, preceded by cocktails and followed by dancing. Among the gang who frolicked the evening away were Marge and Ralph Peterson, Texas, and "Babe" Fraser, Betty and Crosby Hoyt, Lois and Max Boyer, Lucille and Tom Crosby, Noel and David Hodges, Doris and Jack Warnock, Marilyn and Jack Marquette, Dorothy and Ross Wattelet and Peggy and Paul Teschke.

Others who perambulated to the rhythms of the juke box "orchestra" were Corinne and "Skip" McMahon, June and Stan Cooper, Thelma and Gene Dreckman, Harriet and Pat Dixon, Janet and Joe Scott, Flo and Mike Brooks, Betty and Milton Cantor, Louise and "Cub" Callis and the president herself, Barbara Powell, and husband, George.

Iryss McDonnel was party chairman assisted by husband Bob while James LaGregs and Tom Wall were the able broiler of steaks—rare, medium and ruined.

Glamor, adventure and beauty were brought to arm-chair travelers by Patti Ezell when she entertained a group of friends at a patio dinner and then showed fistfuls of elegant colored slides taken during her recently completed two-year assignment to Burma with the Foreign Service. Patti showed film exposed in Mandalay, Penang, Hong Kong and Bangkok to name but a few places. In keeping with the evening she served a native dinner—as different and delightful as anything ever eaten in this fair city. Assisting with party duties were Patti's sister and husband, Jackie and Dan Welty plus the two little Weltys, Dana and Shauna. Guests included Greta and Bob Wilkerson, Pat and Brooks Van Houten, Margaret and Stan Challis, the Delmar Johnsons, the Walter Paukens, Mrs. Orville Adams and daughter, Barbara, and Denny Fox.

Six people made Balboa Bay Club gayer than it would have been if they hadn't been there last night all because Marguerite and Tom Welch said a gracious, "Be our guests" to Bethuel and Doris Moore and Beth and Kelly Williams. They dined, danced, chatted and laughed the evening away.

A porpoise mood—can you think of anything jollier (or wetter)?—settled over Pat and "Van" Van de Water's Pacific Ave. home last Sunday when they entertained 14 couples at a relaxed summertime pool and brunch party. After cavorting in the green, cool depths everyone dried off long enough to dine sumptuously on steaming platters of rich Canadian bacon, omelets cuddled in mushrooms and—. Care to eat a little something before we continue?

Claiming she was working too hard getting their new home ship-shape, Bob Reid insisted taking wife, Mollie, off for a couple days rest. So, in San Jacinto last weekend they played 36 holes of golf. By comparison now, even if Mollie were called upon to move the piano, it would seem a simple task! Ah, that Bob, crafty as B'rer Fox.

Features of Designers' Show

WHEN NINE OF THE top-flight California designers commentate their latest fall and winter fashions as guests of the Independent, Press-Telegram Sept. 27 in Municipal Auditorium, at the California Fashion Designers' Show, two represented will be Young Set of California and Addie Masters. This gay young coat, left, by Young Set, is made of Stroock's "El Misti," a short-pile wool with a velvety surface. For comfort over suits, the shoulders are a shallow dolman cut. Addie Masters designed this delightful dress of wool jersey in a light tone of aqua and a slightly deeper tone in the tissue wool tweed skirt. It is a one-piece dress. The slim-line skirt has ample width through unpressed pleats in front.

Exciting Stage Fare for Designers' Show Sept. 27

By MARY LOU ZEHMS
Independent, Press-Telegram Women's Editor

There is more exciting news in store for those of you who plan to attend the California Fashion Designers' Show Sept. 27 in Municipal Auditorium as guests of the Independent, Press-Telegram. Many wonderful sights are in store for that evening, according to Wilma Hastings, outstanding Southland fashion authority, who is the co-ordinator for the show.

In addition to the nine top California designers, invited by this newspaper, to be here in person to commentate their latest designs of hats, coats, suits, daytime and evening wear, will be Jimmy Whitmore's 15-piece orchestra and talented Harvey Wagner, our own Long Beach baritone, as guest soloist. An element of surprise is apparent, too, as plans go forth for a real fashion-wise eye-opener!

The nine designers coming to Long Beach for this unprecedented event, are Roth LeCover, Georgia Bullock, Peggy Hunt, Marjorie Montgomery, Alex Coleman, Addie Masters, Louis Tabak, Young Set of California and Lester Masters of Leslie James Hats. A special dramatic stage setting, "Fashion Is Fine Art," will carry out the theme of the two-hour extravaganza.

The requests for tickets has been overwhelming. Only those who returned the coupons, and were received first by this office, will be able to attend. We are sorry that limited seating makes it impossible for the many thousands of fashion-conscious women in the area to be with us. Doors of Convention Hall will open at 7 p. m. and the show will begin promptly at 8 p. m. No one will be admitted without a ticket.

Lady Lions Install Execs at Festive Dinner-Dance

Mrs. Hayden Bolander, newly-elected president of West Long Beach Lady Lions, accepted the gavel symbolic of her office at that group's seventh annual dinner dance Saturday in the Roof Garden of Lafayette Hotel. Installing officer was Mrs. Verne Hedden.

A lovely pin, yearbook and personal gift were presented outgoing president Mrs. Jim Hanson in recognition of her successful and busy club year.

Seated with Mrs. Bolander at the banquet tables, which were effectively decorated with gilded and glittering fall leaves, gift gavels and sequins, were her co-officers, also newly installed, Mrs. Wilfred Slater, vice president; Mrs. Jim Shea, recording secretary; Mrs. Richard Dilday, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Allen Clinkscales, treasurer.

After dinner and installation ceremonies, club members and guests danced to music provided by the Merrymakers.

Dr. and Mrs. Virgil L. Fisher

Virgil L. Fishers Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

More than 300 friends and guests from various cities and towns of the Southland assembled Sept. 11 to felicitate Dr. and Mrs. Virgil L. Fisher, on the occasion of their golden wedding.

The reception was given by their two sons and daughters-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Gaylord L. Fisher and Dr. and Mrs. Russell V. Fisher, and took place at the home of their elder son in Park Estates.

The guests gathered in the spacious living room and in the patio; while in the picturesque swimming pool there floated the "SS Fisher," symbolic of their ship of matrimony that has sailed peacefully for over a half century.

The bride of fifty summers cut the beautiful five-tier wedding cake. Delicious refreshments were served, while the guests strolled about and exchanged pleasant reminiscenses of other years.

The music was furnished by Mrs. Harriet Wood, harpist, and Professor Alfred Walters, violin instructor at La Sierra College. When asked concerning the requisites of a successful wedded life, Dr. Fisher replied: "Choose a bride who has the same ideals in life; then keep love growing." Similarly, Mrs. Fisher replied: "Having a devoted husband, loving children and grandchildren to keep you young and active."

The Fishers are natives of the Buckeye State and for 18 years operated a private hospital in Mount Vernon, Ohio. For a number of years Dr. Fisher served as medical director of the New England Sanitarium, located at Melrose, Mass., while for the past 25 years they have resided in Long Beach, where at the corner of First and Atlantic they established the Fisher Clinic. Dr. Virgil is now retired and the work of the clinic is carried forward by his two sons who have followed in the professional footsteps of their father.

Among Career Women

Altrusa Year Brimful; Other Business Club Women Ready for Festive Events

By ANNE GILCHRIST

A year brimful of interesting meetings and project activities was outlined to Altrusa Club members by program coordinator Myrtle Poultney when the fast-growing women's service club met at the Lafayette Hotel Monday for first meeting after summer vacation.

Each chairman of the four divisions—Dr. Ethel West, Altrusa Information; Helen Mayfield, public affairs; Joyce Jacoubowsky, international relations; and Mary Lou Zehms, vocational information—will be responsible for three meetings throughout the year with the exception of the October meeting which will be planned by Leah Sekorah, Grants-in-Aid chairman.

Miss Poultney introduced as speaker of the evening Altrusan Joyce Jacoubowski who, since 1947 has contributed of her time and talents to the American Association of the United Nations.

This dynamic woman told of her experiences last June at UN sessions in San Francisco which she attended as an accredited observer for Altrusa International. The common theme, she said, was the respect won by UN for what it was and what it had done: It's stand in Korea; negotiations on disarmament; peaceful use of atomic energy; economic aid for underdeveloped countries; helping people toward self-government.

Cooperation and co-existence were major subjects covered as well as security, and how it could be achieved, with regional agreements the only possible answer at the present time.

Quota Club

One of the best parts of vacation is coming home and realizing that, after all, it's a pretty good place to be. So it was when Quota reconvened at Miller's restaurant for its first fall business meeting following a lessening of activities during the summer.

Principal matter of business was discussion of plans for Quota's 25th district conference at the Lafayette Oct. 14, 15, 16. Though Marguerite Wood, general chairman of the occasion, was unable to be present following a recent sojourn at Seaside Hospital, the report she sent showed many hours of thoughtful planning for the conference, theme for which will be "Service With Understanding."

Another action of particular importance to the club was the postponement of its annual silver tea from September to November for this year only.

Connie Brown's streamlining of lengthy business and much correspondence is always a marvel to Quota's members, but she was aided materially by frequent inquiries as to the time. These were levelled at Rada Metcalf, recently returned from a three-month tour of Europe, who wore an exquisite finger ring purchased in Switzerland. When the tiny lid is lifted on the ring a watch about half the size of a dime is disclosed, and its accurate time closed the meeting at an early hour.

Dental Assistants

Great plans are shaping up for the annual "Doctor's Night" party which Dental Assistants of the Harbor District chapter give in honor of their bosses each year. With President Viola Engel spearheading the various committees hard at work on elaborate party ideas, the assistants hope to make this the most enjoyable dinner affair ever.

Scheduled for Sept. 26 in the Supper Room of the Lafayette Hotel, program chairman Harriet Beadle has announced that program theme will be, "A Night at the Moulin Rouge." Table decorations as well as program will follow the sophisticated theme. Eva Miner is general chairman and many are the secrets which she and her subcommittee chairmen will not divulge until the doctors, their wives, members and guests are gathered for the affair.

It is known, however, that many secretive rehearsals have been in progress for some time and that group members and several doctors, too, are cast in important roles.

Medical Lab. Technicians

The Harbor chapter of the California Association of Medical Laboratory Technicians had first meeting of the new club year at the home of Virginia Sowers and Jean Fitzhugh recently. A cooling swim was followed by an informal hotdog bake. The 30 members and their guests in attendance were grateful to Sally Ames and her committee for a particularly pleasant evening.

ANE Meeting

California Association for Nursery Education, Southern Section, had an executive board meeting and patio luncheon Sept. 10 at the Emerald Bay home of Mrs. Evelyn Bell, of Laguna. Attending from Long Beach were Harbor area chapter president Josephine Burgess; Wilma Dahlquist, president-elect; and Barbara Shirley, Kathryn Mitchell, Betty Inman and Elizabeth Robertson.

Members discussed the recent merger of section associations into a California Assoc. for Nursery Education as well as future plans for the year-old Consulting Service of the Southern Section.

Vacations

Neva Blust (U.S. Naval Station) has just returned from a two-weeks vacation jaunt spent with her family. It was a rough 'n ready camping trip with stops in such state parks as Morro Bay, Big Sur and Pismo Beach. Ardent campers, Neva claims nothing this side of heaven smells quite so good as coffee brewing and bacon sizzling outdoors in clear, morning air.

Another member of National Secretaries Assoc. back on the job after vacation days is Luella Darnell who motored to Reno, Lake Tahoe, San Francisco and Carmel.

Equal portions of sightseeing and fishing filled holiday time-out to perfection for Geraldine Hortsman and her family when they motored to Eugene, Ore.

Among the most welcome of summertime visitors to Long Beach has been Mrs. Frank L. Hamilton of Enid, Okla., who visited her daughter, Dean Stuart, for several weeks.

Ozark, Ala., Panama City, Fla. and New Orleans were among the deep South stops made by Alma Reimauk on her recent vacation journeys.

Caribbean Trip Follows McGowan-Ryan Nuptials

Leaving today for a lengthy honeymoon in Nassau, Jamaica, Haiti and New Orleans are newly wedded Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. McGowan Jr., (Helen K. Ryan, 26 10th Pl.) who were married Saturday in afternoon services at St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Ryan, Owosso, Mich., wore a lovely Priscilla of Boston gown fashioned of rose patterned Chantilly lace with Italian Guipura lace trim. The long torso bodice extended to a smooth, flaring skirt, and a pure silk bridal illusion veil, fingertip length, cascaded gently from a lace crown trimmed with dainty seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids, lilies-of-the-valley and stephanotis.

Mrs. L. H. Glaser, matron of honor, carried cascades of Virginia pink carnations centered with clusters of roselfies, while bridesmaids Miss Millicent Percy, Mrs. A. M. McMahon, Miss Barbara Furse and Miss Louella Sandstrom held cascade bouquets of pink carnations alone. They wore identical gowns of Wedgwood blue taffeta, styled with long torso bodices and bouffant skirts. The off-the-shoulder necklines were trimmed with blue velvet which continued in panels down the back.

As his best man, the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. McGowan Sr., 2173 Pine Ave., chose A. M. McMahon. Seating the 350 wedding guests were Robert Ryan, the bride's brother, Lewis Hopkins, Dr. Edwin Squire and L. A. Brown.

The newlyweds greeted their well-wishers at a reception in the Pacific Coast Club. Assisting were Mmes. J. S. Moore Sr., E. J. Squire and Jessie Barnard.

A member of Beta Sigma Phi, Eta Tau Chapter, the bride attended Marygrove College in Detroit, Mich., graduated from St. Lawrence School of Nursing and did post-graduate work at Marquette University. Her husband, a graduate of Wilson High School, attended Univeristy of Oregon and received his degree from the University of Southern California. He is an affiliate of Phi Delta Theta.

Repeat Lines in Nevada

The Little Church of the West in Las Vegas, Nev., was the setting for the recent marriage of John B. Sargeant, son of Mrs. Sydney R. Smith of 45 54th Pl. and Mary MacDonald McCuish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander McCuish of Glasgow, Scotland.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Polytechnic High School and City College. He met his bride in Scotland during a four months' tour of Europe.

Child Care

Child Needs Outlet for His Energy

By MILTON I. LEVINE, M.D. and JEAN H. SELIGMANN

(Q) "My little boy is now 16 months old and he is still in the 'get into everything' stage. I do a lot of spanking and have gotten some results. I laugh and enjoy my son's antics (as suggested by the letter quoted in your article)—but I am interested in other ways of disciplining a child 1 to 2 years of age. Your quoted letter says, '. . . there are certainly other ways (of disciplining) than spanking especially for a 1-year-old.' I would appreciate your elaborating on this point, as I could use some good suggestions."—Mrs. O. S.

(A) If one thinks of discipline as guiding and directing rather than as punishment, it is somewhat easier to figure out how to handle one's offspring at a given moment. For example, if your youngster starts to tear the pages out of your good books, take him away and give him some old magazines or newspapers which he can tear to his heart's content. Even if he cries, the crying usually will not last too long if a new interest can be substituted. After all, a child of 16 months does not know the value of books or ornaments, or any other objects which may be important to you. He is only trying to find out about the world.

Many times, when a child does something which you do not want him to do, you can let him know by your tone of voice and by your attitude that you disapprove. Also, a firm "no" once in a while can be very effective. If he hits or bites another child, or continues at some activity which you want him to stop, you can simply pick him up and bring him somewhere else for the time being.

Remember that little children have a tremendous amount of energy and must find adequate outlet for it. They must be allowed to make noise sometimes, to run around and explore, to get themselves dirty. If you cannot follow your youngster around all the time—and who can?—be sure that he has plenty of play material to interest him.

Spankings should be reserved for those very special situations where the child might be endangering himself or someone else.

NAS Wives Give Party, Will Elect

Naval Air Station Los Alamitos Officers Wives Club was hostess at a lovely benefit bridge party recently in the Garden Grove home of Mrs. Art McDonald. Tables were laid in the patio and after luncheon the afternoon was spent leisurely at bridge and canasta.

High scores for the day were held by Mrs. J. C. Aggerbeck and Mrs. R. R. Lovelady and the door award was given to Mrs. Lovelady, doubly fortunate that day.

Hostesses for the party were Mmes. R. E. Malmfeldt, Olav Skaartland and Dan Sundberg. The Wives Club, among recent philanthropic activities, donated a combination radio-phonograph to the Dependent's Ward at the Naval Hospital, Corona.

THE SHOE WITH THE BEAUTIFUL FIT

Episcopal Service Unites Pair

St. Thomas Episcopal Church was setting last Saturday afternoon for the beautiful nuptial service which united Carol Louise Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilkins Sheppard, 4201 Gaviota Ave., and Howard Elmer Dienger of Selma.

Rev. Hiram Crosby read the double-ring vows before 150 wedding guests.

Illuminated by candlelight, the lovely altar was banked with arrangements of white gladioli, asters and stock. White satin ribbon caught to the pews with clusters of the same blossoms marked the bridal aisle.

Given in marriage by her father, the attractive bride wore a gown of white Chantilly lace and nylon tulle over satin, fashioned with a lace bodice and portrait neckline. Insets of the lace adorned the bouffant tulle skirt. A pearl edged headpiece held her fingertip length veil, and she wore the pearls and lace handkerchief used by her mother in her own wedding. A white orchid with stephanotis and lilies of the valley completed her bridal attire.

—Curl Ray Studio

Mrs. Howard Elmer Dienger

Beverly Joe Simpson was maid of honor and Marjorie Davis and Jesslyn Pesante attended as bridesmaids. All were gowned identically in fall shade dresses of lemon yellow nylon chiffon, enhanced by sashes of vivid orange chiffon and matching gloves and slippers. Their headpieces and bouquets were of talisman roses.

Richard Fuendeling served the bridegroom as best man, and ushering duties were performed by Carl Walter and Ronald Baker.

A reception followed in the church parish hall where the happy pair was assisted in receiving guests by their mothers. Mrs. Sheppard chose a gown of mauve lace and nylon tulle for the occasion and wore matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in dusty rose nylon tulle with matching accessories. Both wore green cymbidium corsages.

The delicate fall shades of the gowns worn by attendants were echoed in reception decor. The tiered cake was iced in pale yellow and nestled in a wreath of maiden hair fern and gardenias. Miss Linda Leybe presided at the guest book, and reception hostesses were Mmes. Matthew Simpson, Robert Leybe, Leroy Shaw and Lucile Peck. A dinner party for the wedding attendants followed at Brower's.

The newlyweds planned a honeymoon trip to the Beverly Hills Hotel and Palm Springs, and later will motor to Grand Canyon, Bryce Canyon and Zion Park. They will be at home after Oct. 1 at 1020 Amarillo in Palo Alto while both further their educations at Stanford University. The newlyweds are active in music circles at Stanford, both belonging to the University Chorus and participating in the operas and music festivals given annually at the school. The bride was graduated from Polytechnic High School. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dienger of Selma, was graduated from Selma High School and Stanford.

Canadian Trip Pleases Pair

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bickel have penned glowing remarks in highest compliment to their vacation terraine around Victoria and Vancouver, B. C., Canada. Particularly impressed with the parks, lakes and gardens of the area, Mrs. Bickel wistfully wishes for something akin in Long Beach.

Not all sightseeing, the vacationing pair is spending ample time fishing to take their share of such desired northern fish as cohoe and grilse although they were unable to land the big ones known as tyee.

Mrs. Robert H. Nicholson Jr.

Nicholson-Nerrie Lines Spoken in Nuptial Mass

Two hundred guests witnessed the exchange of rings and nuptial vows during a morning mass Sept. 10 which united in marriage Barbara Ann Nerrie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Nerrie, 1025 Raymond Ave., and Robert H. Nicholson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Nicholson Cr., Westminster.

A colonial bouquet of stephanotis and carnations centered with a single white orchid was carried by the youthful bride as she was escorted down the aisle by her father. Her floor length gown was of tulle and lace over satin fashioned with scoop neckline, long sleeves and bouffant tulle skirt over lace illusion. Her filmy fingertip length veil cascaded from a crown of satin edged in pearls.

Jeanette Marcus, as maid of honor, carried a basket of pale pink carnations with aqua ribbons. Her street length dress, styled like the bride's gown, was of pale pink crystalene. In aqua crystalene and holding baskets of pale pink carnations and pink streamers were bridesmaids Virginia Reynolds, Pat Carey and Carole Amend. A velvet band with dainty blossoms adorned each attendant's hair. Linda Munch, cousin of the bride, was the little flower girl.

Performing the duties of best man was James Johnson, while seating guests were Harvey Jones, Don Nicholson and Jed Nerrie.

Assistance League Clubhouse was the setting for the reception following the nuptial service. Miss Sally Moody was in charge of the guest book. Hostesses were Misses Margie Mattocks, Jennie Miller, Dorla Tilley, Joy Bybee, Maureen Poehlein and Helen Snell.

A graduate of Wilson High School, the bride attended the University of Redlands. Her husband, also a Wilson graduate, is serving with the U.S. Air Force and was graduated from Electronic School at Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

The newlyweds are en route to Savannah, Ga., where the bridegroom is stationed at Hunter Air Force Base.

ENGAGEMENT

Wilson High School graduates Jo Anne Hughes and Richard Earl Partch are revealing their engagement. The bride-elect, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hughes of 3807 Sebren Ave., attends City College, where she is a member of Mahabharata. Her fiance, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Home from East Coast

A delightfully refreshing vacation has ended for Mrs. Grace J. Ewart who returned to her home at 118 Pomona Ave. after spending much of the summer on the Jersey coast at Spring Lake where she was a guest at the Monmouth Hotel, and at Lake George, N. Y., snuggled in the foothills of the Adirondack Mts.

In addition, the vacationer was in New York City where she attended a dancing teachers' convention as well as enjoying the usual traveler's delights in the big city. While in New Jersey Mrs. Ewart was witness to the hurricane known as Connie. In the area where she was staying no serious damage was done although many trees were blown down. Another travel highlight was her trek across country, both ways, made by DC-7. Having made the trip across the United States 16 times by air, Mrs. Ewart found this to be the most pleasant trip ever.

Zeva Ward Newly Returned From Five Months Abroad

Newly returned to her Long Beach home, 1631 E. Second St. after five months abroad is Mrs. Zeva M. Ward, widow of the late Eugene R. Ward. She returned on the World Cruise liner Orcades on its initial trip to Southern California.

She chose the liner for transportation because of its visits through the Caribbean Sea via Trinidad and the Panama Canal, in preference to following the departing route which took her via airlines to New York, and to England aboard the Queen Elizabeth.

Mrs. Ward traveled through most of the European countries, including the British Isles and all of Scandinavia and the islands of the Mediterranean. A part of the trip was made in the company of 14 other American citizens, several of them from Long Beach, who traveled throughout the continent by bus, steamship and rail. Arriving in England in the early spring, she found the countryside ablaze with blossoms and the weather the finest it had been in years.

Remembered especially was her visit to Jungfraujoch in Switzerland, and the lovely trip from Vienna, along the base of the towering Tyrolian Alps, to Bad Gastein. Mrs. Ward also reminisces fondly of visits in Italy, the French Riviera, France and Belgium.

One of the interesting and prized posessions of Mrs. Ward is the story of the Walpole Brothers, Ltd., given to her by its present owner. Originally founded in Dublin in 1766, its London location on Sloane St. features that city's only hydraulic elevator, or "lift" as it is known in that country.

State College Staff Picnic

An all-college staff picnic will be given Sept. 24 from 3 to 5 p. m. in Houghton Park by the Long Beach State College Faculty Wives. More than 400 guests are expected for the annual affair, the initial event of the school year.

Give Friendship Tea

The beautiful home of Mrs. Lon E. Peek, 703 E. Roosevelt Rd., was setting for the lovely Friendship Tea given by Ebell Juniors Friday.

This tea honors new and prospective members of the club and serves as a grand opening for the club year. Approximately 450 members and guests enjoyed Mrs. Peek's hospitality and were served from the beautifully decorated tea tables.

A strikingly handsome centerpiece of shades of pink carnations and antherium graced the table in Mrs. Peek's rose and blue dining room. The tea tables in the patio were adorned with yellow chrysanthemums and Peruvian lilies. Sparkling butterflies and umbrella poles gaily wound with yellow satin ribbon and bows further added to the attractive decor.

Those pouring were Mrs. Will H. Winston, president of Senior Ebell, Mmes. Jessie M. Armstrong and Arthur F. Bonzer, advisors from the senior club, Mrs. Charles Brantingham, junior past president of Ebell Juniors, and Mmes. Joseph Striegel, Arthur Knoll, Wilbur Seils, John Lower, Robert Ludlum, Walter Yaisti, W. A. Nesbitt, Daniel Hughes, and Orville Evans.

Mmes. B. J. Quinn, Henry Logan, and John C. Dixon were in charge of the tea.

Some of his local pupils will join the Seethalers in Europe. Germany or Austria will be chosen as a suitable location. Seethaler says that in 10 years, about 2,000 students have attended the Academy here.

The final semester of the Academy in Brittany Gardens, 1st St. and Atlantic Ave., will start Oct. 1 and end next March 31. Registrations must be for the whole semester of six months. No more students (new or old) will be accepted after Oct. 1.

Theme for the 1955-56 season is "Catching Up With Our Times." The Baroque lecture is the first of the coordinated, consecutive series tracing the causative relationship of art and the era. Through assistance of the Long Beach public library, documentary films will be shown.

The program is open to Art Association members and guests.

Mrs. Florence Gendron will have charge of a crafts exhibit. Mrs. Lee Ison and her committee will serve refreshments.

Today is the final day to see the Long Beach and vicinity non-juried show and drawings by 20th Century masters, borrowed from the Guggenheim Museum, at the Municipal Art Center. The Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., is open Tuesdays through Fridays, 9-5, and Sundays, 1-6.

Two new shows will open Sept. 25 and run through Oct. 23. They will be a collection of modern portraits by leading contemporary artists, many posed by nationally known figures, from the Museum of Modern Art, New York, and an "idea" show called "Signs and Symbols." This second show will include Japanese brushwork writing and modern paintings and sculpture showing the trend toward abstract signs.

Municipal Art Director Sam Heavenrich is home after five weeks in San Francisco, Boston, New York and Vermont, combining a vacation with lining up new shows for the Art Center. Mrs. Heavenrich will remain for a couple of weeks at Wellington, Vt., where the Heavenriches own an 18th Century home which they are remodeling. "We have six carpenters, two painters and two gardeners all over the place," says the art director.

New shows obtained for the Art Center include textiles and decorative arts of India, now at the Museum of Modern Art in New York; "Art in Antiquity," at the Metropolitan Museum; photographs of Venetian palaces and fabrics of the Renaissance; European glassware; "Space and Structure" architecture; rugs; Old Master paintings and objects, and contemporary paintings from the Neuberger collection.

Twenty paintings by William Dudley and his son, Jack Dudley, both members of the Spectrum Club, were hung Saturday in the Lafayette Hotel where they will remain through Oct. 14.

"Pink Star," a Christmas card designed by Bud Overholtzer of Long Beach, took an award in the Famous Artists Magazine and Hallmark Cards competition. From 1,300 entries, 30 designs were chosen for $50 awards.

Vacations, Parties Take Social Spotlight Center

By BERNICE AHRENDES

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Lyle of Lakewood with their children David and Karen have returned from an exciting vacation spent in the scenic wonderland of Southern Utah and Arizona.

They camped out among the high mountains at Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon and the Grand Canyon. At the Indian ruins of Wapatki and Walnut Canyon they saw cliff dwellings and pueblos still in good preservation, and brought home with them arrow heads and pieces of pottery they found while there.

Simeon Davis of 5913 Graywood was pleasantly surprised on his birthday, Sept. 8. His lovely wife Lucille planned a celebration though confined to a wheel-chair. Birthday greeters were Mr. and Mrs. Don V. Richardson and their children Vici and Robin.

A watermelon scooped out in the center and carved like a bassinet made an interesting centerpiece at a stork shower given Tuesday to honor Mrs. Robert Maxwell of Long Beach. Iced lemonade was served from the bassinet by the clever hostess Mrs. Jay Luster.

A buffet luncheon was served to Mmes. Helen Werner, June Swenson, Doris Brundle, Violet Kniesel, Audry Brown, Marie Stanley, Verne Lesher, Bonnie Eubank, Joan McInnis and Harriet Swenson. Lemon yellow and mint green were used to carry out color decor.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Coons with their son Mike are now settling back after a busy vacation during which they enjoyed seeing spots of interest here at home. Farthercst spot away was at San Diego where they spent two days, but they took in all the tourist attractions nearer to home.

Monday evening a surprise birthday party was given honoring Katie Cook. Bud, her husband, planned the affair on the spur of the moment and it turned out all the guests had more fun than if they would have known about it for weeks. Delicious refreshments of home made pie, birthday cake, ice cream and sherbet punch were served to Dick and Delore McClure, Jim and Leui Bray, Carl and Evelyn Dreyer, Mae and Pat Buetiner, Joan McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Baxter Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gerald, Herbie and Lois Butcher, Dick and Darlene Helvern, r. and Mrs. T. A. Baxter Sr., Jack and Bernice Ahrendes, Hazel Hoeft and Phyllis Gakle.

A round of showers has kept Judy Ann Conk busy before her wedding day on Sept. 20. She will wed Clifford Jones in the Westminster Community Presbyterian Church in Long Beach. Rev. Wendell Greenlee will perform the ceremony.

On Friday, Sept. 9, Mrs. Earl DuVall of 6044 Bonfair entertained. The theme of the party was carried out in pink and white and a large pink and white umbrella was suspended from the ceiling. From the handle pink and white streamers extended to a decorated card table. Here gifts were placed by Mmes. Russell Conk, Roland Barron, David Adams, Earl Erumwell, Ray Pearson, William Ricly, Bill Harlan and the grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Agnes Conk of Long Beach.

On Friday, Sept. 16, members of the family were invited to a shower at the Russell Conks' home at 6045 Blackthorne.

TELL TROTH

A large cake decked with yellow flowers and engraved with names of the betrothed pair served to announce the engagement of Rita Paula Fox and James P. Meckoll during a party for relatives and friends given by parents of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Fox, 731 Lime Ave. No wedding date has been set. Miss Fox was graduated from St. Anthony's High School. Her fiance, son of Peter S. Meckoll of Los Angeles, is a graduate of Loyola High School and USC.

Wrong Bid Hurts Hand

The play of today's hand was short and sweet. West opened the six of diamonds, and East took the first two tricks with the queen and ace. South mournfully claimed the rest of the tricks, and the opponents were happy to surrender them. They were pleased to score a profit of 100 points on a hand that might well have produced a loss of more than 1400 points.

What went wrong in the bidding? Who made a mistake, and what should the correct bid have been?

There was nothing wrong with South's bidding. He was a bit conservative at his second turn with a bid of only two clubs, but he wasn't particularly encouraged by a response in his void suit.

North made the fatal error when he accepted the invitation. He should have bid five no trump instead of six hearts. He knew that South had a tremendous two-suiter in hearts and clubs. North had a queen for each of his partner's suits, and he had a king and an ace in the two other suits.

Obviously, both of South's long suits were ready to run. The only problem was to avoid the loss of two tricks at the very outset. South would have accepted the invitation by raising to six no-trump, and no opening lead (nor anything else) would have defeated this slam.

The point is that some slam contracts must be played from a particular side of the table to avoid a lead through a king. This hand should have been spotted as belonging to this category.

Doing Things for Others Makes for a Happy Life

By ANGELO PATRI

Boys and girls, you want to be liked. Everybody does but some people seem not to know how to go about it. Some think that having a lot of money and showing it, by spending it on treats for all and everyone, is the way. Some try to make the grade by saying "Yes," to anything that is asked. Naturally, they soon learn this doesn't work.

The truth is that you cannot buy your way with money or gifts or subservience. But there is an unfailing way and a simple one. Give your best in service without asking or expecting a return. That does it.

So you begin by taking a pencil and a notebook and setting down the things you can do to be of service to other people. Begin at home. What can you do to make your mother's and your father's work lighter? Not just what you would like to do, remember, but what you CAN do—putting your bedroom in order, leaving the bathroom shipshape, helping entertain the friend of the family you least admire.

Then go outside the family. There is the teacher. A smile and a cordial good morning? A flower? A helping hand with the room equipment? Holding the door open for him? Having your notebook in on time and neatly done? He may faint but he will enjoy the experience.

Schoolmates? Stand back to let a girl pass. Give someone else a chance to have first choice at the cafeteria and smile while you do so. Congratulate a fellow pupil on a good mark or a good recitation. Send a get-well card to one who is ill or a note to one in trouble. Do your share of the unpleasant jobs, like being ticket chairman. Offer help when there is a mean job to be done or, if you're stuck with it, grin and carry it through as if it were a mission to Shangri La. Have fun spending your sunny self.

People, all people, and that includes everybody from grandfather to the new baby, are lonely. When a boy or girl stops on his way to lend a hand, if it is only to open a door or hand a newspaper, smile at a baby or escort an old person across the street, he makes the day brighter for all he meets and what is more, he adds to his own stature.

Come right down to it, the most profitable investment in life is what one gives of himself, his time, his thought, to others. Unselfishness becomes the highest form of selfishness because it unfolds love and love is, as you know, the greatest force in the world of men. Try it. You'll be liked.

To say "don't" does not teach a child in obedience, but proper training will. Dr. Patri tells how to train a child in obedience in his booklet No. 301. To obtain a copy send 25 cents in coin to him, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

Rear Adm. William J. Marshall

Chef of the Week

Commander Imports Food Intrigue From Far East

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

He's "at sea" vocationwise . . . but not avocationwise, you may be sure! Rear Adm. William J. Marshall, who serves our Navy as commander of Destroyer Flotilla 1, makes his debut today as Chef of the Week with a backlog of recipes which run the gamut of cakes 'n pies to Oriental dishes. Aboard his flagship the USS Hamul, he alternates his "at home" quarters between our shores and Japan.

Born in the "saaouth," Henderson, Ky., he attended that State's Center College, before entering the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. He was a member of both the track and swimming teams, and pledged Phi Delta Theta.

His first assignment was the old battleship Texas, the only battleship that ever returned home. She's now "enmothballed" in cement for posterity to see.

World War II supplied him the backdrop for many scenes. He saw action as the leader of destroyer groups in the South American waters, in the Normandy invasion, and in both the Okinawa and the Philippines battles. Convoy duty occupied him, too. He received the Croix de Guerre for his activity in the Normandy invasion on D-Day, and is also possessor of the Silver Star and Bronze Star among many other awards.

Following two years in Washington, D.C., as senior aide and executive assistant to Rear Adm. Robert C. Carney, chief of Naval operations, he was sent to Rome as Naval Attache. From there he went to Japan.

As a cook, he has an international reputation. An avid hunter and fisherman, he has shot, and cooked, everything from wild boar in Italy, wild turkey in Virginia, to quail, partridge and duck. Whatever he does, he does well, and has, according to our sleuth, never been known to fail on a menu or a meal. His wonderful palate for herbs, wines and condiments stands him well; and if ever you're invited to his home to dinner . . . be real sure to leave your imagination at home.

Fact is, not only could our "chef" write a cookbook, but one about his actual experiences, as well. For instance, about the time he ordered a 4-minute, soft boiled egg in Italy. No one ever heard of a boiled egg in Italy, you know. He could tell about the time he prepared an iguana (big land lizard) from the Galapagos Islands. Even their cook thought it was possessed of evil spirits.

Though he is a past master at Sukiyaki, a dish he perfected while attending a cooking class in Japan (he was the only man in a class of 10 women), today he's giving us his recipe for Braised Mushrooms and Bamboo Shoots.

Braised mushrooms and bamboo shoots—serves four.

- 1 cup bamboo shoots
- 1 cup mushrooms
- 1 tbs. fresh green peas, for color
- 2½ tbs. soya sauce, 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 cup chicken broth, stock or consomme
- 2½ tbs. cooking oil

Slice bamboo and mushrooms in long thin strips before measuring. Use either canned or fresh variety. Heat oil in pan to medium heat and add bamboo and mushrooms, cook for 3 minutes stirring constantly. Add chicken broth and turn up heat. Add soya sauce and boil for 3 min. Add sugar, turn down heat and simmer until almost dry. Mix ½ tsp. corn starch with a little water and add. Add peas and cook 1 min. Add ½ tbs. sesame oil or 1 tsp. chopped sesame seeds, stir well and remove from fire.

Braswell-Mefford Names Linked

Why Grow Old?

Exercises for Fatty Deposits in Certain Areas of the Body

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Many women who are the correct weight, who have slim waists and flat abdomens, nevertheless have fatty deposits over the diaphragm. Others have quite slender figures but have lots of fat across the shoulders.

Special exercise rather than diet is the answer to these figure defects. If such a woman diets she will lose all over, in the spots in which she does not wish to lose as well as in the ones she wants to decrease. Also, she would lose weight which she should have. Today I will give you a few exercises for these special problems.

For slimming the diaphragm: Stand tall. Raise your arms over your head, one arm by each ear. Keep the arms in this position as you make large circles with your trunk. Pull in each direction, making the circles as large as comfortable. Circle first in one direction and then in the other.

Another: Lie on the floor on your back, arms resting on the floor at your sides. Stretch back with the left arm and forward with the right leg. The arm and leg do not leave the floor. Do this slowly and hold at the maximum stretch while you count slowly to five. Relax. Next, stretch backward with the right arm and forward with the left leg. Hold. Relax and repeat. About ten times with each arm and leg.

Now let us consider first aid for fat across the shoulders. Stand erect. Raise both arms sideward, shoulder height, palms facing forward. Do this in a relaxed manner. Now swing the arms forward at shoulder height and cross the arms, pulling as far across as possible. Elbows are relaxed when you do this. The pull comes from the shoulders. Hold a few seconds. Return arms to sideward, shoulder height position, in a relaxed manner. Continue.

Another: Stand tall. Bend at the waist until your trunk is at right angles to your legs. Raise your arms overhead. Keep the arms in this position as you swing your trunk as far to the left as possible and then as far to the right as you can. Continue. Raise the trunk and return arms to sides. Repeat.

All of these exercises should be done in a relaxed, slow manner because the stretch is the principle on which they rely.

If you would like to have my exercises for waist slimming send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 6 to Josephine Lowman, in care of The Press-Telegram.

This feature appears daily in the Press-Telegram.

Mr. Don L. Nutter
Retail Advertising Manager
Independent, Press-Telegram
Long Beach, California

Dear Mr. Nutter:

Did you know we attribute our promotional and expansion success to the Independent and Press-Telegram?

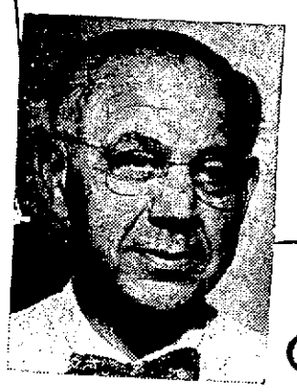

Let me remind you of our last meeting just to be sure you remember our conversation. I timed our story from Dinel's life span starting in 1939...and now 400,000 dresses later, 300,000 hats later, 500,000 sports clothes later and nearly half a million coats, suits and accessories later, I say we are glad we did. Remember, too, 90% of Dinel's advertising budget has been in your paper, and consistently, too. We liked it...did you?

Dinel's and their store family send greetings and appreciation to you at the Independent, Press-Telegram for service beyond the call of duty. You helped considerably by your clean printing copy and by delivering our ad to 145,000 of our friends, which brings us closer to our potential trade.

In line with our expansion program we have plans to announce a second store that will open on or about Nov. 15 in the new Los Altos district, which will duplicate our store on 505 E. Ocean and make it convenient for our present customers, as well as new customers to shop in a Dinel store.

Best wishes, my friend.

Sincerely,
Art Dinel

Childhood Stuttering a Part of Normal Development

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Case P-342: Danny R., aged 3, is a bright little boy.

"But, Dr. Crane, we are so worried about him," his mother exclaimed. "For Danny is beginning to stutter horribly. Everybody notices it, and we are so afraid it might become permanent.

"I've tried to correct him and so has his Daddy, but that seems to make it worse. We are at the end of our wits. What do psychologists advise in such a case for we don't want him handicapped by stuttering all his life?"

Stuttering is a normal and natural stage in the development of children of pre-school age. For when bright youngsters like Danny get excited and wish to express themselves, they have a much larger "understanding" vocabulary than their "speaking" vocabulary.

And that is the natural result in learning any new language. If you adults ever studied Spanish or German or French in high school, you may recall that you could understand the written and spoken language better than you could speak it yourself.

If Danny's neurotic parents will just remedy their own tense personalities and leave Danny alone, he will get over this normal stage of stuttering in a year or two.

For then his "speaking" vocabulary will overtake his "understanding" vocabulary.

If, however, they make an issue of his perfectly normal toddler stuttering and get him self-conscious and fearful, then they can actually "set" that stuttering as a permanent handicap to his personality.

A cardinal rule of child psychology states that parents should ignore the toddler stage of stuttering and NEVER make an issue of it or "bawl out" the child.

But suppose you encounter a stutterer who is in the teens or a mature adult. What then? Well, they can be reassured by realizing that a lot of distinguished people have been in the same boat with them, including Moses and Demosthenes, as well as Churchill and the former King of England.

Stuttering is simply a nuisance habit that attaches to (1) the act of speaking your native tongue, (2) to other human beings and (3) in your usual conversational tones.

Draw a triangle and place one of those numbered items on each corner. That's the typical picture of chronic stuttering in an adult.

The cure consists in altering any one of those three items. For example, if the stutterer speaks in a foreign language, he may be entirely free from stuttering. Or if he reads aloud or sings, he is O. K.

Second, let him talk to the dogs or horses or other non-human creatures, and he can enunciate smoothly.

Third, let him pitch his voice higher or lower than normally so he alters the normal conversational tones, and he can generally get along very well.

One of the best and quickest remedies is for the stutterer to alter his normal conversational pattern at (3) above, as by biting his tongue between his molar teeth.

Then keep the tongue imprisoned between those teeth and try to carry on conversation. This simple trick can work wonders in helping free a confirmed stutterer from his nuisance habit of stuttering.

But never entrench ordinary childish stuttering by making an issue of it, as Danny's mother has been doing.

Send for my bulletin on "Stuttering." Please enclose a long, 3c stamped self-addressed envelope and a dime in requesting a Dr. Crane bulletin. Address: Dr. George W. Crane, in care of Hopkins Syndicate, Mallott, Ind.

Church Mothers

Mothers of St. Luke's Church School will open the fall year with a 10:30 a.m. business session Thursday at the church, preceded by Holy Communion. A pot luck luncheon and program are planned.

Molly Mayfield

Deal Me in This Hand, Hubby!

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I have a good husband, believe me. In fact, he is too good sometimes. But nonetheless we have a problem.

You see, about three times a week he goes out to play cards. Not that this is so bad in itself. BUT he leaves home around 6 p. m. and doesn't return until the wee small hours. And by wee small hours I mean two-ish or three-ish—a. m., of course.

Meantime I take care of the business every night until closing time. When I get home I have four walls to look at. Oh, there's a TV, but it's no fun just sitting there watching it alone. Not night after night, anyway.

Another thing, these men he plays cards with bet rather heavily and I live in constant terror that my husband will lose more than we can afford. It's easy to do when you're gambling, you know.

Frankly, Molly, the whole situation upsets me terribly and the long and short of it is I'm miserable. Doubtless you're asking yourself why I haven't taken the matter up with my husband. Well, I have—and I told him I was going to write to you for advice. He said, "Whatever she decides I'll do willingly." So there you are.

Please help me, Molly, as I want to keep my husband and home together.—MISERABLE AND LONESOME WIFE.

DEAR M. AND L. WIFE:

Yipes, I feel terribly responsible! Do you suppose he'll really do what I—or we—decide? He must know that I'll side with you, don't you think?

It seems so obvious that no wife wants to be left home alone, and especially till all hours, three whole nights out of the week. And naturally no wife wants her husband betting money which he can't afford. Gambling debts can be worrisome things, and have wrecked many a home.

Why don't you get him to cut his card games to one a week? And why don't you get him to promise to set up a budget for his games, a sort of fund to play with, and when he reaches the limit he stops? And while you're at it, why don't you tap him for his winnings as your reward for minding the business and sitting home alone?

And, speaking of betting, I wonder what the odds are that he won't like Auntie Molly's advice!—M. M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I don't know why I write because it's too late for any advice. I don't suppose you know how sad a phrase "too late" can be.

You see, I was married to a fine man. We had three little boys. My husband was a hard-working man, a good provider. But we had little excitement in our lives. We lived the usual mundane life in a small suburb, with money enough to get along nicely, but not luxuriously.

I went for a few weeks to visit my mother, and I met this man who, measured by our standards, was quite wealthy. I fell madly in love with him—and he with me. And, to make a long story short, we ran away together. Nothing else in the world seemed to matter but our being together.

That was five years ago. What I thought was love was not. Months later he went his way, and I went mine. But it was too late. My husband divorced me. I have not seen my boys. And I'm as alone as a person can be. I learned "too late."—MARTHA M.

THE TOUCH OF A HAND

by HELEN KELLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Helen Keller has devoted her entire life to the encouragement of the handicapped. Left totally blind and deaf by illness when she was 19 months old, she learned to communicate through a system of symbols traced in her palm by her teacher, Anne Sullivan. After graduating from Radcliffe College in 1904, Miss Keller became internationally famous as an author, lecturer and entertainer. Last June 27, the world celebrated her 75th birthday. This week will be marked by the publication of her latest book, Teacher (Doubleday, $4.50), a biography of her beloved mentor.

Were you ever at sea in dense fog when it seemed as if a tangible white darkness shut you in? "Light! Give me light!" — that was the wordless cry of my soul in my early childhood.

Then one day when I was six, I stretched out my hand; someone took it, and I was caught up and held close in the arms of her who had come to reveal all things to me, and more than all things else, to love me.

That was the most important day I remember in all my life — March 3, 1887 — the day on which my teacher Anne Sullivan came to me.

Before she came, I did not know that I am. I cannot hope to describe adequately that unconscious yet conscious time of nothingness. I did not know that I lived or acted or desired.

Through my teacher's infinite patience, love and understanding, my left hand slowly became to me what your hearing and sight together are to you.

As I ponder on Anne Sullivan's work, I am further impressed by one of her most beneficent experiments — inspiring me to explore and make a home in the still obscure but wonderful country of individual consciousness.

THE AUTHOR (seated), at the age of 13, holds hand of her teacher, Anne Sullivan, who helped her overcome handicaps.

She knew that, deprived of sight and hearing, I couldn't depend on the community of experience that springs from the use of the eye and the ear. Therefore, as I grew older, she urged me to go as deeply as possible into the wilderness of myself as an individual.

I have never given up the belief that intelligent cooperation with our fellowman is essential to progress, but it seems to me that the development of each person's resources and abilities is equally important.

In my case it was a slow process, and it required all Teacher's persistence and ingenuity to keep alive the spark that would make of me an individual human being with freedom to be myself.

It was not until after the start of World War II, when I spent two and a half years visiting wounded servicemen in hospitals from coast to coast, and saw their sublime courage, that I fully realized my inner power. Thankfully I say that, long after Teacher's earthly presence has passed, she animates me to cultivate "the world which each human being uniquely is."

Thrilled by Travels

That is why my travels from one end of the earth to the other have thrilled me, opening great windows upon a world still stumbling on its way to civilization, but alive with good will and undreamed possibilities of achievement.

Seeing India and Japan in all their new splendor of creative effort, Egypt and Africa striving toward a higher humanity, I have been spurred by Teacher's vision to use my individuality in serving the handicapped everywhere — and so long as I am on earth, I shall continue reaching out for fresh goals. ■

A PREVIEW OF THE

WORLD'S FIRST ATOMIC

A weapon such as man never has seen, it will be able to fly 2,000,000 miles without

IN THREE TO eight years, the United States will put into the skies a colossus among airplanes which, with only a few pounds of atomic fuel, will be able to:

Fly around the world 80 times (a distance of 2,000,000 miles) without refueling;

Reach speeds of more than 2,500 miles an hour;

Stay aloft for days at cruising speed;

Circle the globe under cover of unchanging darkness (by keeping up with the earth's rotation);

Revolutionize air warfare by serving as a "flying air base," from which four to eight jet fighter-bombers could maintain unceasing patrol of our skies.

Conceivably all this may be ours by 1958 — 10 years and half a billion dollars after studies of nuclear-powered aircraft began at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Atomic scientists at the outset said the job would take at least 20 years — if it could be done at all.

Bright as this picture appears, there is a grim side. The United States may not be the first world power to fly an atomic plane. U.S. Intelligence reports say that Russia may beat us to it.

Currently, however, the A-plane construction job has been placed on a top-priority "crash program" basis. Red-tape delays are ended. Money troubles are out of the way. With $182,000,000 already spent — $32,000,000 more than the entire cost of developing and building the atomic submarine Nautilus — a liberal $100,000,000 is authorized for each of the next three years. Now, it's up to the slide-rule boys.

All this represents a remarkable triumph. For years after an atomic-powered plane first was proposed to the Government — by the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Co. in 1945 — operations were stymied by argument. Some of the nation's leading scientists warned that the plane would be a gigantic boondoggle; despite the early progress of 900 technicians working at Oak Ridge, atomic experts "proved" that the plane could not be built.

Only after the "proof" was examined at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology were the early findings reversed. In its still-unpublished "Lexington report," issued in the late 1940's, MIT stated categorically that development of an atomic airplane was altogether feasible.

Even this didn't end the hassle. As late as 1952, Defense Department bigwigs reduced working funds and doused cold water over the program; the Air Force ignored Atomic Energy Commission urgings to assign top talent to atomic-plane research. Real, uninterrupted progress began only recently, when Air Force Sec. Harold Talbott, since resigned, gave the atomic plane and intercontinental missiles first priority above all other Air Force projects.

What will come out of all the scientific research is so secret — and so mysterious, even to its creators — that only the barest outlines of possible design can yet be glimpsed. But Eugene Zuckert, former Atomic Energy Commissioner, told PARADE:

"The atomic plane will be the Hollywood of technology. Everything about it will have to be described in superlatives. Even the problems connected with its development are superlative — the knottiest ever faced."

The biggest problem right now is how to shield the plane's crew members from atomic radiation. Without shielding, no human would be safe within a mile of a high-powered nuclear reactor in operation. Ordinary design practice, according to AEC officials, calls for a lead and cement shield — a little matter of 50 to 100 tons. So the search is on for methods or materials which can reduce this enormous weight.

One Advantage: Uranium Is Light

Happily, the plane's motive power provides an important weight saving. One pound of uranium 235 contains heat equal to 1,700,000 pounds of gasoline. This means that an atomic airplane's fuel consumption can be measured in pounds per day instead of thousands of pounds per hour as in a conventional plane.

Another headache — one of dozens of toughies — arises from the fact that ordinary lubricants turn to tar or even solidify under radiation. In the atomic airplane, oiled machinery cannot be used.

As for the reactor itself, scientists envision it as a simple cylindrical body through which fissionable material, such as uranium 235 or plutonium 239, will be distributed. Passages in the reactor must contain a heat-removing coolant, and a material called a "moderator" which helps control neutrons liberated in the fission process. Here again the bugaboo of radiation poses a difficult problem. Most known cooling fluids rapidly lose their effectiveness under radiation. But this puzzle, too, will be solved, say the scientists.

Many proposals for a power plant have been made. Suggested are turbine-driven propellers, a turbojet in which the reactor takes the place of combustion chambers and a ram-jet engine.

Design of the airplane itself will probably represent a radical departure from that of conventional aircraft. The atomic plane's landing weight will be much higher than that of conventional planes, and very probably its landing speed will have to be very fast. Perhaps water, rather than ground, will prove best for takeoff and landing purposes.

Partly for this reason the Navy, with a wealth of experience in producing ever-lighter atomic reactors — for both submarines and surface craft — is strongly urging the use of a seaplane rather than a land-based craft to carry the first atomic-airpower plant. As Navy design experts envision the atomic airplane, it could be an adaptation of either of two craft now available: the PBM Sea Master, a high-speed swept-wing jet seaplane made by Martin, or the Douglas A3-C Skywarrier, which can fly at a speed faster than sound.

In any case, the first atomic plane will be equipped with a standard jet engine as well as an atomic power plant. The standard engine will be used for takeoff in order to conserve on the atomic output and cut down radiation, which would be much higher during a takeoff than in cruising.

There will be plenty of ground testing before any attempt is made to take the first A-plane into the air. While scientists have no fear that a nuclear aircraft will create any hazard to persons in its vicinity when operating as an intact piece of machinery, the Air Force shudders to think what would happen if one were to crash in a populated area.

ATOMIC SUBMARINE Nautilus has proved nuclear power practical for war craft. Commissioned one year ago, it can cruise 25,000 miles without refueling or cross the Atlantic submerged at top speed (20 knots).

Work on the atomic plane has been divided among six large companies, with contracts let as follows: Lockheed — preliminary design studies; Boeing — engineering studies on the application of nuclear power plants to aircraft; Pratt & Whitney and General Electric — development of an atomic aircraft engine; Convair — study and research; Curtiss-Wright — design studies for the application of atomic power to the propulsion of aircraft.

Coordinating the Government's attack on the atomic-plane problem is Brig. Gen. Donald J. Keirn, a 50-year-old West Pointer who silently bears up under the title, Chief of the Office for Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion. A comparative "mystery man," General Keirn talks about the atomic airplane only to Congress, and always behind sealed doors.

So secret is the whole atomic-plane program that even colleagues of General Keirn hesitate to discuss the man in charge. Little about him is available beyond his specific record, beginning with his graduation as number 100 in a class of 300 cadets in 1929. He was still a captain in 1941, but early in World War II he was moved by the late Gen. Henry H. (Hap) Arnold from his job as engine expert at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio, to study Britain's progress in jet development. Later, he supervised construction of the first U.S. jet-propelled aircraft, the Bell P-59 Airocomet.

Liaison with the A-bomb

In 1946 General Keirn became the Air Corps' liaison officer for the Manhattan District, the original atomic-bomb project. Still later, he was special director of the AEC's military application division.

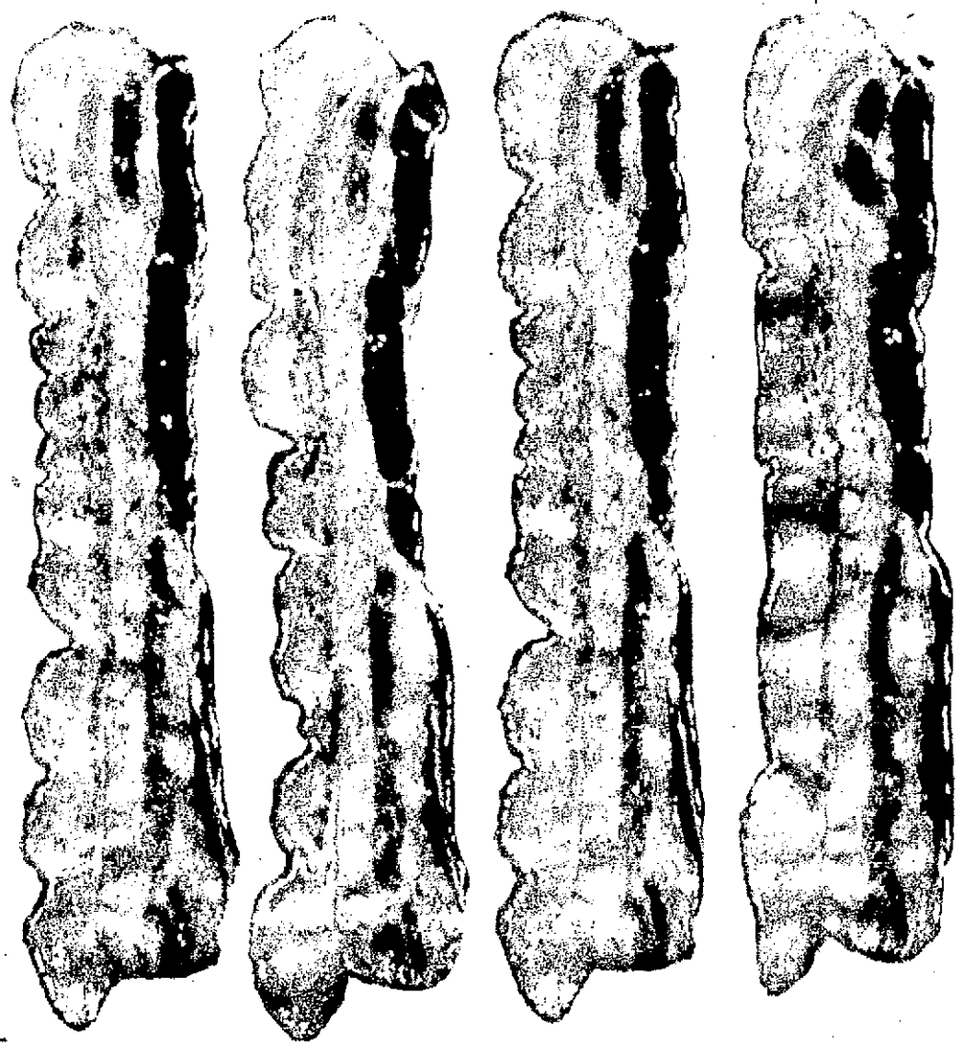

Last May 9 he gave a very brief progress report on his atomic-plane work, in testimony before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. He said 1) he had all the money needed for the project, and 2) the program was going ahead as fast as possible.

Not all of General Keirn's hearers were entirely happy with his performance to date. Rep. Mel Price (D., Ill.), a committee member, recently complained: "General Keirn lets the aircraft contractors run their own show in trying to develop the atomic plane. He doesn't assume the leadership that he should." Other Democrats on the committee have expressed some disappointment with the progress made, and with what they regard as failure of the Air Force and the AEC to centralize their work.

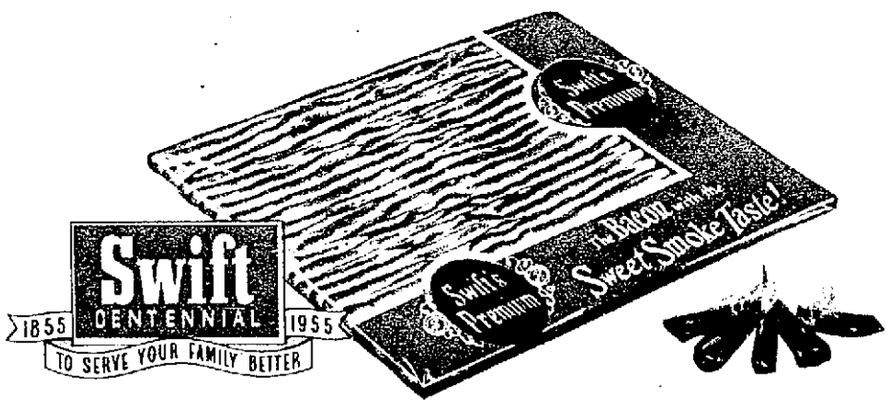

This concern is, of course, understandable. Despite many atomic scientists who declare that it should be possible for the United States to build a nuclear-powered plane for ground-testing within three years, and get it into the air soon afterwards, the cautious Air Force is still insisting that from six to 10 years will be required.

Meanwhile, U.S. Intelligence continues to predict darkly that Russia may fly an atomic airplane in as few as two years. Some scientists as steadily insist that the Soviet cannot do the job in less than five.

At any rate, the importance of the first A-plane cannot be exaggerated. The nation that launches it will have a weapon with vast power and practically limitless range. ■

Posing for a typical starlet shot, Marla looks pretty for PARADE's cameraman.

MARLA ENGLISH: She chose love

She had her Big Chance for fame and riches — the break every starlet dreams of — and she turned it down

HOLLYWOOD. This is the sad saga of starlet Marla English. Starlets reputedly are willing to do just about anything for a chance to become full-fledged stars. But Marla was offered a clean shot at stardom — and gave it up because she was in love.

At 20, Marla for three years has been a handsomely curved girl who flits through one or two scenes of a movie, saying little but showing much. Originally signed by Paramount after winning a beauty contest in her home town, San Diego, she was paid $100 a week to decorate scenes in various films, including Red Garters and Rear Window.

Then the studio pulled a surprise. It cast Marla opposite no less a figure than Spencer Tracy in a film to be made in France, The Mountain. This was — as Hollywood puts it — the Big Break.

Before leaving the country, Marla needed a smallpox vaccination. She got it, promptly went to the hospital with a soaring fever. And there — apparently — she reached an unlikely decision. From her bed she called the studio to say, "I can't do The Mountain. I'm tired and upset."

Stunned, Paramount suspended Marla and signed another starlet, Barbara Darrow, for the part. When Marla left the hospital, PARADE buttonholed her.

"I don't know why I did it," she said. "It's the dumbest thing I've ever done. I have absolutely no explanation."

An explanation came, however, from a close relative. Said she: "Marla has fallen in love with a young Paramount player, Bud Pennell. She desperately wanted the studio to give him a part in The Mountain. Then the two of them could have gone off to France together. When the studio refused, she blew her top. A woman in love will do anything."

This, a Paramount executive conceded, was basically correct. "Only an actress in love," he added, "would give up a picture with Spencer Tracy." ■ learned from the doctor that the man of their family is seriously ill. R.: a social worker listens.

NEW YORK.

Tense, expectant people, their faces showing the fear of illness, sit in little circles, each centered on a young doctor and a medical social worker. And they ask questions:

"What's really wrong with my father?"

"Is that new treatment any good?"

"Can a woman as old as my mother come through this operation?"

"When will our son come home?"

The doctors answer calmly, reassuringly. They explain the action of drugs used for one patient; the surgery required for another; the chances of recovery for a third. As they talk, there unfolds a drama of human emotion — hope, joy, despair, relief, surprise. For this is Family Night at Montefiore Hospital here. Thought to be the only program of its kind in the U.S., it is a great hospital's way of opening its heart to the relatives of ward patients.

Every Tuesday evening they stream into Montefiore's ramhling auditorium, eager for information. Doctors and social workers are equally eager to answer their questions about the ailments of loved ones, to explain treatment — and to gain the understanding so often necessary to the patients' well-being after they leave the hospital.

Not long ago, a middle-aged woman who complained of recurrent headaches and dizziness was admitted to Montefiore. To her anxious family, the symptoms spelled only one thing: brain tumor. At Family Night, the doctor frankly admitted he could find no cause for the symptoms.

The following week, the family returned dejected, expecting the worst. But just that afternoon doctors had solved the mystery; the woman had a rare eye infection. When the relatives heard of the finding, they were all smiles. In a few days the infection had yielded to treatment and the woman was home again.

Family Night is restricted to relatives of ward patients for a simple reason: relatives of those in private and semi-private rooms can buttonhole a doctor just about any time they want. But the ward patient may not have a family doctor; the ward doctor may be too busy to answer questions; it's difficult to pin down a surgeon in a ward.

As Dr. Martin Cherkasky, Montefiore director, says: "Typically, relatives visiting

But still there is anxiety. Expressions such as these tell the drama of Family Night.

wards keep one eye on the patient and the other eye peeled for a man in a white coat."

It was this realization that sparked Family Night more than five years ago. Since its inception, the doctor-social worker teams have counseled more than 25,000 relatives of ward patients. Montefiore staff members are convinced that Family Night programs, if started throughout the U.S., could be of help to many thousands more.

What do relatives ask? According to Mrs. Minna Field, assistant to the chief, division of social medicine at Montefiore, the hospital's experience shows these questions commonest, in essentially this order: 1) What's wrong with the patient? 2) What will his illness mean to our future family living? 3) How much will the patient be able to do when he returns home?

The answers provide a sound basis for family planning and action, says Mrs. Field. Of course, the well-being of patient and family may not hinge solely on a technical medical problem. The patient's upbringing, habits, desires, can become a part of his overall health picture.

That's where the social worker comes in. Her understanding of the emotional side of illness, together with a knowledge of what motivates patients and relatives, often proves invaluable.

Take the case of a white-haired little Italian woman, admitted to Montefiore with heart disease. She responded to treatment, but just before her discharge it was decided to put her on a salt-free diet. High salt content in her food would only aggravate her sickness.

The woman, a widow living with an only son, refused indignantly. "You can't make good spaghetti without salt!" she said.

At Family Night, a social worker took the woman's son aside. "Do you eat spaghetti?" she asked.

"Love it," he replied. "We have it about every night. I always ask for it."

The social worker thought fast. Obviously the woman wanted to please her son. But to do so would endanger her own health. When the social worker explained this, the son quickly understood. He now eats spaghetti at lunch — while at work — and keeps his mother from using salt in the evening meal.

What's a Biopsy?

Not only patients and relatives benefit by Family Night. The young resident doctors also get invaluable experience. As one example, they learn to translate "medicalese" into language understandable to the layman.

For instance, say "biopsy" to the average person; he won't know what you're talking about. It means cutting off a bit of tissue to make a diagnosis — so one doctor explains it as "nipping off a piece of skin — like when you shave."

Similarly, "prognosis" is translated as "outlook"; "bone marrow test" as "a look at the factory where blood is manufactured"; "frozen section" as "examination by a special doctor"; "subacute bacterial endocarditis" as, simply, "an infection."

Occasionally, Family Night tackles a major family problem all by itself. Such was the case of 15-year-old Bill, who suffered from arthritis. Doctor and social worker realized that Bill's parents actually didn't want him to come home. He was a bother there. He had to be lifted in and out of bed. He needed expensive medicines.

After more than a year of Family Night meetings, the parents' rejection of their son was reversed. Today he's back home, preparing for college.

"In a sense," says one Montefiore doctor, "that case is worth the whole Family Night program." ■

A college president asks:

SHOULD YOUR CHILD

by DR. PAUL N. ELBIN

Late one evening recently, a politician came to see me on "urgent" business. His mission was to intercede for a boy who had just been dropped from college. On behalf of the boy's father, a fellow politician and coal-company executive, he asked us to please reconsider.

The plea he presented was moving. But I happened to know something about the boy. He had barely scraped through high school. When we admitted him, it was on probation. By the end of his freshman year, it was evident that he was not college material.

I explained all this to the politician. Yet as he went away I could see that he did not understand, that in his mind remained the belief that any boy financially able to attend college should be admitted and, if he behaved himself, in due time be graduated. In this, I fear, he merely reflected a common American attitude — one held by entirely too many parents.

To these parents, a college degree for their children has become the be-all of life. And while this is in a sense admirable, it also is misguided — in some ways, dangerous. You can legislate equal educational opportunity, but you cannot legislate brains. And the fact that the Smiths and the Joneses both live on the same street, both earn $4,500 a year and both drive new cars doesn't mean that their children are equally qualified to earn college degrees.

This craze for college diplomas is debasing our colleges. Indeed, it is converting many of them into diploma mills. Standards have been lowered, facilities overtaxed, the supply of qualified teachers exhausted. But the worst feature of the diploma fad is not so much what it does to colleges as what it does to students. Family and social pressures that push them into a world they aren't equipped to cope with can mark them for life. A student who has flunked out of college is often worse off than if he had never begun.

In the same class with the politician's son at West Liberty was a girl I'll call Mary Brown. In high school, Mary's grades were so-so; but she was a bubbling girl, well-liked by teachers and classmates. In college, she became a cheerleader and social butterfly, and won many friends. But her grades were alarming. Her smile faded as she struggled with history, chemistry and other subjects beyond her scope. Finally, a week before exams, Mary found a way out: she eloped with a boy she had known only a few weeks.

This month, an estimated 2,505,000 students — more than 30 per cent of their age group — are starting a new college year. Included among them will be quite a few Mary Browns, for most authorities think that not more than 25 per cent of teenagers are capable of mastering a four-year college course.

Perhaps your own son or daughter is among this new crop of students. If so, it may be too late to ask yourself the question, "Will college be good for my child — or bad?" But for those of you whose children will reach college age in the next few years (say before 1960, when the proportion of teenagers in college is expected to rise even higher), it is not too early for hard, objective thinking. You should begin now to take stock of your child's abilities and handicaps.

Of course, it is impossible to set up a yardstick and say, "Measure your child against this. If he doesn't measure up, find him a job." But here are a few simple rules that might guide you:

1) Does he read? No matter what his interest — science, home economics, business, engineering — a child with no interest in books is a borderline risk the first two years of college.

THE AUTHOR:

Dr. Paul N. Elbin, a veteran educator, is president of state-operated West Liberty College, near Wheeling, West Virginia.

2) What were his high-school grades? Grades are not an infallible index, often reflecting personality problems or simply poor teachers. But within limits, they remain one of the best indicators we have.

3) Does he learn quickly? And just as important, How does he learn? That is, must each step be explained to him, or can he think things out for himself? Must he run to you for help? Does he apply previous knowledge to the problem?

4) What are his interests? A teenager's interests usually stay with him the rest of his life. A wise parent can guide him into a college course and a vocation in line with these interests.

5) Is he a self-starter? That is, does he map out projects on his own initiative, and, if he does, does he carry them out? Can he work on his own? (This becomes more important as enrollments increase; for while crowded classrooms and overtaxed faculties make it easier for some to slide by, lack of individual attention also makes it more difficult for the serious-minded to get a real education.)

6) What's his IQ? Although IQs have been overrated in some places, they are valuable when weighed with the other factors mentioned above.

I can anticipate the protests: But what of the "prestige" value of a college diploma? (Where is the prestige if every child in the block, from the dullard to the genius, earns the same diploma?) Without a diploma, will my child be able to get a job? (Yes — any job he is equipped to handle.)

What American parents need to realize is that while every child is not endowed with equal mental ability, every normal boy or girl is endowed with the ability to do something well. His mission is not necessarily to heal the sick, do atomic research or teach school. There are many vocations where skill with the hands or an outgoing personality is more of an asset than any amount of book learning.

Perhaps it seems odd to you that a college president should urge people not to go to college. The truth of the matter is that not too many people are going to college — only too many of the wrong kind. According to the report of the Commission on Financing Higher Education in the U.S., 20 per cent of the top 25 per cent "in intellectual promise" do not even complete high school. While about 35 per cent of our high-school graduates are going to college, only about half the top 25 per cent are going.

This lack of interest among the qualified needs to be met on the high-school level. It is not a matter solely for the high-school guidance counselor; every teacher should help. And I should like to see more organized recruiting for college. Too many college faculty members feel they are soiling their hands if they actively go after students. But if the football coach can recruit promising halfbacks, why can't the English professor recruit promising poets?

To see that those qualified receive the education they need — and deserve — I think we should revamp our four-year program. Our junior colleges and community institutes should be expanded to provide vocational training and possibly to handle such programs as homemaking and business administration. At the end of the two-year course, the bachelor's degree would be awarded.

Beyond the junior colleges would be an intensified, three-year course of genuine college education for those with definite educational objectives. This course would culminate in the Master's degree — which has become, in reality, little more than a fifth year of college, anyway.

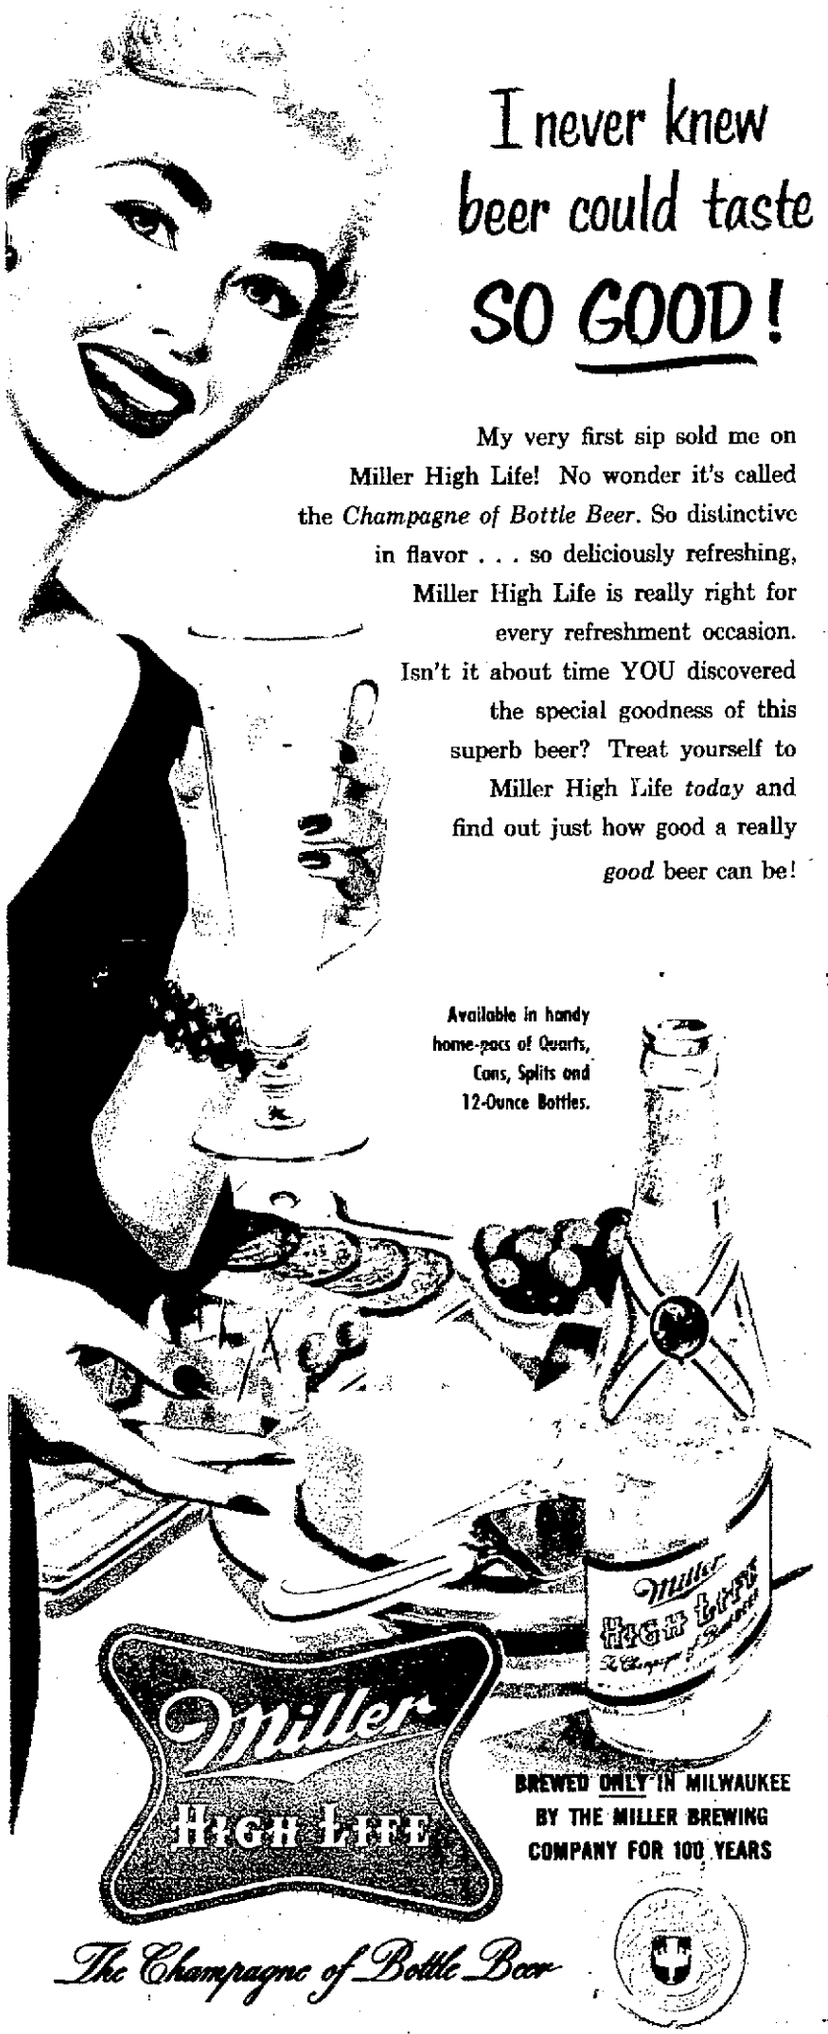

Such a reorganization would satisfy everybody. The serious student would be able to educate himself without being hamstrung by the disinterested. The parents who want bachelor's degrees for their children would be satisfied — and at less expense in time and money.

You Can't 'Give' Education

Yes, this would cheapen the bachelor's degree. But the bachelor's degree already has been cheapened by the innocent eagerness of American parents to give their children a better education than they themselves enjoyed. It is regrettable that such a noble sentiment can be so full of fallacy. For you cannot give an education to anyone; no matter who pays the bills, education must be self-earned.

More years in school do not necessarily mean more education. Not long ago, one Ph.D. I know resigned his first executive job a broken man. He had only one of the qualifications for executive work in education — his Ph.D. He had received this by sitting patiently through course after course, gradually accumulating credits and scraping together material for a thesis. But when his executive opportunity came, patience was not enough. He fumbled, failed, developed terrible headaches and resigned with dismissal imminent. Now he's back where he started.

When your child starts college this year — or next year, or the year after — you might ask yourself this question: Is he going to college because he is capable and eager, or, like that man, because he feels impelled by family and social pressures to travel a dead-end street? ■

3 WAYS WITH FRANKS

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

BOSTON FRANKS: Cut two 1-lb. loaves canned Boston Brown bread into three pieces, crosswise. Scoop out centers (and save for later use in a bread pudding), leaving ½-inch shells. Brush inside of shells with ketchup. Cut 4 frankfurters into thin crosswise slices; add to 1 lb. canned Boston baked beans; fill shells heaping full. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 15 minutes. Meanwhile heat surplus bean mixture in saucepan. Remove bean cups to serving dish; spoon heated bean mixture around them. Garnish with onion rings. Serve with ketchup and pickle relish. Serves six. Old-fashioned coleslaw would be good with this recipe.

CARNIVAL FRANKS: Combine 2 cups canned, drained sauerkraut, ¼ cup minced onion, ½ cup chopped green pepper. Split 8 frankfurter rolls almost through, lengthwise; half-fill with 'kraut mixture. Split 8 franks lengthwise, almost through; spread cut surfaces with prepared mustard; fill with hot dog relish; top with ketchup; place on 'kraut in rolls. Place on a baking sheet in hot oven (425° F.) about 10 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serve at once. Makes eight servings.

CURRIED FRANKS ON RICE: Melt 3 tablespoons fat; add 1 onion, chopped fine, 1 garlic clove, minced, 1 tart apple, chopped; cook until lightly browned. Add 2 teaspoons each curry powder, brown sugar and Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon ginger and ¼ teaspoon each sugar and chili powder; cook until quite brown. Add 6 frankfurters cut into 4 diagonal slices each. Add 2 cans (8 oz. each) tomato sauce. Heat thoroughly. Serve on hot fluffy rice. Serves four.

The boys write me fewer letters than do the girls — although they certainly must have as many questions to ask on manners. However, I do have some queries from boys and would like to devote today's column to them.

Q. I would like to know what you'd call an ideal way to spend a movie date? — E.R., Washington, D.C.

A. It seems to me that mothers get to see very little of their teen-age sons and very little, too, of the girls they take out. I would like to see an ideal movie date start, if possible, at the boy's home with the girl as his guest at the family dinner. Or the girl could ask the boy to her house for dinner.

After the show it is fun to have a snack at the corner ice-cream parlor. Or the girl may invite the boy in at home, with her parents' approval, and serve him a snack. Most parents neither permit movie dates on school nights nor allow their daughters' escorts in on returning from a date if no one is at home. In any case, when the date ends the boy thanks the girl for her company and she thanks him for an enjoyable evening.

Q. If someone says that it was very nice meeting you, what do you say in return? — M.H., Tucson, Ariz.

A. You say, "It was very nice meeting you, too!"

Q. Do you acknowledge birthday cards? — C.R., Syracuse, N.Y.

A. It isn't necessary to write a note of thanks, if that's what you mean. If the card comes from a distance, you try to remember the other person's birthday in return. If cards come from people nearby, you thank them when you see them, and try to remember their birthdays.

Q. I am planning a party at my own house. There isn't any room to dance. Can you suggest some games? The age group will range from 11 to 16. — R.P., Strasburg, Pa.

A. If you have a record player, I am sure the group would enjoy listening to popular records. Word games are fun to play, and so is Charades. Try to choose some games that will keep the crowd moving from time to time. Your library has books on games; why not look into them?

Q. I am 17 years old and go with a girl 14. Is she too young to go out with me? — P.T., Buena Vista, Ga.

A. In the North, this would seem so, but I know that in Georgia girls of 14 often seem much more mature. If your own group accepts the situation, you can assume she is not too young for you. Ordinarily, it is better for a boy your age to take out girls in his own class rather than much younger students. For a girl so young to go with a boy so much older tends to exclude her from her own group and make her somewhat uncomfortable with the older group as well as with her own when she returns to it. If you didn't have some reservation about it yourself, I doubt that you would ask me.

CONSTIPATED?

HERE'S NATURE'S GREAT FOOD COMBINATION

For fitness and regularity

VITAL FOOD BULK TO IMPROVE YOUR "INTESTINAL TONE"

3 Fine Foods in One

Comfortable Elimination

You know what milk is. It is generally considered nature's most nearly perfect food.

But do you know about bran . . . All-Bran? If you're interested in a natural aid to regularity and fitness, you'll be interested in these facts.

W. K. Kellogg pioneered Kellogg's All-Bran almost 40 years ago. He set out to make it three great cereals in one: 1) a good-to-eat cereal; 2) a cereal which in combination with milk would provide very solid nutritional benefits; and 3) a natural remedy for one of mankind's most common ailments, constipation due to insufficient bulk.

This he achieved. For Kellogg's All-Bran, the original whole bran cereal, has become the most widely accepted and used of all bran cereals. It has literally helped millions.

Now as to Kellogg's All-Bran itself and why it is such a great food—the answer is simple. All-Bran is made from the vitamin and mineral rich outer layers of the whole wheat grain. And not only does All-Bran supply vitamins, minerals and protein—it is scientifically milled to bring you the natural food bulk you need in its most effective and appetizing form. All-Bran stays crisp in milk and is easy to eat.

Yes, All-Bran does things no drug-type laxative can even begin to accomplish—it actually improves your "Intestinal Tone" which may be below par due to insufficient bulk.

And Kellogg's All-Bran, served with milk, contributes nine body-builders you need daily for fitness.

So why not get the safe, gentle, natural laxative cereal you know you can depend on. Kellogg's All-Bran, the original. Eat a half cup of Kellogg's All-Bran every morning for 10 days. If it doesn't bring you satisfying, effective relief from constipation, you get double your money back. That's a promise from Kellogg's of Battle Creek, Michigan.

Waist-level ovens and separate surface units can be stacked on base cabinets. Plug-in appliances can take over many stove jobs. Refrigerators may be wall-hung, built-in or free-standing. Sinks can be "packaged" with dishwashers. Natural-wood, copper and steel finishes help create new color schemes, with bright colors for contrast.

CHAMPION MARCIANO CHALLENGER MOORE

'If I were Archie Moore,'

says Jersey Joe Walcott . . .

'HERE'S HOW I'D FIGHT

NEW YORK. Next Tuesday night Rocky Marciano and Archie Moore are scheduled to fight here for a title I once held — the heavyweight championship of the world. I think Moore is going to win it.

I make that prediction with only one "if." Archie will win if he's in perfect condition, ready to do something that will squeeze every last ounce of energy from his body. Let me explain:

In fighting Marciano, or watching him fight on television, always remember that he can't throw a fully effective straight punch. Why? Because Rocky has very short arms, and has to swing roundhouses to knock you out. The best defense against him, therefore, is to keep boring inside, away from the arc of those powerful roundhouses.

That kind of a defense, however, calls for a perfectly conditioned body — a stiff order for a guy like Archie Moore, who's been boxing over 20 years and confesses to being 38. Moreover, whether he's in condition or not is something that Moore doesn't know now, won't know till he's tagged by the first Marciano punch. At his age, your training can't tell you whether or not you're in condition. Only the fight can tell you that.

I learned this from sad experience. In my second fight with Marciano, I was over the hill and didn't know it. Only when I was hit in that first — and last — round could I tell that something was wrong. I had been hit with harder punches, but this one made me lose consciousness from the referee's count of "three" to "seven." And when I wanted to get up at seven, I couldn't and was counted out.

If this unsuspected weakness hasn't crept up on Moore, if his body is ready to do everything he demands of it Tuesday night, then the rest of Archie's problems are minor by comparison. But they're important, and if I were Archie, here's how I would handle them.

First, in fighting close to Marciano you've got to keep from being butted. I don't mean that Rocky is an intentionally dirty fighter, because he isn't. I've gotten to know the Rock very well outside the ring and he's one of the finest gentlemen I've ever had the good fortune to meet.

But inside the ring, look out. Rocky is a wild fury, with no control over his elbows or head. And if he should accidentally butt Moore, it can set Archie up for a knockout.

That's what happened to me in my first battle with Rocky. In the 12th round of a fight in which Rocky had never been able to catch up with me, a butt cut me above my left eye. The blood trickled down, obscuring my vision. Early in the next round he fired a right — a punch I'd been dodging easily. But this time I couldn't see it coming and the fight was over.

Moore's fight will be over too if he moves from side to side while boring in

BROMO QUININE

by JERSEY JOE WALCOTT as told to PAUL GARDNER

ROCKY'

on Rocky. If you're watching the fight on TV, keep your eyes peeled for this, for a Marciano roundhouse will almost certainly clip him. To keep from being hit, Moore must stay glued to the center of Rocky's body.

On the offense Moore has a huge advantage, despite the fact that Rocky can put out the lights with one punch. For as long as Archie's in-fighting defense keeps him protected from that dynamite Rocky throws, Moore has everything in his favor. Here's why:

Marciano's wickedest punches come at you from above. Moore, however, has an odd style — he fights low to the ground. (I'm demonstrating this in the picture at right.) Marciano's overhand punches, therefore, will be landing without damage on Archie's back. And Archie, by sticking close, can prevent Rocky from sliding under him for uppercuts.

Moore, in the meantime, will be making good use of his long arms and tremendous punching power. I expect to see a fight in which Moore will belt Rocky almost at will, for Marciano is a sucker for almost every kind of punch there is.

Now Rocky, of course, can take it. In my 23 years of fighting I've never landed a harder punch than the left hook that dropped him in the first round of our first fight in Philadelphia (unless it was the blow that knocked out Ezzard Charles for the title). That left landed high on Rocky's face and sent him sprawling. Yet he got right back up. Again in the 11th I jackknifed him with a left to the stomach. I still don't know how he stood up to it. He's a wonder in taking punishment.

The Shell Game

But that was three years ago. I doubt whether Rocky can take those punches today, for his face now cuts very easily, especially around the nose. And though heavyweight championship fights rarely end in TKOs, this one might. But even if the fight isn't stopped, a bleeding face is a heavy millstone for any fighter to carry, since it forces him into a shell to prevent any more damage. And Marciano is licked any time he has to fight a defensive battle; his only weapon is his slugging ability.

If I were Archie, there's one other trick that I would use against Rocky — a trick that wasn't so easy for me since I was a stand-up fighter but a natural for low-to-the-ground Archie. It's this:

When Marciano starts firing a barrage of punches, there's only one way to box him and that's by covering up, since he can't punch with enough accuracy to nail a jaw that's reasonably well protected. That's the trick: cover up.

If Moore doesn't protect himself properly against those flurries — or if he makes any one of a half-dozen other mistakes — then I must admit that Marciano will win. But I don't think Moore will make those mistakes, for he's a hungry fighter who's waited a long time for this chance. It won't come his way again and he knows it.

I believe he'll be the winner if he's still on his feet at the end of the 15th round, for he'll have chopped Rocky to ribbons along the way. In other words, the only way that Rocky can win this fight is by a knockout.

He won't score that KO in my opinion, for Archie will be smart enough to keep inside, where Rocky can't blitz him. If his body holds up to the ordeal of boring-in, you'll be reading about a new heavyweight champion on Wednesday morning — Archie Moore. ■

EX-CHAMPION WALCOTT imitates Moore's style: "Rocky's overhand blows will land on Archie's back."

"What's a nice toy for a little boy that's not too complicated for his father?"

"God's Long Arm Reached Down to Help Me!"

For almost a lifetime, the woman had stood on the threshold of the Catholic Church—uncertain whether to come in or stay out.

"Seemingly," she says, "I was born loving the Catholic Church." This she attributes to a "small miracle," inasmuch as her parents were not Catholic, or even religious; and "our relatives and friends were none of them Catholics."

As a child, she loved to visit Catholic churches, to light candles and pray the rosary. But as she grew older... and tried to evaluate Catholic beliefs on her own limited knowledge, or upon the mistaken opinions of others... a "wall of obstacles" kept getting in the way.

In the midst of her confusion and uncertainty, she enrolled for the Knights of Columbus course of Catholic instruction which is given free by mail. And now a Catholic, she says: "I am filled with wonder and gratitude that God's long arm reached down to lift me up so tenderly."

It is unfortunate, but true, that people seeking knowledge of the Catholic Church encounter a "wall of obstacles" as this woman did. The reason is, usually, that so many of the "facts" they hear about the Catholic Church are not facts at all, but misrepresentations or the fruits of misunderstanding. Even those who admire and respect the Church... and who wish to hold for it only sentiments of tolerance and good-will... are often confused and deceived.

There is, of course, only one fair and proper way to understand and evaluate Catholic teachings and worship. That is by getting the facts about them from an authentic Catholic source. And that is why the Catholic Church says again and again... "INVESTIGATE!"

Maybe, after investigating, you still won't want to share the Catholic reverence for Mary. But you WILL understand it. You will know why and how Catholics obey the Pope. You will understand the Catholic attitude on salvation outside the Church... why Catholics use statues and holy water.... why Catholics say the Mass is truly a Holy Sacrifice.

And now it is so easy to investigate... so easy to get the facts ...without cost, trouble or embarrassment. Just fill out the coupon below and MAIL IT today, and a highly interesting pamphlet will come to you by mail... under plain cover—and nobody will call on you. AMY HILAND TO TRY AGAIN

'This Time I'll Swim the Catalina Channel'

By Amy Hiland

As told to Dorothy Allison

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Amy Hiland, 34-year-old housewife of 129 Claremont Ave., next Saturday will try for the second time to swim the Catalina Channel. Here, in an interview with Dorothy Allison, she tells how she expects to accomplish the feat in record time. Her first attempt was made last June, when she was taken from the water after 19 hours. Previously, she set the record for the Salton Sea swim. She learned to swim only four years ago to discover she is a natural distance swimmer.)

ONE NIGHT THIS WEEK I will stand at the water's edge on Catalina, waiting for the starter's gun to begin my swim across the channel. My June swim taught me the answer to several of the ocean's secret weapons. This time, I feel confident, I'll make it and break the record of 13 hours, 25 minutes.

The Channel itself is a tremendous challenge. But the real goal, the one that gives a competitive swimmer deep personal satisfaction, is to better the time that is officially recorded for the event.

My hope is to break the professional mark and set an amateur time that will stand.

The most important thing we learned about the ocean in my June swim is the treacherous strength of the north-south current which sweeps, at times, down along the mainland. This current is unpredictable in time and in its course, but we know now that we can find out by radio when I am three-fourth of the way across the channel whether it is running and what its course is. Then my pilot boat can guide me so that the current will help instead of hinder me.

THE CURRENT came between me and the shore when I was just two and a half miles from the mainland on my June swim. I had been swimming for 12 hours and was ahead of the record. I tried swimming against the current, and in seven and a half hours lost a mile and a half. That was when my husband, Pete, insisted that 19½ hours of swimming was enough. He had me pulled from the water and promised me I could try the swim again.

We learned that I must take seasick pills to help reduce nausea caused by swells and by my watching the light on the pilot boat as it lurched up and down all night.

My intense nausea kept me from taking nourishment, and it is amazing what a return of strength and drive comes to a swimmer after drinking a bit of broth.

Plucky Amy Hiland, Long Beach housewife, plans her second assault on the Catalina Channel in a few days. This time she is set on a record crossing.

The channel bested Mrs. Hiland on her first swim and she was pulled from the water after near victory. She'll benefit this time from her last effort.

PEOPLE HAVE ASKED me about the dangers of making a channel swim. There are several. Four times during the night I saw sharks swim near me, and fourteen times I heard rifle shots from the boats as the men shot other sharks.

The men operating the searchlight that was to keep my white swimming cap in its beam often couldn't find me in the huge, foamy swells. If I had run into trouble, they might not have known where I was in the black immensity of the ocean.

Porpoises are a menace. A school of these could create havoc with the small boats that were protecting me and with me.

Fear is strange. I am frightened to death of a spider, but was not afraid that night. Maybe I was just too nauseated to care.

The five-hour wait before I could start my swim was more difficult for me than any possible dangers. My swim was to start at 8 p.m. June 12. Everything and everyone was ready except the weather. A strong cold wind had come up, and the sea was rough and choppy.

FOR THOSE FIVE tense hours, I was alone in a cabin near the water and was supposed to be resting. I listened to the men outside calling to boatmen about conditions in the channel. Someone would call out, "Latest report sounds good. Better get Amy greased up." My heart would start hammering with excitement, but before anyone got to my door, the voice would call out, "Hold it."

By the time we finally got the go ahead signal, I was trembling from the hours of tension. But when I heard the A.A.U starter's gun, exhilaration filled me. I was on my own and on my way.

Kelp is one thing I will never get used to. As you swim along, the slimy, slithering fronds suddenly wrap themselves around you like the tentacles of an octopus. You shudder with revulsion and want to leap from the water.

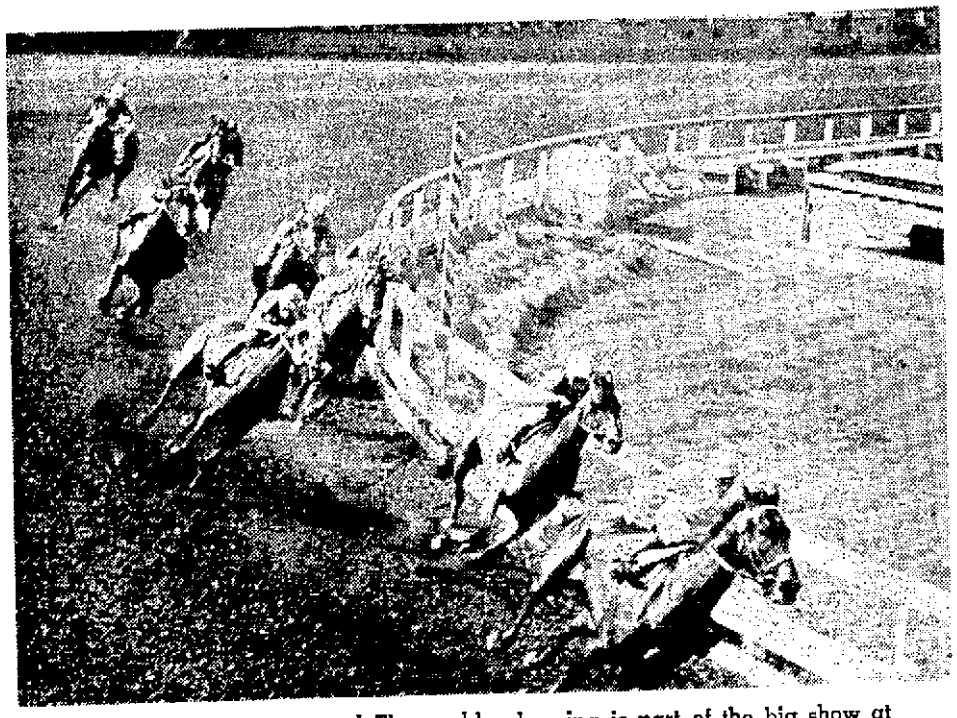

ON A DISTANCE SWIM, I use the crawl—a left and right arm stroke to six leg kicks. This stroke gives a lot of glide through the water. I try to keep a steady 58 stroke a minute. The swimmers who get into the water with me are so much help in getting me back on my pace if it becomes too fast or too slow.

You have to keep moving all the time because only the warmth of your own blood coursing through your body makes the cold water endurable. You know before you make the swim you'll be colder than you've ever been before—and you are.

Since my June swim, I have kept a rigorous routine of swimming at least 2½ hours a day in the bay or ocean to condition myself for the ordeal, with carefully watched diet and plenty of rest.

This week when I stand at the water's edge and look across the channel to the lights on the mainland, I will have experience on my side. I will keep just one thought, "Sometime tomorrow, I will walk out on the sand of the mainland." And, God willing, I will set a record for the Catalina Channel swim.

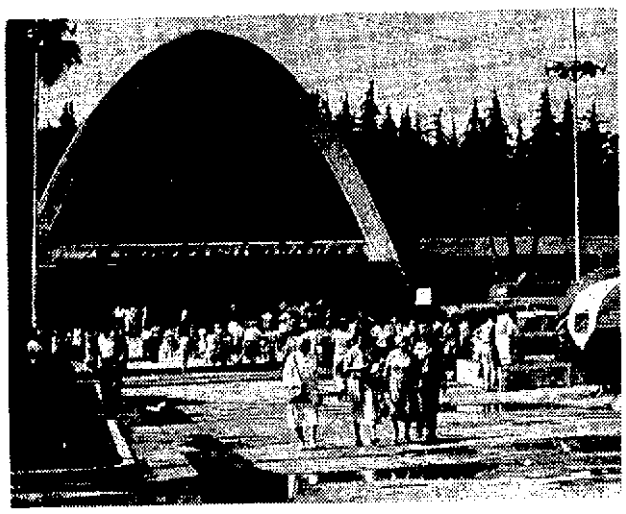

Popcorn, Peanuts & Country Ham

Round the first turn . . .! Thoroughbred racing is part of the big show at Los Angeles County Fair. Harness races, quarter horses are also billed.

Sally-Ann Scherle, pretty college coed, has a prize lamb groomed for the big County Fair stock display.

New suburban homes inspire theme, "Country Life," for the dazzling flower show in floral building.

"Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!" Half-million-dollar Fair owned and operated Midway resounds to familiar barker's cry.

By Roy Driscoll

AGAINST A BACKGROUND of color, music and pageantry, the 28th annual Los Angeles County Fair—the biggest county fair in the world—is packing them in at Pomona. It has everything that a fair can offer: Livestock, poultry, farm machinery, citrus crops, garden and field products, new cars and accessories, modern homes and accessories, household arts and crafts, horse racing, horse shows, a musical extravaganza and a midway.

One million persons are slated to see the fair before it closes Oct. 2. And nobody knows how much pop and popcorn, how many peanuts and hot dogs they'll consume as they gaze at the fat pigs, fine horses, grandma's conserves and country ham.

With its landscaped 450-acre exposition park, 200 buildings and 40,000-car parking area it is a county fair in name only. In all else it is an exposition of such size and scope as to command national and international attention.

GROUNDS and improvements are valued at $20,000,000. Some 40,000 individual exhibits are entered this year. They are distributed into 20 major divisions, each a comprehensive show in itself under this year's intriguing banner, "The Abundant Life."

Education, relaxation and recreation go hand in hand. For the regulars it is a new fair with innovations, additions, appeals. For newcomers it is a succession of revelations and surprises.

The huge Palace of Agriculture displays prize products of orchard, field and garden, from all parts of California. Here also are the California wine show, dairy products, apiary show, forestry, lumbering, minerals and natural resources.

THE FINE ARTS BUILDING presents "The Arts in Western Living." Architects, artists and artist-craftsmen combined their talents in an exposition of gracious western living with 22 rooms and areas overflowing with information and suggestions. It is a worthy successor to "Arts in Daily Living," which won national acclaim last year.

Three large exhibit buildings are devoted to one of the most comprehensive home shows in America.

The Home Builders New Products Show, with its $100,000 pavilion crammed with structural materials, features a novel expandable model home embodying new ideas in home building.

Complementing the building show is the ever popular Domestic Arts Bldg. With a record of 1703 opportunities for women to enter their handiwork, the spacious building contains a great assembly of needlework, arts and crafts, antiques and culinary entries.

NEW SUBURBAN HOMES are the inspiration for the theme, "Country Life," selected for the flower show in the floral building. A dazzling array of blooms and plants represents the best the Southland produces in this line. The outdoor living room and its patios, swimming pools and barbecues stresses country life in smart styling.

Lovers of sports and the wide open spaces revel in the invigorating sports plaza with its trailer show, sporting goods display, competitions and demonstrations. Golfers compete in the annual putting contest. The 175-foot pool has its casting tournaments. Smart new cars and smart new accessories are entered in the automobile show.

The best of the flocks and herds of the country vie for coveted blue ribbons in the livestock show. Poultry fanciers of the nation gather for the annual meeting and show of the American Bantam Assn. held in conjunction with the poultry show. The west's largest rabbit show offers new mutations.

THE JUNIOR FAIR includes thousands of entries by 4-H and Future Farmer members, Boy and Girl Scouts, Woodcraft Rangers, Campfire Girls and other youth organizations.

The first public schools in the country were opened 100 years ago. Commemorating the important date, the public schools exhibit serves as a centennial celebration.

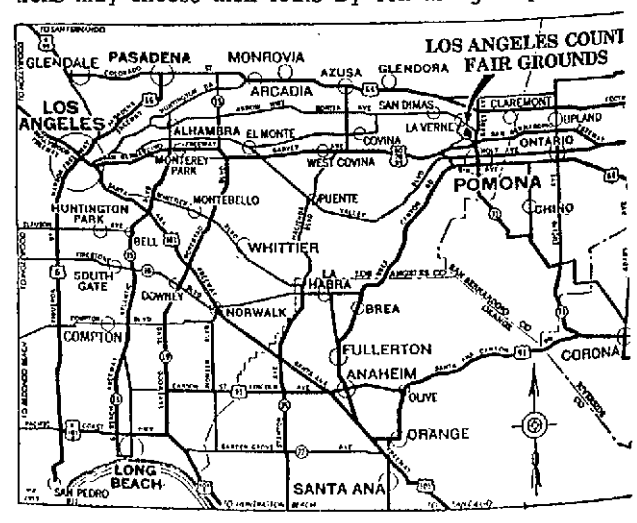

The military might of the nation is shown in armed forces exhibits.

For pure recreation and entertainment, the fair has its most ambitious program. Every afternoon there is an exciting combination of harness, running and quarter horse racing punctuated with the first $20,000 stakes ever offered on a half-mile track. This is the third largest race meet in the state. There will be five different horse shows.

The World's Fair Midway offers a half-million dollars worth of thrills, chills and skills.

On the glamorous grand stage the first nine nights are the glamorous "Aqua Thrills Revue," followed the last eight nights by the musical extravaganza, "Fair Follies of '55."

Many roads point to the County Fair. Long Beach patrons may choose their route by consulting map below.

True, full-blooded Hawaiians are in the small minority in Hawaii—and you never know who'll be doing the hula.

IN HAWAII—

You Never Know Who's Doing the Hula

By Mary Neiswender

THEY CALL them Hawaiian Islands.

And when Captain Cook arrived they were—but today there are only a handful of Hawaiians in the islands which bear their name.

The melting pot of the Pacific is cooking up more Japanese dishes by far than any others.

However, the Hawiians and the part-Hawaiians are doing their best to keep the national dress a grass skirt instead of a kimono.

True Hawaiians are rare indeed, according to population figures compiled by the Territorial Government. Of a total population for the Islands of 473,214 only a mere 12,433 or 2.7 per cent are natives. Even lumping together the part-Hawaiians, the total does not touch the Japanese population figure.

A whopping 40.4 per cent of the inhabitants, 189,219 persons, are of Japanese ancestry.

In fact, there are more Filipinos (62,936), Caucasions (69,461) and Chinese (32,139).

Passivly combatting this is the birth rate for the Hawaiians and part-Hawaiians which almost equals that of the Japanese. There were only 800 more Japanese babies born last year.

The immense migration of the Japanese to Hawaii took place in the early part of this century. Yankee businessmen, whose reputation is for making a hard dollar, moved in on the Islands after annexation by the United States in 1898. The fun-loving Hawaiians didn't take to the Yankee drive for the dollar and worked only until they had enough money for a jug of bootlegged okolehao. And until the jug was empty, no work was done.

Nothing stops the Yankee businessman when there's money to be made, even if it means transporting a good chunk of the population of Japan 6,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean. For six years the industrious Japanese were imported as laborers.

But soon the Japanese got the right idea. The warm sun and trade winds took the industry out of the newcomers so the sugar planters brought in Filipino laborers. Again the balmy isles took their toll. Now there are just as many Japanese and Filipinos swaying in grass skirts as there are Hawaiians.

But no one seems to care who's what race. Samoans, Hindus, Negroes, Chinese, Koreans, Japanese and Hawaiians live, work and play side by side in the lazy informality of island living.

Will "sayonara" ever replace "aloha?" Don't bet on it.

But no matter what the ancestry of the dancer, the hula continues to be the islands' popular dance. This girl performs on the sands of an island beach.

Filipinos inhabit islands in 5-1 ratio to natives.

This blond beauty is part Hawaiian, Scandinavian.

Young generation Japanese dons island coconut hat.

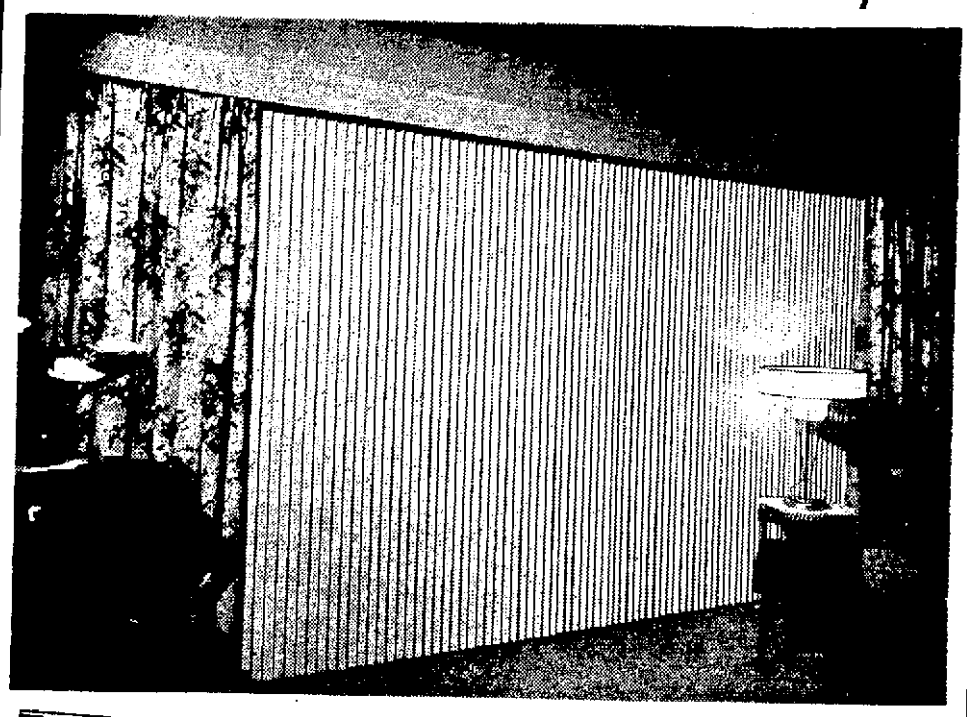

A mixture of races—Japanese, Chinese, Korean and Hawaiian—pose on a bench beside Waikiki Beach, a pretty picture for any strand.

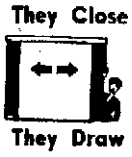

No discrimination exists between the races. Islands' Japanese, Hawaiian, part-Hawaiian and Portuguese share life, work and play.

Gag Man With Epaulets

"WE HELD HIM DOWN with our nose which we had inserted between his teeth for that purpose," wrote George Derby telling of a misunderstanding with an editor.

Derby was a lieutenant in the United States Army and stationed in San Diego at the time. His life had been eventful and included a full share of fighting. In the Mexican War he was aide-de-camp to Gen. "Fuss and Feathers" Scott. There is a story of Scott finding Derby lying wounded on the battlefield.

"My God, Darby! You're wounded!"

"Yes, Gen. Scatt!"

"My name is Scott, not Scatt," said the general.

"My name is Derby, not Darby," replied the lieutenant.

Lt. George Derby—Army frontiers knew his wit. Photo taken about 1846.

THIS STORY is unlikely for Derby liked his Army life and was careful to see that his humor didn't interfere with it. He was born in Massachusetts in 1823 and after graduating from West Point he saw a wide variety of service. He did not come into his own, though, until he was stationed in California.

One of his jobs was to find if the Colorado was navigable to Fort Yuma. He did not reach the post but he originated a joke that is still standard: "A very wicked soldier died there once, and, of course, went straight to the hottest corner of perdition — and the next day wired back for his blankets."

He was stationed in San Diego but he went to San Francisco whenever he could for there he could find full scope for his wit. He contributed to various journals under the name of John Phoenix.

HIS HUMOR was flowing and natural. He went into the Eagle Bakery and blandly asked for a baked eagle.

He insisted on tagging along with the wife of his best friend and ended up at the founding but he went to San Francisco Ladis' Relief Society. Ladies were decorous in those days and when they asked him to leave he did so. The next day an account of the meeting appeared in the Alta Californian. It told of the ladies drinking brandy smashes and booting reporters into the street. The ladies were annoyed but San Francisco was amused for it recognized the article as good comedy. Incidentally, the society still exists.

Before introducing two friends Derby once told each, in private of course, that the other was deaf and very sensitive about it. The two men spent an hour or

Machine Bares Brain's Secrets

By Vera Williams

IT'S A COMPLICATED looking machine called an electroencephalograph.

It's commonly called a "brain wave" machine, and it is helpful in the diagnosis of brain injuries, brain tumors, meningitis, encephalitis and epilepsy.

There are six in Long Beach hospitals — one in St. Mary's and five in the Veterans Administration Hospital.

The one in St. Mary's Hospital, located in the out patient department, was given the hospital a year ago by a Long Beach doctor for community service. It is operated by Mrs. Hazel Jahnke, technician trained in the Los Angeles County General Hospital.

A NUMBER of tests are made daily, by appointment. Patients come from not only Long Beach but a number of near-by towns, referred by their physicians.

The patient lies, relaxed, on a bed and electrodes are applied to his scalp, covering the brain area. The patient experiences little or no discomfort during the recording.

The electrodes lead to a jack box connected to the machine, where eight pens simultaneously record in graph form electrical activity of various parts of the brain.

The graph looks something like a cardiograph, which records heart action.

Each test takes about 30 minutes. Each sheet of paper of the graph records 30 seconds.

YOUNGEST CHILD ever given a brain wave test at St.

This Cult Puts the Sea on Canvas

By Harry R. Peterson

Pete Fulmer Photos

Title of this seascape is "Rocks at Sunset." It was painted by Southland artist Henry Vander Velde.

IF YOU had been on Highway 101, near Arch Beach south of Laguna Beach in the early 1940s you might have seen an unusual figure coming up the road in the direction of the Arch Beach Market- an elderly man with a patriarchal white beard, dressed in a white suit, high Russian boots and beret, and hauling a small cart in which there was a kerosene can.

This was not one of the local eccentrics. It was Frank W. Cuprien, dean of a cult of painters in Laguna who do not sit by their cars by the roadside and paint landscape, mountains or desert. They are interested in the eternal conflict of sea and shore. The majesty of the storm; the mystery of moonlit water, the unforgettable beauty of the reflected sunset on the water, are the subjects that they reproduce on canvas. They paint the sea.

Most of them are storm painters. The master of marine art is not often the artist of smooth summer seas and quiet coves. To climb and sketch from dangerous rocks close to massive surf, or depict the hurrying scuds and yellow sky from the deck of a heaving ship, takes more than a sense of color, composition and design, though he must have these also. He must love the sea.

CUPRIEN LIVED alone in an ocean front house. Electricity perhaps interfered with his acute perception of light; he used only lamps.

Other famous marine painters separated themselves from family and friends to catch the mystery of the ocean. They painted from locations dangerous, to say the least. Winslow Homer settled in a small Northumberland village to paint the great grey seas off the English coast. In Maine he lived miles from the nearest neighbor and worked in a movable canvas room trundled as close to the surf as he could get.

Charles H. Woodbury got himself lashed to the side of a West Indian steamer careening in a hurricane to get a sketch of the bow as it rose to meet the mountainous waves.

OCEAN PAINTING is different from other kind because the sea must be painted partially from memory. It is never still. Only a few seconds elapse between the breaking of a wave that is the dominating feature of a picture and a flat mass of foam.

The artist has to memorize it – as well as a hundred moods of the water for future use—the whitecaps of a two-reef breeze, the great ground swell that slaps and thunders against the beach at night, the zigzag darting blues of a squall and the pearly tints of a dead calm. Often only sketches are completed at the location. The finished painting is done in the studio, creatively.

A memorial room, dedicated to the genial, kindly Cuprien is part of the exhibit in the Laguna Beach Art Gallery, next to the Victor Hugo cafe.

CUPRIEN, who painted his last picture in 1948, has been replaced by a new cult of marine painters, who have captured the unique and picturesque South Coast shoreline with fidelity and feeling. Each has a distinctive style of his own. Each either lives on the ocean or has had wide experience at sea. Alfred Dupont and Robert Wood of Laguna, Henry Vander Velde of Salt Creek and Bennet Bradbury of Capistrano Beach are now the principal marine painters of the artist town and its vicinity.

Here is the way you do it, according to Mr. Dupont:

"Rough in the main masses of your composition with pigment, leaving the foam blank if the subject has spume or rearing creases. Marines are symphonies in blue, and since all the color you see is a reflection of the sky, you paint this first—the whole tone of your painting depends upon it. Get in the orange, yellow and rose tints of the horizon. Use ultramarine, cobalt and cerulean blue for the ocean, if it is clear. Finish it at home, if necessary.

"Twenty-five sketches will be flat. And then, suddenly, one springs to life. You have caught the spray from that blow-hole, spray that hovered only a few seconds before it dropped; the incredible blue of the Southern California ocean, the wheeling gull, the green in the breaking wave. You have painted the sea."

As Emerson said: "Behold the sea, the opaline, the plentiful, the strong."

The Maddest Bass I Ever Saw

By Donnell Culpepper

Shasta Lake bass never know when to quit. This one is trying desparately to spit out the line.

GIVE A MAN a rod and reel and send him forth a-fishin' and he never knows when to quit. Any angler's wife will tell you that.

But how about the fish? Some fish tire easily, float belly-up to a net and just fade away. Others don't; they'll fight all the way to the landing, and even flop a few times when a fisherman starts to clean them for dinner.

It was my pleasure to meet, hook and finally catch just such a fish in Shasta Lake. I've caught bigger bass and smaller bass, but this veteran large-mouth thought he knew all the tricks that even older and larger bass had forgotten.

Johnny Alford, who owns and operates Bridge Bay Resort on Shasta, and I had gone far up the McCloud River arms of the lake and had reached a quiet cove, sheltered from the wind. It was the most beautiful bass-fishing spot I've ever seen. We cut the motor outside the cove and had paddled into smooth water from which rose old tree stumps and roots.

I was fishing with an extremely light outfit—two-ounce rod, tiny spinning reel and three-pound-test monofilament. Johnny had told me: "You're crazy for trying to catch big bass with that light outfit," but I persisted. I put on a small deep-running plug and laid a cast right beside a moss-covered log in the deep shade. As it hit there was an explosion of fury from underneath and a big bass went three feet into the air with my plug before I'd even had a chance to start a retrieve.

HE LEAPED again and that time went over the log, shook his head and the plug fell out of his mouth. Johnny just grinned and remarked: "That outfit's too light." We paddled about the big cove for an hour, catching one- and two-pounders after we both changed to surface poppers. Some we kept; others we released.

Finally we made a full circuit of the cove and came back where we started. I told Johnny: "Just paddle over to that log again. I'm going to try for grandpa." I had switched to a large-sized Hula Popper, a floating surface lure that made a popping sound at each twitch of the rod. I laid a cast at exactly the same spot as I had an hour before.

Sure enough, there was another explosion just after the plug touched the surface and out came Mr. Bass, throwing his head from side to side. He leaped twice, then went over that same log again and the monofilament snapped. Johnny didn't grin; he laughed loudly and yelled: "That's twice you have lost that bass." I was flabbergasted and that's putting it mildly.

Then, just as I retrieved the remainder of the line and started putting on another lure, there was another disturbance off the bow and out came a bass, leaping and throwing his head. Moments later the same thing occurred off the stern. Then it dawned on me what had happened and I screamed to Johnny: "That fool bass has got that Hula Popper down his throat and is trying to get it out."

JOHNNY TURNED serious and started paddling toward each successive jump. That bass covered an area of at least 50 square feet in the next three or four minutes, leaping and jumping wildly. The jumps became fewer and shorter. Finally he tried just one more almost beside the boat and Johnny slipped the net under him.

When we got the fish into the boat, there was the Hula Popper down his throat. That hungry bass had hit so hard that he had swallowed the entire lure. It took a bit of maneuvering to get those hooks out of throat, mouth and gills, but I did. Even then, that angry bass almost flipped out of the boat when the lure was extracted. I grabbed him and finally got him on the stringer.

Two hours later when we reached the Bridge Bay boat landing and started to clean our fish, Gramps was still in a fighting mood. Except for the fact that he weighed just over three pounds and had been injured, I would have cased him back into the lake to fight another day.

LAKE SHASTA'S bass, largemouths and smallmouths are notorious fighters. Perhaps it is the fact that three large rivers, the Sacramento, McCloud and Pit, empty extremely cold water into it the year around. Even a small eight-inch bass will bounce in and out of the water like a steelhead.

Claude Kreider, former Long Beach assistant fire chief and now president of the western division, Outdoor Writers Association of America, and Don Waggoner, also of Long Beach, explored the various arms of Shasta three weeks later and found the same fighting fish. They caught more fish than they could use. Claude admitted that he hadn't seen bass anywhere to equal the savagery of those in Shasta. His largest was a four-pounder.

Even the bluegills—and there are thousands of them—fight like little demons when taken on any kind of lure.

Claude M. Kreider of Long Beach takes lure from bass.

Mary's was two months. The oldest patient was 78 years.

In 1874 an Englishman, Caton, observed electrical activity in the brain of living animals, and he became convinced that these fluctuations were related to the functional activity of the brains.

Hans Berger of Jena, Germany, considered the father of electroencephalography, began his work in 1902 and finally, in 1924, was successful in recording electrical activity of the human brain.

By 1934 he had demonstrated (1) that the brain of man has an electrical beat, (2) this beat comes from the neurons and not from the blood vessels, (3) this electrical beat changes with age, sensory stimulation and with various changes in the physical and chemical state of the body.

LATER DOCTORS did monumental work in epilepsy and cerebral locations and demonstrated that brain tumors near the skull may be localized by the electroencephalogram through the unopened skull.

The same as other techniques, the EEG has its limitations. It is of little or no value in a diagnosis of schizophrenia, manic depressive psychosis or feeblemindedness. It cannot localize deep cerebral, cerebellar or deep brain lesions, and it does not distinguish between different types of pathological processes. The EEG is not a record of all brain activity, but the record of certain type of activity from special brain area, the cerebral cortex.

It is most helpful, say doctors, in detecting epilepsy, cerebral tumors, subdural hematoma, cerebral hemorrhage, cerebral thrombosis, cerebral trauma, cerebral abscess, meningitis, encephalitis and behavior disorders of an epileptic or postencephalitic type.

L. A.-London Flight

Trans World Airlines will inaugurate the first and fastest one-plane intercontinental air service from California through to London and Frankfurt with a fleet of long-range Super-G Constellations beginning Nov. 1, E. O. Cocke, TWA vice president-sales, announces.

Super-G Constellations flying nonstop from Los Angeles to New York and thence nonstop to London will make this one-plane, one-stop, overnight service more than seven hours faster than existing "polar route" schedules. The flight will continue to Frankfurt, resulting in a time saving of four hours from California to that city.

Total elapsed time for the 6,000-mile flight from Los Angeles to London will be 21 hours and five minutes. The intercontinental flights will leave Los Angeles every Sunday, for London and Frankfurt, where the return westbound service will originate on Wednesdays and Fridays.

"Anything doing in Zurich? I've about decided to go to school there but don't want a dull-as-dishwater life."

This is quite a lively town up to midnight. Those medieval cobbled back streets are full of Swiss yodeling in and out of bars. The accordions play and there is a good deal of singing and I have never run into what you would call a rough spot.

The lonesome ladies of the town go to sort of tea houses where they serve chocolate. You spot them on the street because they nearly all have a toy poodle on a leash. The idea is that gentlemen thus get an opening for conversation by patting the poodle.

While the ladies dip the chocolate, they park the poodle in the checkroom. And it is quite a sight to see these ruffled shills, sitting side by side in the racks.

Probably the greatest hotel in the world is the Baur-au-lac. You can have wonderful dinners beside the lake. The place is full of the worst kind of rich people: All the sharp money boys who finance hot oil, gun running and the pushing of material behind the Iron Curtain make their deals over the tables at the Baur-au-lac. A really gaudy operation.

"Can I get a baby sitter in Rome?"

YOU CAN get anything in Rome. For a baby sitter, see if At Your Service, Via Versilia 2, is still in business. I think they are. Baby sitters, escorts, interpreting and shopping service.

"... and I never found a good martini in Paris. So where do you go?"

You go to the Ritz or the Plaza Athenee — the bar called the Relais Plaza. The Ritz is followed by an international set who follow the rules laid down by Ernest Hemingway.

The Relais Plaza belongs to another club who are following I don't know what.

There are definite rules to the game. You must ask for the head bartender at the Ritz (whose name I forget). At the Plaza Athenee, you wave off all the minor help and insist the martini be made by Jacques Hebrard.

Each side must insist that his boy makes the driest martini in the world.

If you must have a martini in France, though, ask for "un dry." Ask for martini and you get a warm glass of Martini vermouth. Did you try that brandy and water deal they call fine a l'eau? Better. And cheaper.

Your mailed questions will be answered (no phone calls). Send stamped and addressed envelope to: Stan Delaplane, Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, Sixth and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif.

Listerine Antiseptic Stops Bad Breath 4 Times Better Than Tooth Paste!

Germs—The Major Cause of Mouth Odor

Far and away the most common cause of bad breath is fermentation of proteins which are always present in the mouth. This fermentation is caused by germs and research shows that your breath stays sweeter longer, the more you reduce germs in the mouth.

Listerine Antiseptic Kills Germs by Millions

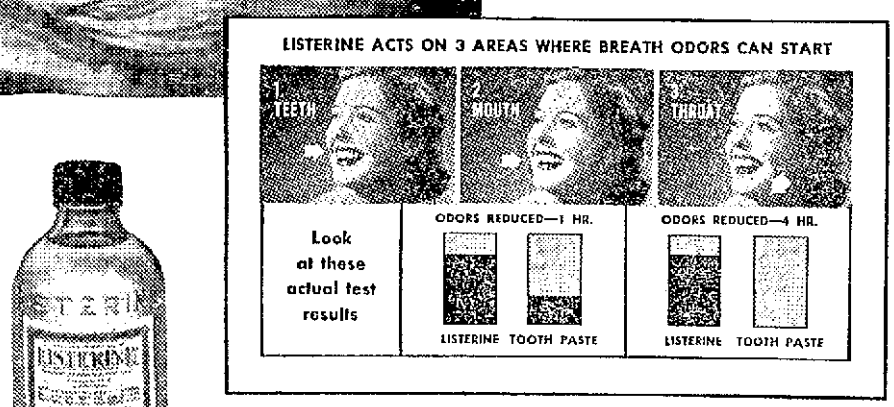

Listerine Antiseptic kills germs by millions on contact. Test after test has shown that even fifteen minutes after gargling with Listerine Antiseptic, germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces were reduced up to 96.7%; one hour afterward, as much as 80%.

No Tooth Paste Kills Germs Like This ... Instantly

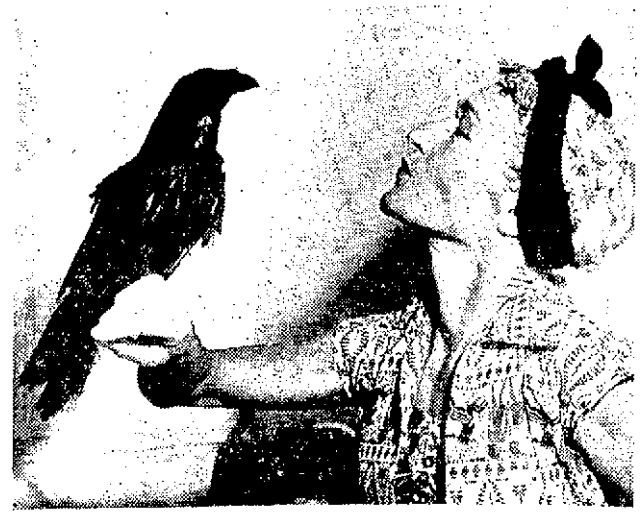

Tooth paste with the aid of a tooth brush is an effective method of oral hygiene. It depends largely on the mechanical and masking methods of removing unpleasant mouth odors. But no tooth paste gives you the proven Listerine Antiseptic method —banishing bad breath with instant super-efficient germ-killing action.

Listerine Antiseptic Acts on Many Surfaces

Listerine Antiseptic kills millions of germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces. It kills disease-producing germs as well as many types of odor-producing germs. No tooth paste offers proof like this of killing germs that cause bad breath.

THE MOST WIDELY USED ANTISEPTIC IN THE WORLD

Called Blackie, talking crow in Mrs. Charles Moore's small home zoo, keeps insisting that "My name's Sam!"

Sam's the Name

By Juanita B. Worsham

MOST PEOPLE have pets. Mrs. Charles Moore, 2764 Webster Ave., has a menagerie.

It began with Sato, a year-old, white-faced Capuchin monkey. He became a member of the family, and was given the guest room with a little bed, mattress, pillow and cover.

As months passed, Mrs. Moore learned one monkey was not much trouble, so she bought another, Choo-San, 3½ months old.

Sato became fond of Choo-San and taught him to lasso with his tail. Sato fed Choo-San by hand and brushed his hair.

Moore built a cage, 8 by 10 feet, in the backyard. There the monkeys remain during the day, swinging and acting like clowns. They deftly remove bobby pins, earrings, pins and the like from persons approaching their cage. If they can't reach with their hands, they lasso with their tails. When visitors leave, they cry.

LINATONE is added to milk to give the monkeys a good coat of hair. Monkeys are big eaters and consume an avocado, drink a quart of milk a day, and prefer frozen vegetables. Ham, bacon and Jello are relished. A candy sucker lasts all day. When they see cake, they hold out their arms and beg. Sato and Choo-San won't eat peanuts or bananas. The Moores frequently take the monkeys riding in the evening.

By 8 p.m. in summer and 6:30 p.m. in winter, Sato and Choo-San retire, but first they eat bread and warm milk and sit in front of TV. They don't like animals, especially dogs, on the screen. When they do not like a picture, they jump up, change the dial or turn it off. They sleep in the same bed, with Choo-San's arms wrapped tightly around Sato.

A FRIEND gave Mrs. Moore a pet rat. She named him Patches, because of the brown markings on his white background and a black eye. He crawls up on her shoulder and kisses her if he wants to be fed.

Then a relative brought Mrs. Moore a crow. She named him Blackie but he goes about saying "My name is Sam." He eats corn and dog food. If he is given food he does not like, he kicks it out the door. He picks flowers and brings them in the house. He frequently calls on the neighbors.

The crow's main fault is that he flies to the roof, rips off shingles and sends them sailing through the air.

THE LAST PET accepted was a skunk. He has been deodorized but just the same his name is Stinky. He takes a daily bath, never has fleas or lice. He stands on his hind feet like a dog and begs for food. He loves flowers and perfumes and goes about sniffing them.

Mrs. Moore remembers the wolf her son had as a pet for three years. At various times the family has had pet snakes.

She says her time now is well occupied, no more pets. No, wait a minute. She might consider an ocelot.

Get a Lift With Ice Cream

By Mildred K. Flanary
Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

ICE CREAM — piled sky high, embellished with fixings from syrup to whipped cream to a cherry on top — that's the dream of all teen-agers. It's a dream come true with adults, too.

Youngsters never get enough ice cream. This dessert stirs memories of birthday parties, rewards for good behavior, celebrations of special significance. Ice cream then meant a special trip to the store when company arrived, a stop on the way from the beach on sultry summer days or turning the freezer on Sunday afternoon. While the forms of ice cream may have changed, the pleasure it gives is always the same.

Super-duper sundaes are a gracious way of serving ice cream, allowing each guest to concoct his own. Fill small serving dishes, or Lazy Susan tray compartments, with the following foods to spoon over ice cream; coconut, fruit cocktail, apricot halves, crushed pineapple and nuts (pecans, walnuts or peanuts). If the occasion is a get-together of today's juvenile sophisticates, let them whip up their own concoctions and provide their own rare appellations.

For a topping that's different and liked by all, we suggest a coffee-walnut sauce, the featured recipe today. There are many other complementary toppings and associates for this popular food.

Miscellaneous Sundae Toppings and Tricks

Spoon canned applesauce over a slice of chocolate or vanilla ice cream and add a dash of nutmeg.

Pour warmed maple syrup over vanilla ice cream and sprinkle salted almonds on top.

Crumble chocolate covered mints over vanilla or chocolate ice cream.

Make tart shells from packaged pastry mix; fill with vanilla ice cream and top with fresh, frozen or canned fruit.

Cut a cone-shaped piece from a bakery cup cake; fill with ice cream and drizzle with canned chocolate syrup.

Put a slice of ice cream atop a slice of packaged pound cake. Ribbon with butterscotch or fruit sauce.

Serve iced coffee with a spoonful of ice cream for coffee with a punch.

For mincemeat in summer dress, serve it warm over a slice of prepackaged vanilla ice cream.

Frozen fruit juice concentrates (orange, tangerine, pineapple, grape or cranberry) with a spoonful of ice cream and a fizz of soda make a "pigtail set" delight.

Sprinkle toasted coconut over vanilla or chocolate ice cream and top it with chocolate or butterscotch sauce.

For cantaloupe ring arounds, cut a plug in a cantaloupe melon opposite the stem end. Spoon in two tablespoons of brandy, sherry or rum. Replace plug and chill. To serve, slice in rings, remove seeds and pile ice cream in center.

Ice cream and a few fruits and sauces can turn any occasion into a festive event by devising sundaes.

Pineapple Honey Harmony

½ cup crushed pineapple
3 tablespoons honey
3 tablespoons chopped nutmeats
2 tablespoons beet or cane sugar

Combine sugar and pineapple in saucepan. Simmer slowly until sugar forms heavy sauce. Cool and add nuts. Serves four.

Coffee-Walnut Sauce:

1 cup sugar
1½ cups strong hot coffee
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ cup cold coffee or water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup broken walnuts

Put sugar in heavy skillet; melt over very low heat, stirring often. Gradually stir in hot coffee (use a long-handled spoon because lots of steam escapes). Dissolve cornstarch in cold coffee or water; gradually stir into sugar mixture. Cook and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Add butter or margarine, salt and walnuts. Serve warm or cold. Makes 2 cups.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

This House Suits Them to a 'T'

Photos by H. S. Melvin

To the Paul McClaughry family of four, their home is absolutely just what they want and they wouldn't change if rebuilding. Here's living room view.

By Eileen Ball

MR. AND MRS. PAUL McCLAUGHRY and their two teen-age daughters view family life as a sort of corporation. Nothing of major import affecting their family as a unit goes over the boards without their first counting the votes pro and con. Luckily, this even-numbered family of four rarely finds itself deadlocked!

When their new house at 5505 LaPasada St. was in the formulative stages, the McClaughrys counted the yeas and found that contemporary architecture and decor was their favored choice.

The girls wanted rooms as individual as their personalities. Each, of course, put capacious storage high on their lists.

Mrs. McClaughry had ideas about having a kitchen that, instead of being relegated to a spot by itself like an unhappy shut-in, could join with the fun-loving part of the house used as a den, a dining room and as an overflow party area.

McCLAUGHRY was adamant about the house being practical both in floor plan and maintenance.

They all vetoed fancy trim that contributes nothing to an easy and carefree mode of living. So the house that they commissioned the architectural firm of Poper and Lockett to design was to conform to a definite list of specifications. And because the architects were able to get a concise idea of what the McClaughrys wanted, the house they evolved has been, to quote Mrs. McClaughry, "Absolutely perfect in every respect." Furthermore, she states, they wouldn't change a single detail of this 2,000 square foot house were they to build again. And that, to be sure, is about as high a tribute as one can pay a new home.

A circular drive bordered with glossy ivy and colorful ivy geraniums sweeps to the garage placed on the front of the lot for the sake of privacy. An ornamental "eyebrow" of open egg crate lattice enhances the appearance of the garage, affords a shelter and helps tie it visually to the house.

A tall grapestake fence encloses the courtyard leading to the entry. With the gate closed, the house enjoys an absolute separation from the street.

Stepping inside this pleasing court, one sees that the house unfolds and opens itself to visitors with magnanimous hospitality. A wall of glass — inclusive of both fixed and sliding portions—runs along the length of the living room and opens to the private yard.

WIDE AND SHALLOW steps join the sliding doors to the concrete courtyard floor. With the draperies drawn back, the living room and its impressive arrangement of fine contemporary furniture seems to join the court in a complete and wonderful merger.

Flanking the steps and spanning the length of the room under the fixed glass windows are shallow flagstone planters kept abloom wth low-growing annuals.

A few feet past the living room doors is the entry landing with an overhead projection of egg crate latticing.

This is the more conventional entry for arriving guests. (The wide living room glass doors are pushed open to facilitate party circulation and expedite the practice of entertaining indoors and out simultaneously.)

Stepping through the front door one finds an entry surfaced with waxed cork and veneered on the left wall with Santa Maria fieldstone.

Beyond the entry and to the left is the living room with its visual affinity for the courtyard. Cork flooring, oatmeal-textured draperies and sandalwood walls combine to create a neutral and completely restful background for the contemporary furniture with its bright accent color.

A LONG SOFA upholstered in cocoa and chocolate tweed is punctuated with flame-orange throw pillows of the same fabric as is on the chair. A chair constructed simply of a hardwood frame laced with wide natural linen webbing has a pillow-headrest in hot orange.

One cannot help noticing how effectively the decorator played up the sleek and handsomely crafted furnishings with the simple and unusual technique of relying on just one vivid color for underscoring.

Near the fireplace of Santa Maria fieldstone—the back of which forms one wall of the entry—is a custom-styled cabinet for hi-fi and phonograph component parts. The exquisitely designed storage unit is of hand-rubbed walnut with doors of stark white masonite.

Through louvered doors is the kitchen-den area with its wealth of natural woodwork. Highlighting cabinets of clear white birch are counter tops of natural linen pattern plastic, linoleum of lime, coral and tan spatter and simply more shouting at each other at the tops of their voices.

IN A THEATER Derby tapped the shoulder of the man seated in front of him and whispered that he would like to speak to the man seated two seats forward. The gentleman passed the word but when all turned to the lieutenant the latter looked mystified and stared fixedly at the stage.

Judson "Boston" Ames was a rabid Democrat and the editor of the San Diego Herald. He was a large man who had once killed a sailor with one blow. The first state elections were coming up in California and Ames did everything in his power to sew up San Diego for his party. As the election drew near he felt he should go to San Francisco to be on hand to pick up some political plums.

He made the mistake of leaving the paper in the hands of Derby. As soon as "Boston" was on his way Derby brought out the paper for the Whig candidate.

The Whigs carried San Diego with a four to one majority.

DERBY CALLED the next issue the Illustrated San Diego Herald. He used boiler plate advertising cuts. A set of false teeth and three box cars, one of them upside down, represented a picture of a terrible train wreck. A cut of four sailing ships was called "The Battle of Lake Erie."

The next issue described Ames' return and the fight that followed. According to Derby, he held Ames down with his nose in Ames' teeth and held one of Ames' hands by entangling it in his hair. The fight ended with Derby naked except for the rim of a hat and Ames nursing a black eye and "a small boy standing beside the sufferer with a basin and glancing with interest over . . . the San Diego Herald, a fair copy which was struck upon the back of his shirt at the time we held him over the press." The account was sheer fiction for Ames took the whole incident as a joke.

Derby's funmaking was dampened by years of illness, of which he died in 1861. His life wasn't all one long laugh, but it definitely had its highlights.

ANSWER

Gus Edwards and Vincent Bryan wrote "In My Merry Oldsmobile" in 1905, when the Rolls-Royce and Oldsmobile were being manufactured, but before the Model T Ford (1908) or the Stutz Bearcat (1929), and of course, long before the many current models. Edwards, in addition to his song-writing ability, developed talent of children who later became stage, screen and radio-TV stars: Elsie Janis, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel and many others.

You Make It

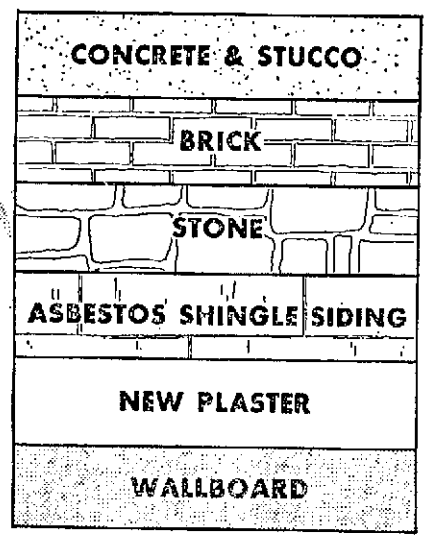

This big table provides for that family dinner party; for games, hobbies, carpenter work or for dressmaking. When not needed, store it in a closet or even behind a door. This is just the table for those bazaars and group activities at churches, clubs and community houses. Stock sizes of lumber are used. The pattern gives a cutting list for the number and the hardware needed for one table. All the parts are square cuts made with a hand saw. Order Pattern No. 372 as shown in the sketch, inclosing only 25 cents; or the table pattern may be ordered with the sewing corner packet consisting of five standard-size patterns for only $1 postpaid. Kids' Theater Opens a New Era

By Vera Williams

Two Children's Theater players: Mrs. Ray O. Gould Jr. in Princess role, and Mrs. Ethel Severson as Aladdin.

WHEN "RADIO RESCUE," adventure play by Charlotte Chorpenning, opens Oct. 21 in the Little Theater at Long Beach State College, the 17th production of Long Beach Children's Theater, it will mark the end of one era and the beginning of a new one.

The old era in which Children's Theater played to large audiences filled with children (and a few grownups). The new era in which Children's Theater will play to small, attentive audiences, preponderantly juvenile.

Little Theater at State College will hold 500 children at a time.

BUT LITTLE THEATER backers believe there is a closer, more intimate feeling between actors and audience in a smaller theater. And in the Little Theater every word spoken on the stage can be heard anywhere in the house — there are no "dead" spots. Lights are considered nearly perfect in the Little Theater and there are such conveniences as telephone lines between actors' rooms and back stage.

"Radio Rescue" will open with a "family night" at 7:30 p. m. Oct. 21. The next day, Oct. 22, will be reserved for Girl Scouts. The play will be repeated at 10 a. m., 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. Oct. 29 and Nov. 5.

Adult volunteers — all work for nothing, nobody gets a cent for anything — play all the roles, make the costumes and the sets. Acting is of a high caliber and costumes and sets are practically professional.

IT WAS IN 1947 that a group of Long Beach women, a number of them the mothers of young children, decided that something ought to be done about the lack of good stage plays in the city for boys and girls. They agreed that motion pictures, radio programs and comic books were all right — if properly selected. But these mothers felt there was a gap in the entertainment of Long Beach children which could be filled only by legitimate drama, especially written, directed and acted for youthful audiences.

The result was the Children's Theater. There are children's theaters in many parts of the United States, but the one in Long Beach is considered conspicuously successful.

IN CHILDREN'S THEATER plays, the actors not only act for an audience of children, but many of the roles are those of children. Yet the entire cast is composed of adult women. Anybody who thinks it is easy for an adult to play the part of a child or an elf or a fairy might try out for one of the productions some time.

An audience of children is a forthright audience — not supercritical but certainly super-frank. And mothers considered it an achievement when they can get attention and spontaneous applause from children.

"Land of the Dragon," Chinese fantasy presented in November, 1947, in Ebell Theater was the first production. It was followed by "Cinderella," "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater," "Pied Piper of Hamlin," "The Princess and the Swineherd," "Once Upon a Clothesline," "The Emperor's New Clothes," "Pinocchio," "Hansel and Gretel," "Steadfast Tin Soldier," "Seven-League Boots," "Doodle and the Bremen Band," "Snow Treasure," "Cinderella of Loreland," "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" and "Alice in Wonderland." The plays have been given in Ebell Theater, Municipal Auditorium, Jordan and Poly auditoriums.

BUSES BRING CHILDREN from the school grounds for the shows and return them to the playgrounds.

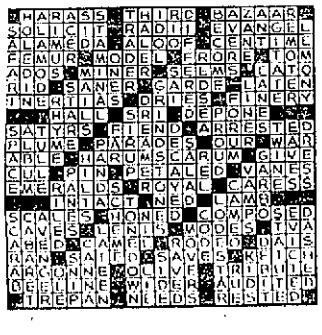

Mrs. William F. Macrate is president of the Children's Theater. The advisory committee includes Frank Harnett, David Sievers, David L. Bryant, George Geiger, Sam Heavenrich, Larry Johns, Gerald Desmond, Douglas Newcomb, John Whatley, Mrs. Florence Johnson, Mrs. Albin Larson, Mrs. Herbert E. Waite, Miss Frances Dixon, Miss Mary Schallenberg and Mrs. Gail Hudson.

Productions of Children's Theater are well costumed and produced. Children are enthralled by the plays.

PET PARADE

Every Dog Has His Week

By Eleanor Avery Price

Symbol of National Dog Week is this poster of family and dog watching at the window for Dad.

NATIONAL DOG WEEK starts today and provides a special few days set aside not only to honor your best pal, your dog, but to encourage all dog lovers to strive harder toward objectives of the non-profit National Dog Welfare Guild. These are a good home for every dog, elimination of stray dogs from the streets, better dog owners, consideration for dogs and all animals, understanding the use of dogs as companions, helpers, and home protectors; fair laws for dogs and their owners, respect for the rights of non-dog owners and increased research of serious diseases such as rabies.

Guy Lombardo, popular orchestra leader, is the 1955 national chairman of the week which will be observed in more than 3,000 communities across the nation.

Lombardo is backed by an advisory committee which includes top executives of Camp Fire Girls, Girl Scouts of America, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' Club of America, American Humane Assn., American Kennel Club, American Veterinary Medical Assn., American Animal Hospital Assn., and several others.

Recognizing the fact that the dog has come a long way with man in many phases of man's life, the Guild has chosen for 1955 the slogan of the dog as a "Member of the Family."

SINCE A DOG is truly necessary for the full growth and well-being of the average happy family, and since the dog helps create harmony by his wonderful qualities of love, loyalty, watchfulness, and courage which he gives with no strings attached, this year's slogan pays proper tribute to that fine quality of family unit that is strengthened by the canine members.

The joys and benefits that come through owning a good dog more than make up for the responsibility, care, and training that the pet needs.

So great are the rewards of owning a dog that it is even possible for the most badly adjusted and self-centered child to change for the better when given the faithful friendship and responsibility of caring for a dog. A dog of his own can change a child's whole trend of thought, action, and deed, and help keep the child from the boredom and lack of interests that so often lead him into bad company.

THIS IS A VERY REAL truth to consider, especially if the home is broken or if for one reason or another there is a lonely child in the family. Give such a child a dog to care for and encourage him to read books on dog care, to join junior kennel groups in order to meet other kids at obedience training classes and obedience shows. Help him to train his dog to be a good canine citizen, for a youngster training his dog to obey laws and commands is inspired to be a better citizen himself.

Raymond J. Hanfield, executive secretary of the National Dog Welfare Guild which sponsors National Dog Week, sums it up nicely with these words, "You can't have a bad child if he has a good dog."

The 1955 poster reproduced with this article will be used nationally this week, and it portrays the heart-warming scene of a typical American family with a dog, in this case a beagle, waiting at the window for Dad to come home. The illustration is by a famous artist, Albert Staehle.

SANTA ANA Valley Kennel Club is holding an all-breed and obedience O. B. sanction match today at La Palma Park in Anaheim. There will be classes also for puppies two months and up. Entries close at 12 noon.

AUSTRALIAN Silky Terrier Club of this region is holding its first All-Silky show today at the home of Mrs. Robert Cooley, 9100 Vanalden in Northridge. Spectators are invited.

LAKEWOOD Obedience Club will entertain at Shriner's Hospital in Los Angeles on Sept. 24 instead of the previously announced date.

Night Owls Flock Together

By Jule Armin

"DON'T FEEL sorry for yourself if you can't sleep nights. Tune in on Ben Hunter's 'Other Side of the Day' radio program and you won't want to sleep."

That's the verdict of 15,000 registered members of his Night Owl Clubs, of whom 150 live in Long Beach.

Not only is Ben Hunter heard widely over the United States and Canada, but according to mail count, a quarter-million persons listen to him in such far-flung places as Germany, England, Tahiti, New Zealand and Korea.

NIGHT OWLS publish their own magazine, "The Limb," and hold annual get-togethers. In 1954, more than 8,000 of them gathered at Banning. Last June, 30,000 traveled by bus, auto, trailer, even motored wheel chairs and planes for a week end of fun and good fellowship at Big Bear.

A strong bond of kinship links those who work and wake "on the other side of the day."

For instance, Stan Routledge of Long Beach owes his life to being a Night Owl Club member. He lives alone and one night he was seized by a heart attack.

He managed to get to the telephone but he was too weak to look up a doctor. An invitation to a Night Owl meeting, propped against the phone, bore an RSVP phone number. Stan dialed it. Sure enough, the Night Owl was awake and alert. She called police. An ambulance rushed Stan to the hospital for emergency treatment.

"It's lucky I had that Night Owl number," he said.

ALL THIS began a little over three years ago, when Ben Hunter, a good-looking, fun-loving but serious-minded chap of about 30, sitting alone in his glass-walled cubicle at KFI began wondering who — if anybody — listened to his program through the wee, small hours.

Was it worth while for him to "bat his brains out" to be entertaining or should he take the easy, disc-jockey-and-nothing-else route?

He took his microphone down on the street to see who was up at that hour. He found one lone milkman and a couple of truck drivers. Sure, they listened to his program, they assured him.

The milkman did as he delivered the milk.

THE TRUCK drivers did, as they rattled across country.

"There must be 100 of us night truck drivers," one explained. "It's mighty good to hear a human voice when you're rolling a hundred miles from nowhere. The people and things you talk about keep us awake better than music."

Ben went back to the studio a happier man. If the night drivers liked his program, perhaps other night workers did, too. He asked his air audience to tell him what they were doing that they should be awake from midnight to dawn.

Frank Fisher, calling from ship-to-shore off Long Beach, gave Ben the idea of making unusual phone calls part of his program. So he brought in "beeper," or monitored phone calls, making the audience part of his radio show. Letters from listeners are read, also.

NO ONE — not even Ben — knows what to expect. Ted Olson, San Francisco amateur horticulturist, offered seeds from his new "burpless cucumber." Old-timers try to outdo each other with exciting, historical experiences.

Business men offer funny stories and brain-twister puzzles. Scientists, students and archaeologists come up with unusual bits of information.

Fred Phlaff, Long Beach gun fancier, compared his collection of historical firearms with other ballistic experts.

Uranium hunters swapped tips. Hunters of flying saucers compared theories.

A lonely Catalina Island man, discouraged by the loss, in rapid succession, of his wife, his boat and his health, finally was aroused by a Night Owl program. A post card at first, then letters and finally "beeper" talks.

HIS RICH past and retentive memory gave him so much to offer that listeners soon were clamoring for "more Doc Vaughn." Now Doc has regained his health, his old-time boundless energy, and he has written a book, "The Print of My Remembrance," the royalties of which go to cancer research.

Margaret Newcomb, well known in Long Beach entertainment circles, called the first Long Beach group together. Ten persons showed up. Now, less than a year later, the group searches for a large meeting place for its monthly gatherings.

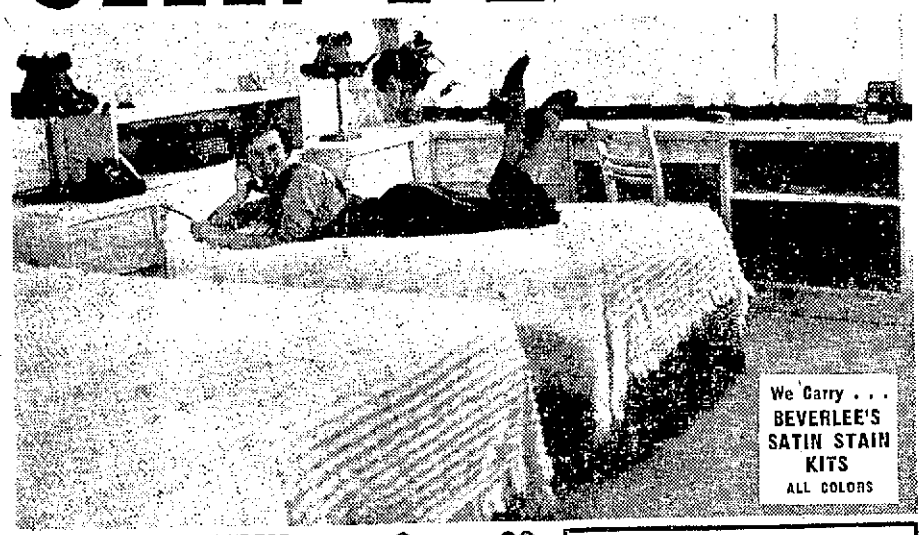

KFI's owl disc jockey Ben Hunter livens up the night.

When a Sailor Kisses a Girl

"GEE, YOU ACT LIKE YOU NEVER FELT AN ICICLE BEFORE."

DENNIS THE MENACE, who appears regularly on The Independent and the Sunday Independent, Press-Telegram comic pages, is the hero (?) of another book, "Dennis the Menace Rides Again" (Holt, $1). You've never seen Hank Ketcham's little puncturer of large egos in better fettle as the above sample proves!

SAILORS KISS EVERYBODY, and "Grandmother Grossie" not only approves but says "It doesn't mean a thing, other than that they are glad to be back in port, alive and safe and well."

In Florence McGehee's new book she reminisces about her beloved grandmother, known to hundreds of homesick sailors in Oakland as "Grossie." Grossie's home was a haven for the lonely, for they not only received good food, but warm and loving understanding. When Florence and her sister, Ruthie, visited their grandmother, they were constantly delighted by the motley household. Mr. Foster, a hungry neighbor, paid for his supper by removing his glass eye, sailors brought them exotic gifts from far away lands, and they thrilled to the stories of strange countries.

Miss McGehee writes her memoirs of the late Victorian days in the same warm style she wrote "Please Excuse Johnny." The charm and humor of "Sailors Kiss Everybody" (MacMillan Co., $3.50) should add to her stature as a California writer. —F. T. H.

STEVENSONIONS will welcome "Our Samoan Adventure" (Harper, $4), the diary Fanny Stevenson kept during the last years of the life of her famous husband, Robert Louis Stevenson, on Samoa. Charles Neider came upon the manuscript in Monterey, Calif., and painstakingly deciphered it, the most difficult parts with special equipment at Huntington Library in San Marino. In addition to his job of editing, Mr. Neider has written an introduction and added notes throughout to clarify the text. It's not only the first time the entire diary has been published: the book contains photographs of RLS, Fanny, and others of the family taken from old albums, some of which have never before been reproduced.—F. T. K.

LOWELL THOMAS has a whale of a book in "Great True Adventures" (Hawthorn, $5). As in his own life, Thomas takes adventure where he finds it so he does this compilation of spine-tingling episodes recorded by such stalwarts as Lawrence of Arabia, Joshua of the Bible, Benvenuto Cellini, Plutarch, Gen. John C. Fremont, Xenophon and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen. And as the adventures range from ancient to modern times, their settings cover a great part of the earth. Thomas, author, explorer and, above all, adventurer, has written an introduction and prefatory notes to each of the 29 stories.—P. F.

WHEN THE CITY was founded, a soothsayer recited its life as more than nine generations. "The Years of the City," by George R. Stewart, (Houghton Mifflin, $4.50) is an account of those years, beginning with the landing of the people, their conflicts to establish themselves in a hostile area, and the building of the city walls, and their vigorous defense. And as a city crumbles, Phrax crumbled, first from its less vigorous citizens, and then from trust in wrong leaders. You will find no city or land like this quoted in history, but it is symbolic of all of them.—C. L.

URANIUM is vital in this atomic age, not only for weapons of defense but also in such peacetime fields as medicine, industry and agriculture. An important book, therefore, is "Uranium and Other Miracle Metals" (Sterling, $3.50), in which Fred Reinfeld tells where uranium is likely to be found, what it looks like, what happens to it after it comes out of the mine, and what role the Atomic Energy Commission plays in obtaining it. Field prospector of uranium or armchair prospector of knowledge, either will find it absorbing.

A HIGH-RANKING GIFT for the man whose hobby is guns will be "The First Winchester: The Story of the 1866 Repeating Rifle" (Morrow, $5). John E. Parsons, who will be remembered for two previous books about guns — "The Peacemaker and Its Rivals" and "Henry Deringer's Pocket Pistol" — fondly traces the development of the famous Winchester from its conception through its role on the western frontier. There are scores of interesting old illustrations, some of which make up the end papers.—F. T. K.

FROM HER HIGH PERCH in the old willow tree, Lesley Ross could see the countryside for miles around. Connecticut was at war in 1780 and the conflict was not always going well for the Americans. Lesley watched the coming and going of friends and enemies. How she became involved in intrigue and romance is the story told in Margaret Leighton's new book, "Who Rides By?" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $2.75).

In this historically accurate novel, the characters of Revolutionary War times become very real to the young reader. Older girls will like the book although boys should also enjoy the action it contains. The vocabulary is excellent for the young person, yet there is no sense of "writing down." Those who believe it is important that the youth of America understand something of the trials of other times will like it since the book pictures that phase very skilfully. Aunts and grandmothers will approve of this story as a gift for birthdays or for Christmas. Teachers and librarians will like it for supplementary reading lists.—E. G.

Pictures in the Sunset

By the Shutterbug

DO YOU RECALL that wonderful song, "St. Louis Blues"—with its downbeat rhythm and its plaintive cry, "I hate to see that evening sun go down"?

Well, a lot of picture-takers once felt pretty much the same way. But no longer—because a great many of them have learned how easy it is to take beautiful sunset pictures with full-color film.

In general, it's safe to say that color shots of sunsets produce more spontaneous sighs of pleasure than any other type of scenic shown on home screens or mounted in the family album.

ACTUALLY, the making of a color shot as the sun goes down has become about as easy as anything can be.

If you should miss out on the exactly correct exposure, nothing much will be lost—your chances for a superb picture are still excellent.

A bit of over-exposure will just seem as though the days were getting shorter a little ahead of schedule.

Now think back for a moment to the sunsets you've most enjoyed. Probably there were trees or distant buildings or hills somewhere on the edge of the view.

BE SURE to include them—you know, foreground interest is almost an essential for any scenic view.

Why not try to have someone standing beside a tree—and when you shoot, remember that the overhanging boughs can nicely frame your whole picture.

Naturally, anyone or anything between your camera and the setting sun will come in silhouette, because all the light is far, far beyond.

LADIES' NIGHT, a yearly event of the Long Beach Cinema Club, will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Houghton Park clubhouse. Prize-winning films by the ladies will be shown and prizes awarded. Mrs. Lewis Underwood will be chairman with Mrs. Cliff Harris in charge of entertainment and Mrs. Howard Derr in charge of the contest. Refreshments will be served by the men.

LONG BEACH Camera Guild will have a color slide competition at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Municipal Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Winners of the black and white print competition this month were Virginia Callender, first; Bill Jordan, second; Ronald Selvester, third; Virginia Callender and Clare Grounds, honorable mention. Don Barrow, member of the Circle of Confusion, camera club of Whittier, judged the competition.

At this meeting the Guild became the proud possessor of two cups, presented by the Southern California Council of Camera Clubs, with which the local Guild is affiliated, for winning third place in A group, black and white, and third place in A group in color in competitions the past year.

A print by Christine Sandell, member of the Guild, recently was given a prominent place in the Los Angeles Times.

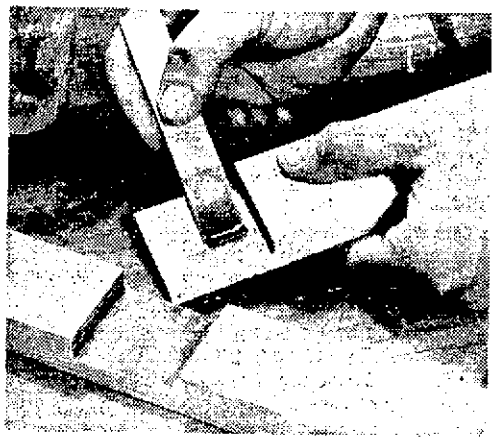

FOR THE RECORD, your prize catches will look better on film when you use a close-up lens on your camera. Such a lens is inexpensive, and will let you get within a couple of feet of your subject, add a lot of interest. Close-ups in color will be especially impressive when magnified by projection onto a screen. The close-up lens is a most enjoyable (and really easy!) way to build up your reputation as an angler who lands the big ones.

HOW TO Do Gluing Jobs; They Are Much Easier Than You Think

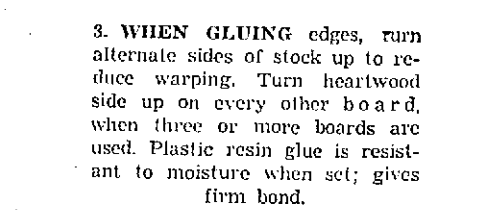

NINTY-NINE times out of 100, you can join two pieces of material faster and easier with the right glue than with any other fastening device on the market. There's nothing complicated about using glue, if you keep these simple rules in mind: 1. Get the joint ready for glue by removing wax, grease, oil or paint from the surfaces you'll coat with adhesive. 2. Determine the kind of glue that suits the purpose best. 3. Clamp the joint until the glue dries.

1. THIN COAT of glue is best. Spread it out over glue area, and wipe off the surplus after you clamp up the job. Most glues work best when temperature is 70 degrees or higher. A clean scrap of wood serves as spreader.

2. GLUE AREA determines strength of glue job . . . the more surface you coat, the better. Open mortise-and-tenon joint (bottom) gives glue 8 inches more holding surface than butt joint. Plan the joints so you have more glue area.

3. WHEN GLUING edges, turn alternate sides of stock up to reduce warping. Turn heartwood side up on every other board, when three or more boards are used. Plastic resin glue is resistant to moisture when set; gives firm bond.

4. WOOD EXPANDS more across grain than with the grain when it becomes wet . . . the cause of most joint failures. Assemble the pieces so grain direction is parallel on both pieces (arrow), for the same expansion and contraction.

GARDENS

Plants That Resist the Bugs

By Bob Gilmore

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S splendid growing conditions are as favorable to bugs as to the plants they feed on. Millions of dollars are spent every year in an effort to decrease the bug population. Yet it seems that every year there are more pests in the garden than ever before.

One way to solve this problem is to plant ornamentals that show a resistance to the more common garden pests.

One of the best specimens for foundation planting is a very popular specimen, abelia grandiflora. Landscapers throughout this area, as well as amateur gardeners, are well acquainted with its value. The abelia may be set in either full sun or part shade.

THE LEAVES are shiny but quite small and possessed of a delightful bronzy-green color. Clusters of fragrant, pinkish-white florets appear during a large part of the year. The abelia is hardy down to zero and does not taste very good to bugs.

THE ESCALLONIA is another splendid choice in this area for gardens subject to pest infestation. This plant is a natural for gardens situated along the coastal region. It seems to delight in the sea air.

Two varieties are available: One with red flowers and the other with pink florets. Sun or partial shade will prove a satisfactory location. The plants like a lot of water and, in return, will provide bloom during almost every month of the year.

Japanese boxwood is another favorite for gardeners in this region. It has attained its greatest fame when used as a hedge. The plant may be kept trimmed to a height of about two to three feet as it reacts favorably to fairly regular pruning.

ANOTHER rather interesting, relatively pest-free ornamental is Nandina domestica. This is better known as the heavenly bamboo. This is actually a dual purpose plant, for it may be used in the garden as a hedge or in pots for specimen purposes. It is probably most attractive during the winter season, when the entire plant turns a beautiful coppery-red.

Red berries are also part of this ornamental's equipment. If allowed to grow it will attain a height of about five feet at maturity and tolerates cold down to zero.

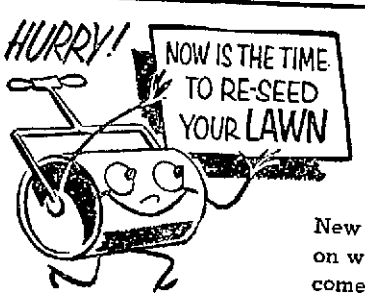

Bougainvilleas have been popular in this area for many years. While new varieties are introduced every now and then, it can be said that the old standby, Crimson Lake, is still one of the best.

Rhus ovata, a California native, takes heat and drought in stride. It is not bothered by the cold. It is often called the "sugar bush," a misleading name as the sugary coating tastes sour due to the sour berries. This plant wants lots of sun but thrives in almost any soil.

Other ornamentals that are not too palatable to the bugs include geranium, plumbago, podocarpus, polygala, veronica, vinca, scabiosa, iceplant, gazania, calendula, cedars, coreopsis, linum, gaillardia and arborvitae.

The podocarpus is relatively pest-free and is one of the Southland's most interesting hardy trees.

Gardening in Dusty Areas

By John Ronson

CERTAIN PLANTS, because of their texture or coloring, show little evidence of dust or dirt accumulation. Ornamentals whose foliage shows a neutral shade are best qualified for areas where dust particles fill the air. It should also be pointed out that for these sections glossy-leaved varieties should be discarded.

The pearl acacia, so named because of the pearl-grey foliage, is an excellent small tree for areas in which dust accumulates. This variety grows to about 15 feet and therefore can be recommended for practically any average sized landscape. It is actually a dwarf acacia but certainly one of the most colorful. The canary-yellow flower heads are at their peak during the holiday season and are excellent for cutting. Plant this acacia in full sun.

Another interesting tree for dust-infested sections is the olive or olea europaea. The foliage is a distinctive shade of grey-green and is excellently neutral. The tree is splendid for California landscape, attaining a height of not much more than 25 feet at maturity. This is a very easy tree to care for and it must not have too much water. A dry, relatively poor soil seems to suit it to advantage.

THE AUSTRALIAN tea tree, known botanically as leptrospermum laevigatum, is characterized by its grey-green leaves. These show very little evidence of dust, even when it apparently is piling up fast. This is a fairly wide-spreading shrub that requires a great deal of room. However, it seldom grows much taller than from eight to 10 feet. The flowers are small, dainty and white in tone. An open exposure and not too much water will keep this specimen happy.

Thujas, somewhat better known, perhaps, as arborvitaes, have splendid foliage for areas subject to dust storms. One of the most interesting for local growing conditions is Thuja orientalis Beverly Hills, often referred to as the golden column arborvitae. This is the tallest member of this plant group.

The dwarf ever-golden arborvitae, recognized botanically as T. orientalis Berckmen's, is perhaps the most popular dwarf conifer in the entire Southwest. This ornamental grows to a height of about 6 feet, is compact and conical in stature. The foliage is golden in tone.

PLUMBAGO CAPENSIS is somewhat of a hybrid between a sprawling shrub and a half-hearted climber. It is a tough individual and seems to thrive on neglect. Azure-blu flowers which look very much like the phlox appear intermittently throughout the year but mainly during the summer months. The plumbago is a very aggressive grower; it seems at its best when planted in a light soil and given very little moisture.

Cotoneasters are valuable foliage plants but during the late fall, winter and spring months their crowning attribute is the mass of bright-toned berries. The foliage is a dull grey-green which is not bothered very much by any accumulation of dust.

Lavendula officinalis with its silvery-grey foliage shows very little evidence of dust accumulation. This is the plant with the marvelous scent and actually the purple-blue flowers have even more fragrance than the leaves. This is a sun lover and enjoys a very easy culture. Other ornamentals that may be recommended for dusty areas are buddleia, erica, cedrus deodara, ceanothus and the pepper tree.

Plumbago capensis is an aggressive grower, not affected by dirt or dust; requires occasional pruning.

Tips on Gardening

GARDENING TIPS for the week . . . Gerberas, often called Transvaal daisies, are very much at home in the Southland. The plants enjoy a sunny exposure along the coast but partial shade will be better for the hot inland areas.

Trees that will cast shade during the summer months should be considered at this time. Your nurseryman will show you a wide range from which to choose. One of the best is the evergreen elm, which grows to just about 25 feet and therefore can be accommodated in practically all average-sized landscapes.

This is a splendid time to sow dichondra seed as the plants come along quickly in warm weather. A nurse crop of either white clover or rye grass is recommended.

WARREN TUFTS

FORT Leavenworth squats at the edge of the frontier, on a broad knoll overlooking the Missouri. Here is where the virgin West begins.

Leavenworth looks unlike a fort; she has never suffered attack. But as headquarters for the First Regiment of U.S. Dragoons, she disperses her troops for nine months out of the year to police the wild expanse of unsettled land

Life at the post is sublime; it is the long journeys into unknown dangers that concerns Melisse and prevents her from loving a soldier.

But, suddenly, she loves one. Worse still, he is a reckless, hard-riding daredevil who thrills to danger and would be unhappy without it.

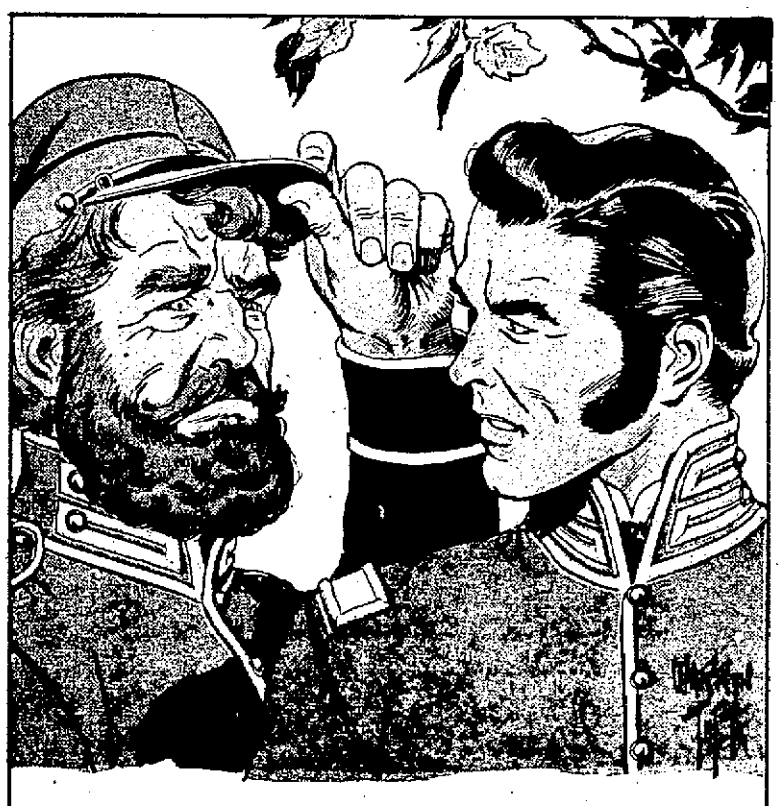

Before she becomes completely undone, Melisse decides to run. Luckily, she has no privacy for her farewell to Lance and her courage lasts her through the goodbyes.

Sergeant Blaze slaps a sympathetic hand on Lance's shoulder. "I calc'late yore ripe for a mess o' rugged duty," he advises. Lance stares long after the departing steamer and doesn't answer.

"B'sides which," Blaze goes on, "I can't stay 'round here no longer!"

Lance turns. "Why?"

"They's a new reg'lation out. No more beards in th' Army. I'm quittin' for th' high country!"

And so it is, moments later, that a lieutenant and his sergeant storm the Colonel looking for trouble.

AMY HILAND TO TRY AGAIN

'This Time I'll Swim the Catalina Channel'

By Amy Hiland

As told to Dorothy Allison

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Amy Hiland, 34-year-old housewife of 129 Claremont Ave., next Saturday will try for the second time to swim the Catalina Channel. Here, in an interview with Dorothy Allison, she tells how she expects to accomplish the feat in record time. Her first attempt was made last June, when she was taken from the water after 19 hours. Previously, she set the record for the Salton Sea swim. She learned to swim only four years ago to discover she is a natural distance swimmer.)

ONE NIGHT THIS WEEK I will stand at the water's edge on Catalina, waiting for the starter's gun to begin my swim across the channel. My June swim taught me the answer to several of the ocean's secret weapons. This time, I feel confident, I'll make it and break the record of 13 hours, 25 minutes.

The Channel itself is a tremendous challenge. But the real goal, the one that gives a competitive swimmer deep personal satisfaction, is to better the time that is officially recorded for the event.

My hope is to break the professional mark and set an amateur time that will stand.

The most important thing we learned about the ocean in my June swim is the treacherous strength of the north-south current which sweeps, at times, down along the mainland. This current is unpredictable in time and in its course, but we know now that we can find out by radio when I am three-fourth of the way across the channel whether it is running and what its course is. Then my pilot boat can guide me so that the current will help instead of hinder me.

THE CURRENT came between me and the shore when I was just two and a half miles from the mainland on my June swim. I had been swimming for 12 hours and was ahead of the record. I tried swimming against the current, and in seven and a half hours lost a mile and a half. That was when my husband, Pete, insisted that 19½ hours of swimming was enough. He had me pulled from the water and promised me I could try the swim again.

We learned that I must take seasick pills to help reduce nausea caused by swells and by my watching the light on the pilot boat as it lurched up and down all night.

My intense nausea kept me from taking nourishment, and it is amazing what a return of strength and drive comes to a swimmer after drinking a bit of broth.

Plucky Amy Hiland, Long Beach housewife, plans her second assault on the Catalina Channel in a few days. This time she is set on a record crossing.

The channel bested Mrs. Hiland on her first swim and she was pulled from the water after near victory. She'll benefit this time from her last effort.

PEOPLE HAVE ASKED me about the dangers of making a channel swim. There are several. Four times during the night I saw sharks swim near me, and fourteen times I heard rifle shots from the boats as the men shot other sharks.

The men operating the searchlight that was to keep my white swimming cap in its beam often couldn't find me in the huge, foamy swells. If I had run into trouble, they might not have known where I was in the black immensity of the ocean.

Porpoises are a menace. A school of these could create havoc with the small boats that were protecting me—and with me.

Fear is strange. I am frightened to death of a spider, but was not afraid that night. Maybe I was just too nauseated to care.

The five-hour wait before I could start my swim was more difficult for me than any possible dangers. My swim was to start at 8 p.m. June 12. Everything and everyone was ready except the weather. A strong cold wind had come up, and the sea was rough and choppy.

FOR THOSE FIVE tense hours, I was alone in a cabin near the water and was supposed to be resting. I listened to the men outside calling to boatmen about conditions in the channel. Someone would call out, "Latest report sounds good. Better get Amy greased up." My heart would start hammering with excitement, but before anyone got to my door, the voice would call out, "Hold it."

By the time we finally got the go ahead signal, I was trembling from the hours of tension. But when I heard the A.A.U starter's gun, exhilaration filled me. I was on my own and on my way.

Kelp is one thing I will never get used to. As you swim along, the slimy, slithering fronds suddenly wrap themselves around you like the tentacles of an octopus. You shudder with revulsion and want to leap from the water.

ON A DISTANCE SWIM, I use the crawl—a left and right arm stroke to six leg kicks. This stroke gives a lot of glide through the water. I try to keep a steady 58 stroke a minute. The swimmers who get into the water with me are so much help in getting me back on my pace if it becomes too fast or too slow.

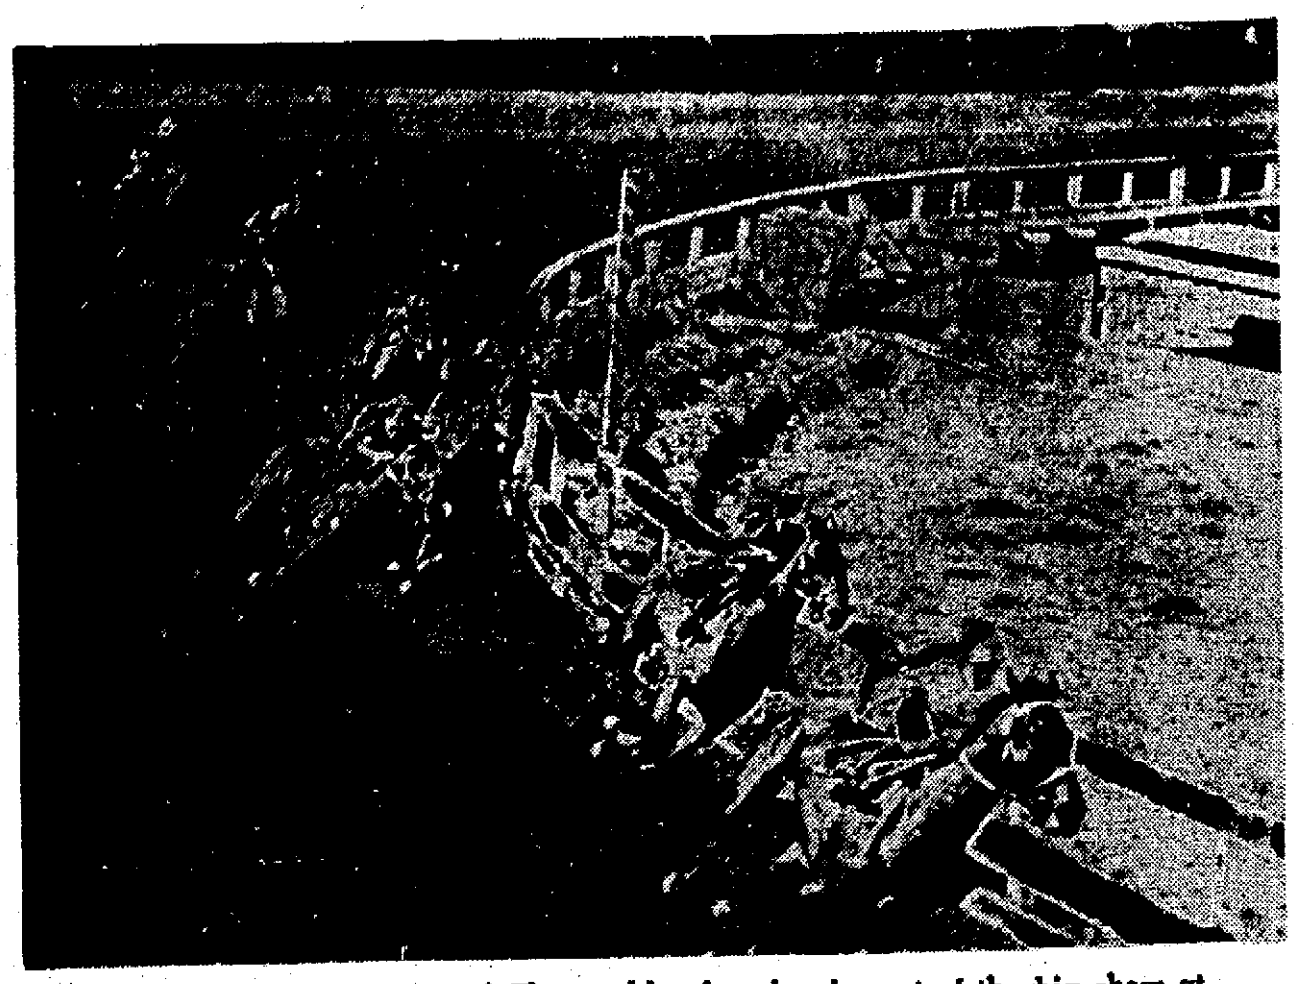

You have to keep moving all the time because only the warmth of your own blood coursing through your body makes the cold water endurable. You know before you make the swim you'll be colder than you've ever been before—and you are.

Since my June swim, I have kept a rigorous routine of swimming at least 2½ hours a day in the bay or ocean to condition myself for the ordeal, with carefully watched diet and plenty of rest.

This week when I stand at the water's edge and look across the channel to the lights on the mainland, I will have experience on my side. I will keep just one thought, "Sometime tomorrow, I will walk out on the sand of the mainland." And, God willing, I will set a record for the Catalina Channel swim.

Popcorn, Peanuts & Country Ham

Round the first turn . . .! Thoroughbred racing is part of the big show at Los Angeles County Fair. Harness races, quarter horses are also billed.

Sally-Ann Scherfe, pretty college coed, has a prize lamb groomed for the big County Fair stock display.

New suburban homes inspire theme, "Country Life." for the dazzling flower show in floral building.

"Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!" Half-million-dollar Fair owned and operated Midway resounds to familiar barker's cry.

By Roy Driscoll

AGAINST A BACKGROUND of color, music and pageantry, the 28th annual Los Angeles County Fair—the biggest county fair in the world—is packing them in at Pomona. It has everything that a fair can offer: Livestock, poultry, farm machinery, citrus crops, garden and field products, new cars and accessories, modern homes and accessories, household arts and crafts, horse racing, horse shows, a musical extravaganza and a midway.

One million persons are slated to see the fair before it closes Oct. 2. And nobody knows how much pop and popcorn, how many peanuts and hot dogs they'll consume as they gaze at the fat pigs, fine horses, grandma's conserves and country ham.

With its landscaped 450-acre exposition park, 200 buildings and 40,000-car parking area it is a county fair in name only. In all else it is an exposition of such size and scope as to command national and international attention.

GROUNDS and improvements are valued at $20,000,000. Some 40,000 individual exhibits are entered this year. They are distributed into 20 major divisions, each a comprehensive show in itself under this year's intriguing banner, "The Abundant Life."

Education, relaxation and recreation go hand in hand. For the regulars it is a new fair with innovations, additions, appeals. For newcomers it is a succession of revelations and surprises.

The huge Palace of Agriculture displays prize products of orchard, field and garden, from all parts of California. Here also are the California wine show, dairy products, apiary show, forestry, lumbering, minerals and natural resources.

THE FINE ARTS BUILDING presents "The Arts in Western Living." Architects, artists and artist-craftsmen combined their talents in an exposition of gracious western living with 22 rooms and areas overflowing with information and suggestions. It is a worthy successor to "Arts in Daily Living," which won national acclaim last year.

Three large exhibit buildings are devoted to one of the most comprehensive home shows in America.

The Home Builders New Products Show, with its $100,000 pavilion crammed with structural materials, features a novel expandable model home embodying new ideas in home building.

Complementing the building show is the ever popular Domestic Arts Bldg. With a record of 1703 opportunities for women to enter their handiwork, the spacious building contains a great assembly of needlework, arts and crafts, antiques and culinary entries.

NEW SUBURBAN HOMES are the inspiration for the theme, "Country Life," selected for the flower show in the floral building. A dazzling array of blooms and plants represents the best the Southland produces in this line. The outdoor living room and its patios, swimming pools and barbecues stresses country life in smart styling.

Lovers of sports and the wide open spaces revel in the invigorating sports plaza with its trailer show, sporting goods display, competitions and demonstrations. Golfers compete in the annual putting contest. The 175-foot pool has its casting tournaments. Smart new cars and smart new accessories are entered in the automobile show.

The best of the flocks and herds of the country vie for coveted blue ribbons in the livestock show. Poultry fanciers of the nation gather for the annual meeting and show of the American Bantam Assn. held in conjunction with the poultry show. The west's largest rabbit show offers new mutations.

THE JUNIOR FAIR includes thousands of entries by 4-H and Future Farmer members, Boy and Girl Scouts, Woodcraft Rangers, Campfire Girls and other youth organizations.

The first public schools in the country were opened 100 years ago. Commemorating the important date, the public schools exhibit serves as a centennial celebration.

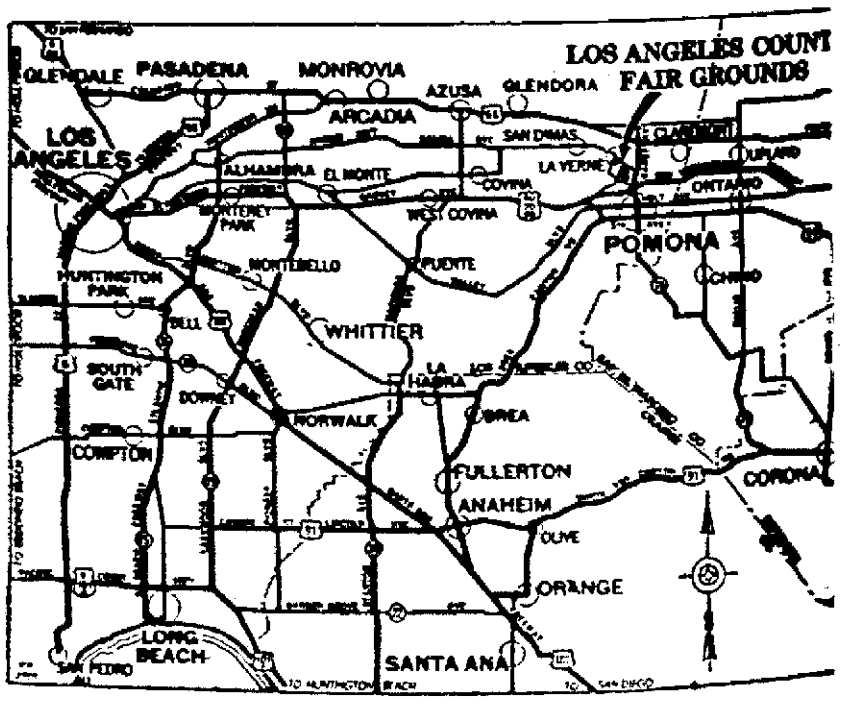

The military might of the nation is shown in armed forces exhibits.

For pure recreation and entertainment, the fair has its most ambitious program. Every afternoon there is an exciting combination of harness, running and quarter horse racing punctuated with the first $20,000 stakes ever offered on a half-mile track. This is the third largest race meet in the state. There will be five different horse shows.

The World's Fair Midway offers a half-million dollars worth of thrills, chills and skills.

On the glamorous grand stage the first nine nights are the glamorous "Aqua Thrills Revue," followed the last eight nights by the musical extravaganza, "Fair Follies of '55."

Many roads point to the County Fair. Long Beach patrons may choose their route by consulting map below.

True, full-blooded Hawaiians are in the small minority in Hawaii—and you never know who'll be doing the hula.

IN HAWAII—

You Never Know Who's Doing the Hula

By Mary Neiswender

THEY CALL them Hawaiian Islands.

And when Captain Cook arrived they were—but today there are only a handful of Hawaiians in the islands which bear their name.

The melting pot of the Pacific is cooking up more Japanese dishes by far than any others.

However, the Hawiians and the part-Hawaiians are doing their best to keep the national dress a grass skirt instead of a kimono.

True Hawaiians are rare indeed, according to population figures compiled by the Territorial Government. Of a total population for the Islands of 473,214 only a mere 12,433 or 2.7 per cent are natives. Even lumping together the part-Hawaiians, the total does not touch the Japanese population figure.

A whopping 40.4 per cent of the inhabitants, 189,219 persons, are of Japanese ancestry.

In fact, there are more Filipinos (62,936), Caucasions (69,461) and Chinese (32,139).

Passivly combatting this is the birth rate for the Hawaiians and part-Hawaiians which almost equals that of the Japanese. There were only 800 more Japanese babies born last year.

The immense migration of the Japanese to Hawaii took place in the early part of this century. Yankee businessmen, whose reputation is for making a hard dollar, moved in on the Islands after annexation by the United States in 1898. The fun-loving Hawaiians didn't take to the Yankee drive for the dollar and worked only until they had enough money for a jug of bootlegged okolehao. And until the jug was empty, no work was done.

Nothing stops the Yankee businessman when there's money to be made, even if it means transporting a good chunk of the population of Japan 6,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean. For six years the industrious Japanese were imported as laborers.

But soon the Japanese got the right idea. The warm sun and trade winds took the industry out of the newcomers so the sugar planters brought in Filipino laborers. Again the balmy isles took their toll. Now there are just as many Japanese and Filipinos swaying in grass skirts as there are Hawaiians.

But no one seems to care who's what race. Samoans, Hindus, Negroes, Chinese, Koreans, Japanese and Hawaiians live, work and play side by side in the lazy informality of island living.

Will "sayonara" ever replace "aloha?" Don't bet on it.

But no matter what the ancestry of the dancer, the hula continues to be the islands' popular dance. This girl performs on the sands of an island beach.

Filipinos inhabit islands in 5-1 ratio to natives.

This blond beauty is part Hawaiian, Scandinavian.

Young generation Japanese dons island coconut hat.

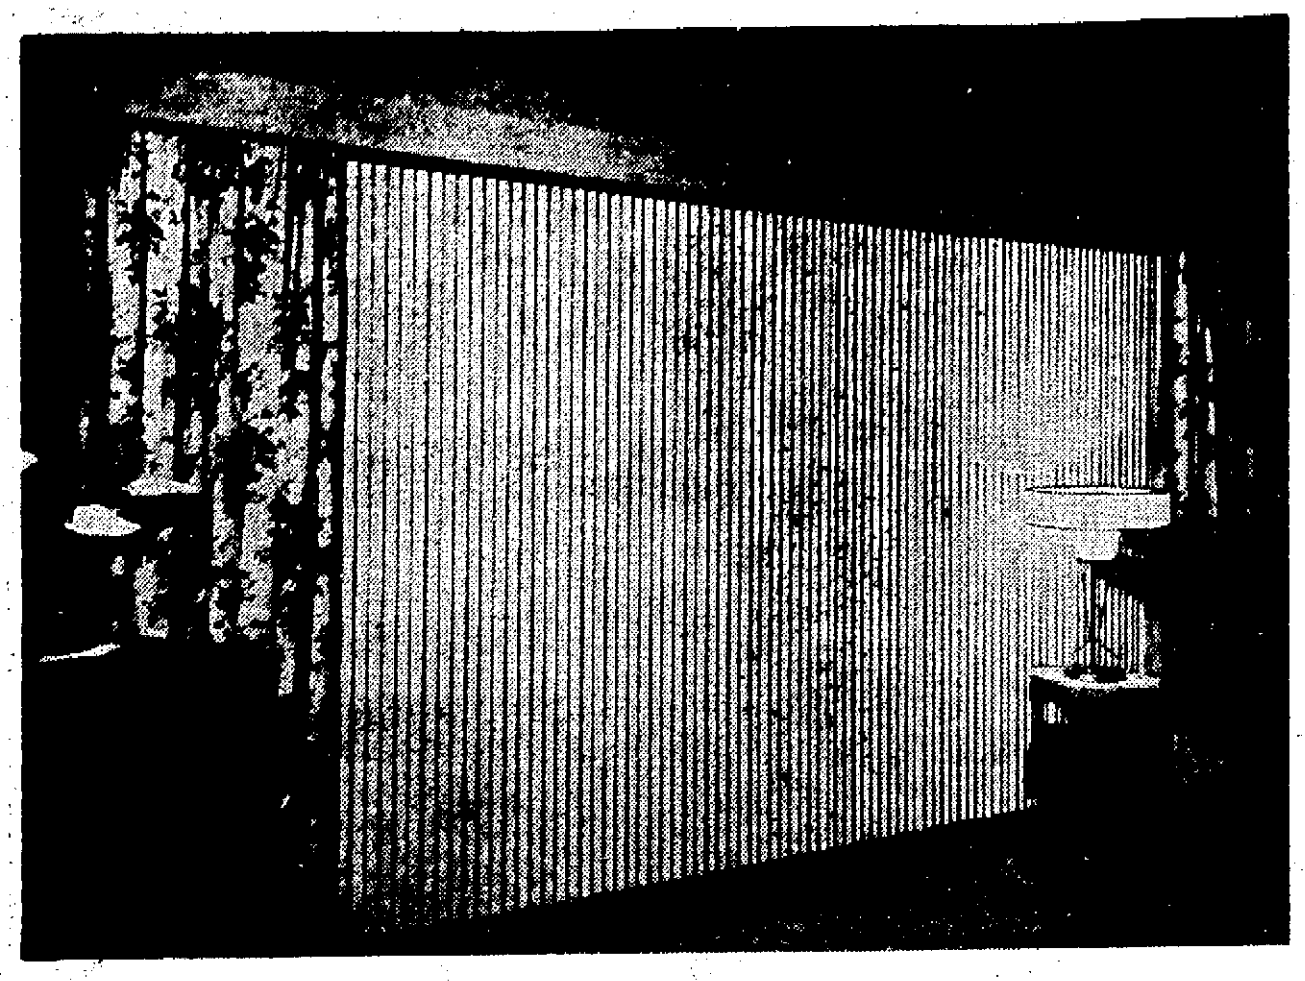

A mixture of races—Japanese, Chinese, Korean and Hawaiian—pose on a bench beside Waikiki Beach, a pretty picture for any strand.

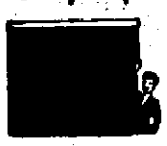

No discrimination exists between the races. Islands' Japanese, Hawaiian, part-Hawaiian and Portuguese share life, work and play.

Gag Man With Epaulets

Lt. George Derby—Army frontiers knew his wit. Photo taken about 1846.

"WE HELD HIM DOWN with our nose which we had inserted between his teeth for that purpose," wrote George Derby telling of a misunderstanding with an editor.

Derby was a lieutenant in the United States Army and stationed in San Diego at the time. His life had been eventful and included a full share of fighting. In the Mexican War he was aide-de-camp to Gen. "Fuss and Feathers" Scott. There is a story of Scott finding Derby lying wounded on the battlefield.

"My God, Darby! You're wounded!"

"Yes, Gen. Scatt!"

"My name is Scott, not Scatt," said the general.

"My name is Derby, not Darby," replied the lieutenant.

THIS STORY is unlikely for Derby liked his Army life and was careful to see that his humor didn't interfere with it. He was born in Massachusetts in 1823 and after graduating from West Point he saw a wide variety of service. He did not come into his own, though, until he was stationed in California.

One of his jobs was to find if the Colorado was navigable to Fort Yuma. He did not reach the post but he originated a joke that is still standard: "A very wicked soldier died there once, and, of course, went straight to the hottest corner of perdition—and the next day wired back for his blankets."

He was stationed in San Diego but he went to San Franicsco whenever he could for there he could find full scope for his wit. He contributed to various journals under the name of John Phoenix.

HIS HUMOR was flowing and natural. He went into the Eagle Bakery and blandly asked for a baked eagle.

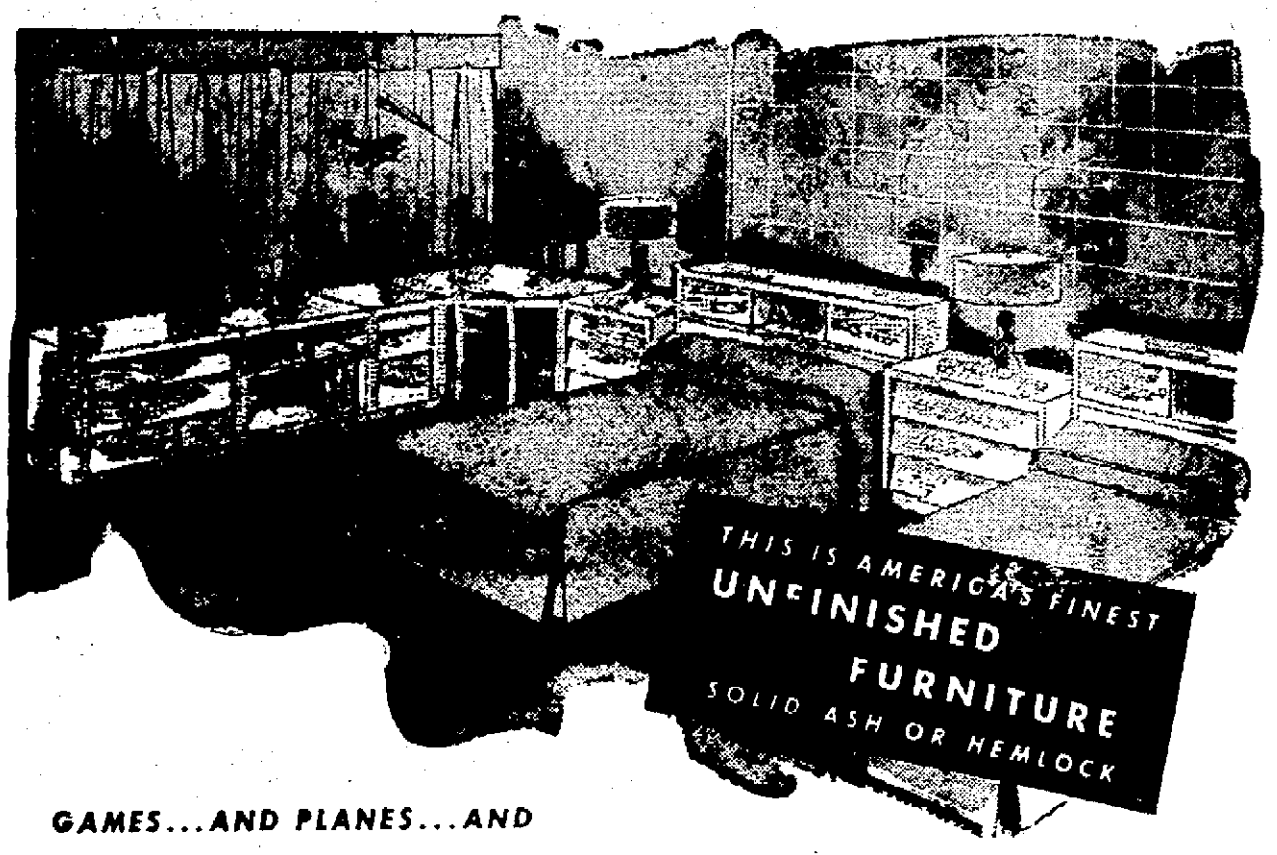

He insisted on tagging along with the wife of his best friend and ended up at the founding but he went to San Francisco Ladis' Relief Society. Ladies were decorous in those days and when they asked him to leave he did so. The next day an account of the meeting appeared in the Alta Californian. It told of the ladies drinking brandy smashes and booting reporters into the street. The ladies were annoyed but San Francisco was amused for it recognized the article as good comedy. Incidentally, the society still exists.

Before introducing two friends Derby once told each, in private of course, that the other was deaf and very sensitive about it. The two men spent an hour or

SOUTHLAND'S MOVIE PREVIEW

The Way of a Thing Called Love

Tenderly unfolded and with a heavy overtone of tragedy is the love story of Dr. Han Suyin and the American newspaperman, Mark Elliott, in "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing," 20th Century-Fox CinemaScope film starring Jennifer Jones as Dr. Han and William Holden as Elliott. Oriental incense, war, East-West romance, hospital drama background the many-faceted story.

Romance begins when Mark Elliott falls in love with the beautiful Eurasian, Dr. Han, who serves at Hong Kong hospital in 1949. Relationship is clouded by fact Mark has an estranged wife who is living in Singapore.

Machine Bares Brain's Secrets

By Vera Williams

IT'S A COMPLICATED looking machine called an electroencephalograph.

It's commonly called a "brain wave" machine, and it is helpful in the diagnosis of brain injuries, brain tumors, meningitis, encephalitis and epilepsy.

There are six in Long Beach hospitals — one in St. Mary's and five in the Veterans Administration Hospital.

The one in St. Mary's Hospital, located in the out patient department, was given the hospital a year ago by a Long Beach doctor for community service. It is operated by Mrs. Hazel Jahnke, technician trained in the Los Angeles County General Hospital.

A NUMBER of tests are made daily, by appointment. Patients come from not only Long Beach but a number of near-by towns, referred by their physicians.

The patient lies, relaxed, on a bed and electrodes are applied to his scalp, covering the brain area. The patient experiences little or no discomfort during the recording.

The electrodes lead to a jack box connected to the machine, where eight pens simultaneously record in graph form electrical activity of various parts of the brain.

The graph looks something like a cardiograph, which records heart action.

Each test takes about 30 minutes. Each sheet of paper of the graph records 30 seconds.

This Cult Puts the Sea on Canvas

By Harry R. Peterson

Pete Fulmer Photos

Title of this seascape is "Rocks at Sunset." It was painted by Southland artist Henry Vander Velde.

IF YOU had been on Highway 101, near Arch Beach south of Laguna Beach in the early 1940s you might have seen an unusual figure coming up the road in the direction of the Arch Beach Market—an elderly man with a patriarchal white beard, dressed in a white suit, high Russian boots and beret, and hauling a small cart in which there was a kerosene can.

This was not one of the local eccentrics. It was Frank W. Cuprien, dean of a cult of painters in Laguna who do not sit by their cars by the roadside and paint landscape, mountains or desert. They are interested in the eternal conflict of sea and shore. The majesty of the storm; the mystery of moonlit water, the unforgettable beauty of the reflected sunset on the water, are the subjects that they reproduce on canvas. They paint the sea.

Most of them are storm painters. The master of marine art is not often the artist of smooth summer seas and quiet coves. To climb and sketch from dangerous rocks close to massive surf, or depict the hurrying scuds and yellow sky from the deck of a heaving ship, takes more than a sense of color, composition and design, though he must have these also. He must love the sea.

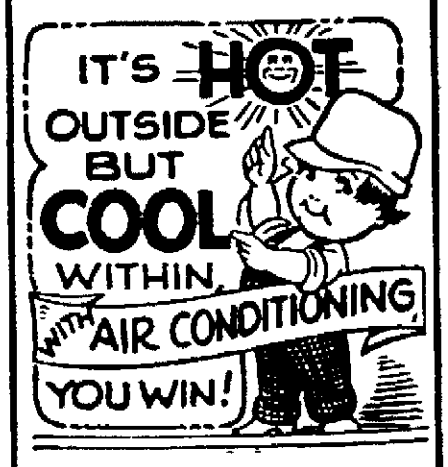

CUPRIEN LIVED alone in an ocean front house. Electricity perhaps interfered with his acute perception of light; he used only lamps.

Other famous marine painters separated themselves from family and friends to catch the mystery of the ocean. They painted from locations dangerous, to say the least. Winslow Homer settled in a small Northumberland village to paint the great grey seas off the English coast. In Maine he lived miles from the nearest neighbor and worked in a movable canvas room trundled as close to the surf as he could get.

Charles H. Woodbury got himself lashed to the side of a West Indian steamer careening in a hurricane to get a sketch of the bow as it rose to meet the mountainous waves.

OCEAN PAINTING is different from other kind because the sea must be painted partially from memory. It is never still. Only a few seconds elapse between the breaking of a wave that is the dominating feature of a picture and a flat mass of foam.

The artist has to memorize it—as well as a hundred moods of the water for future use—the whitecaps of a two-reef breeze, the great ground swell that slaps and thunders against the beach at night, the zigzag darting blues of a squall and the pearly tints of a dead calm. Often only sketches are completed at the location. The finished painting is done in the studio, creatively.

A memorial room, dedicated to the genial, kindly Cuprien is part of the exhibit in the Laguna Beach Art Gallery, next to the Victor Hugo cafe.

CUPRIEN, who painted his last picture in 1948, has been replaced by a new cult of marine painters, who have captured the unique and picturesque South Coast shoreline with fidelity and feeling. Each has a distinctive style of his own. Each either lives on the ocean or has had wide experience at sea. Alfred Dupont and Robert Wood of Laguna, Henry Vander Velde of Salt Creek and Bennet Bradbury of Capistrano Beach are now the principal marine painters of the artist town and its vicinity.

Here is the way you do it, according to Mr. Dupont:

"Rough in the main masses of your composition with pigment, leaving the foam blank if the subject has spume or rearing creases. Marines are symphonies in blue, and since all the color you see is a reflection of the sky, you paint this first—the whole tone of your painting depends upon it. Get in the orange, yellow and rose tints of the horizon. Use ultramarine, cobalt and cerulean blue for the ocean, if it is clear. Finish it at home, if necessary.

"Twenty-five sketches will be flat. And then, suddenly, one springs to life. You have caught the spray from that blow-hole, spray that hovered only a few seconds before it dropped; the incredible blue of the Southern California ocean, the wheeling gull, the green in the breaking wave. You have painted the sea."

As Emerson said: "Behold the sea, the opaline, the plentiful, the strong."

RESORTS AND TRAVEL

The Maddest Bass I Ever Saw

By Donnell Culpepper

GIVE A MAN a rod and reel and send him forth a-fishin' and he never knows when to quit. Any angler's wife will tell you that.

But how about the fish? Some fish tire easily, float belly-up to a net and just fade away. Others don't; they'll fight all the way to the landing, and even flop a few times when a fisherman starts to clean them for dinner.

It was my pleasure to meet, hook and finally catch just such a fish in Shasta Lake. I've caught bigger bass and smaller bass, but this veteran largemouth thought he knew all the tricks that even older and larger bass had forgotten.

Johnny Alford, who owns and operates Bridge Bay Resort on Shasta, and I had gone far up the McCloud River arms of the lake and had reached a quiet cove, sheltered from the wind. It was the most beautiful bass-fishing spot I've ever seen. We cut the motor outside the cove and had paddled into smooth water from which rose old tree stumps and roots.

I was fishing with an extremely light outfit—two-ounce rod, tiny spinning reel and three-pound-test monofilament. Johnny had told me: "You're crazy for trying to catch big bass with that light outfit," but I persisted. I put on a small deep-running plug and laid a cast right beside a moss-covered log in the deep shade. As it hit there was an explosion of fury from underneath and a big bass went three feet into the air with my plug before I'd even had a chance to start a retrieve.

HE LEAPED again and that time went over the log, shook his head and the plug fell out of his mouth. Johnny just grinned and remarked: "That outfit's too light." We paddled about the big cove for an hour, catching one- and two-pounders after we both changed to surface poppers. Some we kept; others we released.

Finally we made a full circuit of the cove and came back where we started. I told Johnny: "Just paddle over to that log again. I'm going to try for grandpa." I had switched to a large-sized Hula Popper, a floating surface lure that made a popping sound at each twitch of the rod. I laid a cast at exactly the same spot as I had an hour before.

Sure enough, there was another explosion just after the plug touched the surface and out came Mr. Bass, throwing his head from side to side. He leaped twice, then went over that same log again and the monofilament snapped. Johnny didn't grin; he laughed loudly and yelled: "That's twice you have lost that bass." I was flabbergasted and that's putting it midly.

Then, just as I retrieved the remainder of the line and started putting on another lure, there was another disturbance off the bow and out came a bass, leaping and throwing his head. Moments later the same thing occurred off the stern. Then it dawned on me what had happened and I screamed to Johnny: "That fool bass has got that Hula Popper down his throat and is trying to get it out."

JOHNNY TURNED serious and started paddling toward each successive jump. That bass covered an area of at least 50 square feet in the next three or four minutes, leaping and jumping wildly. The jumps became fewer and shorter. Finally he tried just one more almost beside the boat and Johnny slipped the net under him.

When we got the fish into the boat, there was the Hula Popper down his throat. That hungry bass had hit so hard that he had swallowed the entire lure. It took a bit of maneuvering to get those hooks out of throat, mouth and gills, but I did. Even then, that angry bass almost flipped out of the boat when the lure was extracted. I grabbed him and finally got him on the stringer.

Two hours later when we reached the Bridge Bay boat landing and started to clean our fish, Gramps was still in a fighting mood. Except for the fact that he weighed just over three pounds and had been injured, I would have eased him back into the lake to fight another day.

LAKE SHASTA'S bass, largemouths and smallmouths are notorious fighters. Perhaps it is the fact that three large rivers, the Sacramento, McCloud and Pit, empty extremely cold water into it the year around. Even a small eight-inch bass will bounce in and out of the water like a steelhead.

Claude Kreider, former Long Beach assistant fire chief and now president of the western division, Outdoor Writers Association of America, and Don Waggoner, also of Long Beach, explored the various arms of Shasta three weeks later and found the same fighting fish. They caught more fish than they could use. Claude admitted that he hadn't seen bass anywhere to equal the savagery of those in Shasta. His largest was a four-pounder.

Even the bluegills—and there are thousands of them—fight like little demons when taken on any kind of lure.

Claude M. Kreider of Long Beach takes lure from bass.

Machine Bares Brain's Secrets

Mary's was two months. The oldest patient was 78 years.

In 1874 an Englishman, Caton, observed electrical activity in the brain of living animals, and he became convinced that these fluctuations were related to the functional activity of the brains.

Hans Berger of Jena, Germany, considered the father of electroencephalography, began his work in 1902 and finally, in 1924, was successful in recording electrical activity of the human brain.

By 1934 he had demonstrated (1) that the brain of man has an electrical beat, (2) this beat comes from the neurons and not from the blood vessels, (3) this electrical beat changes with age, sensory stimulation and with various changes in the physical and chemical state of the body.

LATER DOCTORS did monumental work in epilepsy and cerebral locations and demonstrated that brain tumors near the skull may be localized by the electroencephalogram through the unopened skull.

The same as-other techniques, the EEG has its limitations. It is of little or no value in a diagnosis of schizophrenia, manic depressive psychosis or feeblemindedness. It cannot localize deep cerebral, cerebellar or deep brain lesions, and it does not distinguish between different types of pathological processes. The EEG is not a record of all brain activity, but the record of certain type of activity from special brain area, the cerebral cortex.

It is most helpful, say doctors, in detecting epilepsy, cerebral tumors, subdural hematoma, cerebral hemorrhage, cerebral thrombosis, cerebral trauma, cerebral abcess, meningitis, encephalitis and behavior disorders of an epileptic or postencephalitic type.

L. A.-London Flight

Trans World Airlines will inaugurate the first and fastest one-plane intercontinental air service from California through to London and Frankfurt with a fleet of long-range Super-G Constellations beginning Nov. 1, E. O. Cocke, TWA vice president-sales, announces.

Super-G Constellations flying nonstop from Los Angeles to New York and thence nonstop to London will make this one-plane, one-stop, overnight service more than seven hours faster than existing "polar route" schedules. The flight will continue to Frankfurt, resulting in a time saving of four hours from California to that city.

Total elapsed time for the 6,000-mile flight from Los Angeles to London will be 21 hours and five minutes. The intercontinental flights will leave Los Angeles every Sunday, for London and Frankfurt, where the return westbound service will originate on Wednesdays and Fridays.

"Anything doing in Zurich? I've about decided to go to school there but don't want a dull-as-dishwater life."

This is quite a lively town — up to midnight. Those medieval cobbled back streets are full of Swiss yodeling in and out of bars. The accordions play and there is a good deal of singing and I have never run into what you would call a rough spot.

The lonesome ladies of the town go to sort of tea houses where they serve chocolate. You spot them on the street because they nearly all have a toy poodle on a leash. The idea is that gentlemen thus get an opening for conversation by patting the poodle.

While the ladies dip the chocolate, they park the poodle in the checkroom. And it is quite a sight to see these ruffled shills, sitting side by side in the racks.

Probably the greatest hotel in the world is the Baur-au-lac. You can have wonderful dinners beside the lake. The place is full of the worst kind of rich people: All the sharp money boys who finance hot oil, gun running and the pushing of material behind the Iron Curtain make their deals over the tables at the Baur-au-lac. A really gaudy operation.

"Can I get a baby sitter in Rome?"

YOU CAN get anything in Rome. For a baby sitter, see if At Your Service, Via Versilia 2, is still in business. I think they are. Baby sitters, escorts, interpreting and shopping service.

* * * *

"... and I never found a good martini in Paris. So where do you go?"

You go to the Ritz or the Plaza Athenee — the bar called the Relais Plaza. The Ritz is followed by an international set who follow the rules laid down by Ernest Hemingway.

The Relais Plaza belongs to another club who are following I don't know what.

There are definite rules to the game. You must ask for the head bartender at the Ritz (whose name I forget). At the Plaza Athenee, you wave off all the minor help and insist the martini be made by Jacques Hebrard.

Each side must insist that his boy makes the driest martini in the world.

If you must have a martini in France, though, ask for "un dry." Ask for martini and you get a warm glass of Martini vermouth. Did you try that brandy and water deal they call fine a l'eau? Better. And cheaper.

Your mailed questions will be answered (no phone calls). Send stamped and addressed envelope to: Stan Delaplane, Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, Sixth and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif.

Listerine Antiseptic Stops Bad Breath 4 Times Better Than Tooth Paste!

Germs—The Major Cause of Mouth Odor

Far and away the most common cause of bad breath is fermentation of proteins which are always present in the mouth. This fermentation is caused by germs and research shows that your breath stays sweeter longer, the more you reduce germs in the mouth.

Listerine Antiseptic Kills Germs by Millions

Listerine Antiseptic kills germs by millions on contact. Test after test has shown that even fifteen minutes after gargling with Listerine Antiseptic, germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces were reduced up to 96.7%; one hour afterward, as much as 80%.

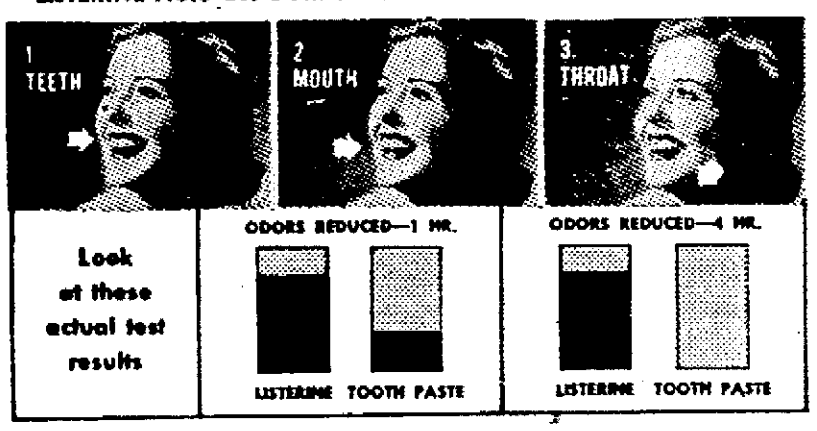

No Tooth Paste Kills Germs Like This ... Instantly

Tooth paste with the aid of a tooth brush is an effective method of oral hygiene. It depends largely on the mechanical and masking methods of removing unpleasant mouth odors. But no tooth paste gives you the proven Listerine Antiseptic method —banishing bad breath with instant super-efficient germ-killing action.

Listerine Antiseptic Acts on Many Surfaces

Listerine Antiseptic kills millions of germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces. It kills disease-producing germs as well as many types of odor-producing germs. No tooth paste offers proof like this of killing germs that cause bad breath.

LISTERINE ACTS ON 3 AREAS WHERE BREATH ODORS CAN START

THE MOST WIDELY USED ANTISEPTIC IN THE WORLD

Called Blackie, talking crow in Mrs. Charles Moore's small home zoo, keeps insisting that "My name's Sam!"

Sam's the Name

By Juanita B. Worsham

MOST PEOPLE have pets. Mrs. Charles Moore, 2764 Webster Ave., has a menagerie.

It began with Sato, a year-old, white-faced Capuchin monkey. He became a member of the family, and was given the guest room with a little bed, mattress, pillow and cover.

As months passed, Mrs. Moore learned one monkey was not much trouble, so she bought another, Choo-San, 3½ months old.

Sato became fond of Choo-San and taught him to lasso with his tail. Sato fed Choo-San by hand and brushed his hair.

Moore built a cage, 8 by 10 feet, in the backyard. There the monkeys remain during the day, swinging and acting like clowns. They deftly remove bobby pins, earrings, pins and the like from persons approaching their cage. If they can't reach with their hands, they lasso with their tails. When visitors leave, they cry.

LINATONE is added to milk to give the monkeys a good coat of hair. Monkeys are big eaters and consume an avocado, drink a quart of milk a day, and prefer frozen vegetables. Ham, bacon and Jello are relished. A candy sucker lasts all day. When they see cake, they hold out their arms and beg. Sato and Choo-San won't eat peanuts or bananas. The Moores frequently take the monkeys riding in the evening.

By 8 p.m. in summer and 6:30 p.m. in winter, Sato and Choo-San retire, but first they eat bread and warm milk and sit in front of TV. They don't like animals, especially dogs, on the screen. When they do not like a picture, they jump up, change the dial or turn it off. They sleep in the same bed, with Choo-San's arms wrapped tightly around Sato.

A FRIEND gave Mrs. Moore a pet rat. She named him Patches, because of the brown markings on his white background and a black eye. He crawls up on her shoulder and kisses her if he wants to be fed.

Then a relative brought Mrs. Moore a crow. She named him Blackie but he goes about saying "My name is Sam." He eats corn and dog food. If he is given food he does not like, he kicks it out the door. He picks flowers and brings them in the house. He frequently calls on the neighbors.

The crow's main fault is that he flies to the roof, rips off shingles and sends them sailing through the air.

THE LAST PET accepted was a skunk. He has been deodorized but just the same his name is Stinky. He takes a daily bath, never has fleas or lice. He stands on his hind feet like a dog and begs for food. He loves flowers and perfumes and goes about sniffing them.

Mrs. Moore remembers the wolf her son had as a pet for three years. At various times the family has had pet snakes.

She says her time now is well occupied, no more pets. No, wait a minute. She might consider an ocelot.

COOKING

Get a Lift With Ice Cream

By Mildred K. Flanary

Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

ICE CREAM — piled sky high, embellished with fixings from syrup to whipped cream to a cherry on top — that's the dream of all teen-agers. It's a dream come true with adults, too.

Youngsters never get enough ice cream. This dessert stirs memories of birthday parties, rewards for good behavior, celebrations of special significance. Ice cream then meant a special trip to the store when company arrived, a stop on the way from the beach on sultry summer days or turning the freezer on Sunday afternoon. While the forms of ice cream may have changed, the pleasure it gives is always the same.

Super-duper sundaes are a gracious way of serving ice cream, allowing each guest to concoct his own. Fill small serving dishes, or Lazy Susan tray compartments, with the following foods to spoon over ice cream; coconut, fruit cocktail, apricot halves, crushed pineapple and nuts (pecans, walnuts or peanuts). If the occasion is a get-together of today's juvenile sophisticates, let them whip up their own concoctions and provide their own rare appellations.

For a topping that's different and liked by all, we suggest a coffee-walnut sauce, the featured recipe today. There are many other complementary toppings and associates for this popular food.

Miscellaneous Sundae Toppings and Tricks

Spoon canned applesauce over a slice of chocolate or vanilla ice cream and add a dash of nutmeg.

Pour warmed maple syrup over vanilla ice cream and sprinkle salted almonds on top.

Crumble chocolate covered mints over vanilla or chocolate ice cream.

Make tart shells from packaged pastry mix; fill with vanilla ice cream and top with fresh, frozen or canned fruit.

Cut a cone-shaped piece from a bakery cup cake; fill with ice cream and drizzle with canned chocolate syrup.

Put a slice of ice cream atop a slice of packaged pound cake. Ribbon with butterscotch or fruit sauce.

Serve iced coffee with a spoonful of ice cream for coffee with a punch.

For mincemeat in summer dress, serve it warm over a slice of prepackaged vanilla ice cream.

Frozen fruit juice concentrates (orange, tangerine, pineapple, grape or cranberry) with a spoonful of ice cream and a fizz of soda make a "pigtail set" delight.

Sprinkle toasted coconut over vanilla or chocolate ice cream and top it with chocolate or butterscotch sauce.

For cantaloupe ring arounds, cut a plug in a cantaloupe melon opposite the stem end. Spoon in two tablespoons of brandy, sherry or rum. Replace plug and chill. To serve, slice in rings, remove seeds and pile ice cream in center.

Ice cream and a few fruits and sauces can turn any occasion into a festive event by devising sundaes.

Pineapple Honey Harmony

½ cup crushed pineapple
3 tablespoons honey
3 tablespoons chopped nutmeats
2 tablespoons beet or cane sugar

Combine sugar and pineapple in saucepan. Simmer slowly until sugar forms heavy sauce. Cool and add nuts. Serves four.

Coffee-Walnut Sauce:

1 cup sugar
1½ cups strong hot coffee
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ cup cold coffee or water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup broken walnuts

Put sugar in heavy skillet; melt over very low heat, stirring often. Gradually stir in hot coffee (use a long-handled spoon because lots of steam escapes). Dissolve cornstarch in cold coffee or water; gradually stir into sugar mixture. Cook and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Add butter or margarine, salt and walnuts. Serve warm or cold. Makes 2 cups.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

This House Suits Them to a 'T'

Photos by H. S. Melvin

To the Paul McClaughry family of four, their home is absolutely just what they want and they wouldn't change if rebuilding. Here's living room view.

By Eileen Ball

MR. AND MRS. PAUL McCLAUGHRY and their two teen-age daughters view family life as a sort of corporation. Nothing of major import affecting their family as a unit goes over the boards without their first counting the votes pro and con. Luckily, this even-numbered family of four rarely finds itself deadlocked!

When their new house at 5505 LaPasada St. was in the formulative stages, the McClaughrys counted the yeas and found that contemporary architecture and decor was their favored choice.

The girls wanted rooms as individual as their personalities. Each, of course, put capacious storage high on their lists.

Mrs. McClaughry had ideas about having a kitchen that, instead of being relegated to a spot by itself like an unhappy shut-in, could join with the fun-loving part of the house used as a den, a dining room and as an overflow party area.

McCLAUGHRY was adamant about the house being practical both in floor plan and maintenance.

They all vetoed fancy trim that contributes nothing to an easy and carefree mode of living. So the house that they commissioned the architectural firm of Poper and Lockett to design was to conform to a definite list of specifications. And because the architects were able to get a concise idea of what the McClaughrys wanted, the house they evolved has been, to quote Mrs. McClaughry, "Absolutely perfect in every respect." Furthermore, she states, they wouldn't change a single detail of this 2,000 square foot house were they to build again. And that, to be sure, is about as high a tribute as one can pay a new home.

A circular drive bordered with glossy ivy and colorful ivy geraniums sweeps to the garage placed on the front of the lot for the sake of privacy. An ornamental "eyebrow" of open egg crate lattice enhances the appearance of the garage, affords a shelter and helps tie it visually to the house.

A tall grapestake fence encloses the courtyard leading to the entry. With the gate closed, the house enjoys an absolute separation from the street.

Stepping inside this pleasing court, one sees that the house unfolds and opens itself to visitors with magnanimous hospitality. A wall of glass — inclusive of both fixed and sliding portions—runs along the length of the living room and opens to the private yard.

WIDE AND SHALLOW steps join the sliding doors to the concrete courtyard floor. With the draperies drawn back, the living room and its impressive arrangement of fine contemporary furniture seems to join the court in a complete and wonderful merger.

Flanking the steps and spanning the length of the room under the fixed glass windows are shallow flagstone planters kept abloom wth low-growing annuals.

A few feet past the living room doors is the entry landing with an overhead projection of egg crate latticing.

This is the more conventional entry for arriving guests. (The wide living room glass doors are pushed open to facilitate party circulation and expedite the practice of entertaining indoors and out simultaneously.)

Stepping through the front door one finds an entry surfaced with waxed cork and veneered on the left wall with Santa Maria fieldstone.

Beyond the entry and to the left is the living room with its visual affinity for the courtyard. Cork flooring, oatmeal-textured draperies and sandalwood walls combine to create a neutral and completely restful background for the contemporary furniture with its bright accent color.

A LONG SOFA upholstered in cocoa and chocolate tweed is punctuated wit h flame-orange throw pillows of the same fabric as is on the chair. A chair constructed simply of a hardwood frame laced with wide natural linen webbing has a pillow-headrest in hot orange.

One cannot help noticing how effectively the decorator played up the sleek and handsomely crafted furnishings with the simple and unusual technique of relying on just one vivid color for underscoring.

Near the fireplace of Santa Maria fieldstone—the back of which forms one wall of the entry—is a custom-styled cabinet for hi-fi and phonograph component parts. The exquisitely designed storage unit is of hand-rubbed walnut with doors of stark white masonite.

Through louvered doors is the kitchen-den area with its wealth of natural woodwork. Highlighting cabinets of clear white birch are counter tops of natural linen pattern plastic, linoleum of lime, coral and tan spatter and simply more shouting at each other at the tops of their voices.

IN A THEATER Derby tapped the shoulder of the man seated in front of him and whispered that he would like to speak to the man seated two seats forward. The gentleman passed the word but when all turned to the lieutenant the latter looked mystified and stared fixedly at the stage.

Judson "Boston" Ames was a rabid Democrat and the editor of the San Diego Herald. He was a large man who had once killed a sailor with one blow. The first state elections were coming up in Cailfornia and Ames did everything in his power to sew up San Diego for his party. As the election drew near he felt he should go to San Francisco to be on hand to pick up some political plums.

He made the mistake of leaving the paper in the hands of Derby. As soon as "Boston" was on his way Derby brought out the paper for the Whig candidate.

The Whigs carried San Diego with a four to one majority.

DERBY CALLED the next issue the Illustrated San Diego Herald. He used boiler plate advertising cuts. A set of false teeth and three box cars, one of them upside down, represented a picture of a terrible train wreck. A cut of four sailing ships was called "The Battle of Lake Erie."

The next issue described Ames' return and the fight that followed. According to Derby, he held Ames down with his nose in Ames' teeth and held one of Ames' hands by entangling it in his hair. The fight ended with Derby naked except for the rim of a hat and Ames nursing a black eye and "a small boy standing beside the sufferer with a basin and glancing with interest over . . . the San Diego Herald, a fair copy which was struck upon the back of his shirt at the time we held him over the press." The account was sheer fiction for Ames took the whole incident as a joke.

Derby's funmaking was dampened by years of illness, of which he died in 1861. His life wasn't all one long laugh, but it definitely had its highlights.

ANSWER

Gus Edwards and Vincent Bryan wrote "In My Merry Oldsmobile" in 1905, when the Rolls-Royce and Oldsmobile were being manufactured, but before the Model T Ford (1908) or the Stutz Bearcat (1929), and of course, long before the many current models. Edwards, in addition to his song-writing ability, developed talent of children who later became stage, screen and radio-TV stars: Elsie Janis, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel and many others.

You Make It

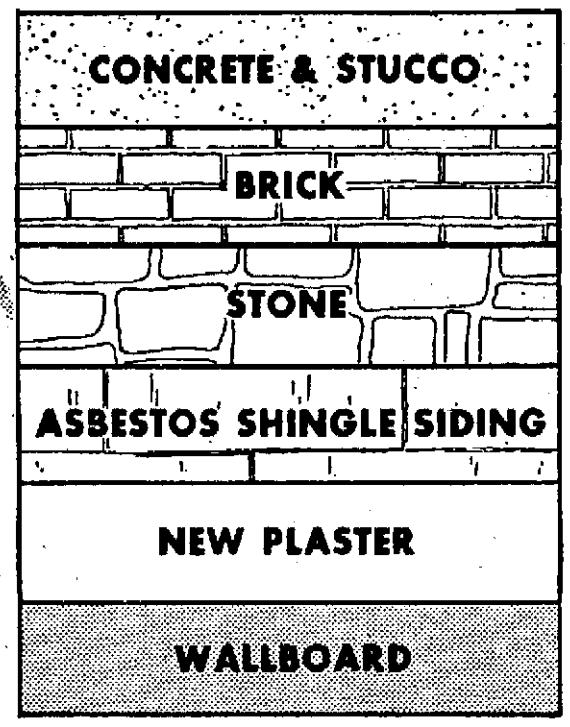

This big table provides for that family dinner party; for games, hobbies, carpenter work or for dressmaking. When not needed, store it in a closet or even behind a door. This is just the table for those bazaars and group activities at churches, clubs and community houses. Stock sizes of lumber are used. The pattern gives a cutting list for the number and the hardware needed for one table. All the parts are square cuts made with a hand saw. Order Pattern No. 372 as shown in the sketch, inclosing only 25 cents; or the table pattern may be ordered with the sewing corner packet consisting of five standard-size patterns for only $1 postpaid. Send orders to: Pattern Department, Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, Bedford Hills, N. Y.

Kids' Theater Opens a New Era

By Vera Williams

Two Children's Theater players: Mrs. Ray O. Gould Jr. in Princess role, and Mrs. Ethel Severson as Aladdin.

WHEN "RADIO RESCUE," adventure play by Charlotte Chorpenning, opens Oct. 21 in the Little Theater at Long Beach State College, the 17th production of Long Beach Children's Theater, it will mark the end of one era and the beginning of a new one.

The old era in which Children's Theater played to large audiences filled with children (and a few grownups). The new era in which Children's Theater will play to small, attentive audiences, preponderantly juvenile.

Little Theater at State College will hold 500 children at a time.

BUT LITTLE THEATER backers believe there is a closer, more intimate feeling between actors and audience in a smaller theater. And in the Little Theater every word spoken on the stage can be heard anywhere in the house — there are no "dead" spots. Lights are considered nearly perfect in the Little Theater and there are such conveniences as telephone lines between actors' rooms and back stage.

"Radio Rescue" will open with a "family night" at 7:30 p. m. Oct. 21. The next day, Oct. 22, will be reserved for Girl Scouts. The play will be repeated at 10 a. m., 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. Oct. 29 and Nov. 5.

Adult volunteers — all work for nothing, nobody gets a cent for anything — play all the roles, make the costumes and the sets. Acting is of a high caliber and costumes and sets are practically professional.

IT WAS IN 1947 that a group of Long Beach women, a number of them the mothers of young children, decided that something ought to be done about the lack of good stage plays in the city for boys and girls. They agreed that motion pictures, radio programs and comic books were all right — if properly selected. But these mothers felt there was a gap in the entertainment of Long Beach children which could be filled only by legitimate drama, especially written, directed and acted for youthful audiences.

The result was the Children's Theater. There are children's theaters in many parts of the United States, but the one in Long Beach is considered conspicuously successful.

IN CHILDREN'S THEATER plays, the actors not only act for an audience of children, but many of the roles are those of children. Yet the entire cast is composed of adult women. Anybody who thinks it is easy for an adult to play the part of a child or an elf or a fairy might try out for one of the productions some time.

An audience of children is a forthright audience — not supercritical but certainly super-frank. And mothers considered it an achievement when they can get attention and spontaneous applause from children.

"Land of the Dragon," Chinese fantasy presented in November, 1947, in Ebell Theater was the first production. It was followed by "Cinderella," "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater," "Pied Piper of Hamlin," "The Princess and the Swineherd," "Once Upon a Clothesline," "The Emperor's New Clothes," "Pinocchio," "Hansel and Gretel," "Steadfast Tin Soldier," "Seven-League Boots," "Doodle and the Bremen Band," "Snow Treasure," "Cinderella of Loreland," "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" and "Alice in Wonderland." The plays have been given in Ebell Theater, Municipal Auditorium, Jordan and Poly auditoriums.

BUSES BRING CHILDREN from the school grounds for the shows and return them to the playgrounds.

Mrs. William F. Macrate is president of the Children's Theater. The advisory committee includes Frank Harnett, David Sievers, David L. Bryant, George Geiger, Sam Heavenrich, Larry Johns, Gerald Desmond, Douglas Newcomb, John Whatley, Mrs. Florence Johnson, Mrs. Albin Larson, Mrs. Herbert E. Waite, Miss Frances Dixon, Miss Mary Schallenberg and Mrs. Gail Hudson.

Productions of Children's Theater are well costumed and produced. Children are enthralled by the plays.

Every Dog Has His Week

By Eleanor Avery Price

Symbol of National Dog Week is this poster of family and dog watching at the window for Dad.

NATIONAL DOG WEEK starts today and provides a special few days set aside not only to honor your best pal, your dog, but to encourage all dog lovers to strive harder toward objectives of the non-profit National Dog Welfare Guild. These are a good home for every dog, elimination of stray dogs from the streets, better dog owners, consideration for dogs and all animals, understanding the use of dogs as companions, helpers, and home protectors; fair laws for dogs and their owners, respect for the rights of non-dog owners and increased research of serious diseases such as rabies.

Guy Lombardo, popular orchestra leader, is the 1955 national chairman of the week which will be observed in more than 3,000 communities across the nation.

Lombardo is backed by an advisory committee which includes top executives of Camp Fire Girls, Girl Scouts of America, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' Club of America, American Humane Assn., American Kennel Club, American Veterinary Medical Assn., American Animal Hospital Assn., and several others.

Recognizing the fact that the dog has come a long way with man in many phases of man's life, the Guild has chosen for 1955 the slogan of the dog as a "Member of the Family."

SINCE A DOG is truly necessary for the full growth and well-being of the average happy family, and since the dog helps create harmony by his wonderful qualities of love, loyalty, watchfulness, and courage which he gives with no strings attached, this year's slogan pays proper tribute to that fine quality of family unit that is strengthened by the canine members.

The joys and benefits that come through owning a good dog more than make up for the responsibility, care, and training that the pet needs.

So great are the rewards of owning a dog that it is even possible for the most badly adjusted and self-centered child to change for the better when given the faithful friendship and responsibility of caring for a dog. A dog of his own can change a child's whole trend of thought, action, and deed, and help keep the child from the boredom and lack of interests that so often lead him into bad company.

THIS IS A VERY REAL truth to consider, especially if the home is broken or if for one reason or another there is a lonely child in the family. Give such a child a dog to care for and encourage him to read books on dog care, to join junior kennel groups in order to meet other kids at obedience training classes and obedience shows. Help him to train his dog to be a good canine citizen, for a youngster training his dog to obey laws and commands is inspired to be a better citizen himself.

Raymond J. Hanfield, executive secretary of the National Dog Welfare Guild which sponsors National Dog Week, sums it up nicely with these words, "You can't have a bad child if he has a good dog."

The 1955 poster reproduced with this article will be used nationally this week, and it portrays the heart-warming scene of a typical American family with a dog, in this case a beagle, waiting at the window for Dad to come home. The illustration is by a famous artist, Albert Staehle.

SANTA ANA Valley Kennel Club is holding an all-breed and obedience O. B. sanction match today at La Palma Park in Anaheim. There will be classes also for puppies two months and up. Entries close at 12 noon.

AUSTRALIAN Silky Terrier Club of this region is holding its first All-Silky show today at the home of Mrs. Robert Cooley, 9100 Vanalden in Northridge. Spectators are invited.

LAKEWOOD Obedience Club will entertain at Shriner's Hospital in Los Angeles on Sept. 24 instead of the previously announced date.

Night Owls Flock Together

By Jule Armin

"DON'T FEEL sorry for yourself if you can't sleep nights. Tune in on Ben Hunter's 'Other Side of the Day' radio program and you won't want to sleep."

That's the verdict of 15,000 registered members of his Night Owl Clubs, of whom 150 live in Long Beach.

Not only is Ben Hunter heard widely over the United States and Canada, but according to mail count, a quarter-million persons listen to him in such far-flung places as Germany, England, Tahiti, New Zealand and Korea.

NIGHT OWLS publish their own magazine, "The Limb," and hold annual get-togethers. In 1954, more than 8,000 of them gathered at Banning. Last June, 30,000 traveled by bus, auto, trailer, even motored wheel chairs and planes for a week end of fun and good fellowship at Big Bear.

A strong bond of kinship links those who work and wake "on the other side of the day."

For instance, Stan Routledge of Long Beach owes his life to being a Night Owl Club member. He lives alone and one night he was seized by a heart attack.

He managed to get to the telephone but he was too weak to look up a doctor. An invitation to a Night Owl meeting, propped against the phone, bore an RSVP phone number. Stan dialed it. Sure enough, the Night Owl was awake and alert. She called police. An ambulance rushed Stan to the hospital for emergency treatment.

"It's lucky I had that Night Owl number," he said.

ALL THIS began a little over three years ago, when Ben Hunter, a good-looking, fun-loving but serious-minded chap of about 30, sitting alone in his glass-walled cubicle at KFI began wondering who — if anybody — listened to his program through the wee, small hours.

Was it worth while for him to "bat his brains out" to be entertaining or should he take the easy, disc-jockey-and-nothing-else route?

He took his microphone down on the street to see who was up at that hour. He found one lone milkman and a couple of truck drivers. Sure, they listened to his program, they assured him.

The milkman did as he delivered the milk.

THE TRUCK drivers did, as they rattled across country.

"There must be 100 of us night truck drivers," one explained. "It's mighty good to hear a human voice when you're rolling a hundred miles from nowhere. The people and things you talk about keep us awake better than music."

Ben went back to the studio a happier man. If the night drivers liked his program, perhaps other night workers did, too. He asked his air audience to tell him what they were doing that they should be awake from midnight to dawn.

Frank Fisher, calling from ship-to-shore off Long Beach, gave Ben the idea of making unusual phone calls part of his program. So he brought in "beeper," or monitored phone calls, making the audience part of his radio show. Letters from listeners are read, also.

NO ONE — not even Ben — knows what to expect. Ted Olson, San Francisco amateur horticulturist, offered seeds from his new "burpless cucumber." Old-timers try to outdo each other with exciting, historical experiences.

Business men offer funny stories and brain-twister puzzles. Scientists, students and archaeologists come up with unusual bits of information.

Fred Phlaff, Long Beach gun fancier, compared his collection of historical firearms with other ballistic experts.

KFI's owl disc jockey Ben Hunter livens up the night.

Uranium hunters swapped tips. Hunters of flying saucers compared theories.

A lonely Catalina Island man, discouraged by the loss, in rapid succession, of his wife, his boat and his health, finally was aroused by a Night Owl program. A post card at first, then letters and finally "beeper" talks.

HIS RICH past and retentive memory gave him so much to offer that listeners soon were clamoring for "more Doc Vaughn." Now Doc has regained his health, his old-time boundless energy, and he has written a book, "The Print of My Remembrance," the royalties of which go to cancer research.

Margaret Newcomb, well known in Long Beach entertainment circles, called the first Long Beach group together. Ten persons showed up. Now, less than a year later, the group searches for a large meeting place for its monthly gatherings.

When a Sailor Kisses a Girl

"GEE, YOU ACT LIKE YOU NEVER FELT AN ICICLE BEFORE."

DENNIS THE MENACE, who appears regularly on The Independent and the Sunday Independent, Press-Telegram comic pages, is the hero (?) of another book, "Dennis the Menace Rides Again" (Holt, $1). You've never seen Hank Ketcham's little puncturer of large egos in better fettle as the above sample proves!

SAILORS KISS EVERYBODY, and "Grandmother Grossie" not only approves but says "It doesn't mean a thing, other than that they are glad to be back in port, alive and safe and well."

In Florence McGehee's new book she reminisces about her beloved grandmother, known to hundreds of homesick sailors in Oakland as "Grossie." Grossie's home was a haven for the lonely, for they not only received good food, but warm and loving understanding. When Florence and her sister, Ruthie, visited their grandmother, they were constantly delighted by the motley household. Mr. Foster, a hungry neighbor, paid for his supper by removing his glass eye, sailors brought them exotic gifts from far away lands, and they thrilled to the stories of strange countries.

Miss McGehee writes her memoirs of the late Victorian days in the same warm style she wrote "Please Excuse Johnny." The charm and humor of "Sailors Kiss Everybody" (MacMillan Co., $3.50) should add to her stature as a California writer. —F. T. H.

STEVENSONIONS will welcome "Our Samoan Adventure" (Harper, $4), the diary Fanny Stevenson kept during the last years of the life of her famous husband, Robert Louis Stevenson, on Samoa. Charles Neider came upon the manuscript in Monterey, Calif., and painstakingly deciphered it, the most difficult parts with special equipment at Huntington Library in San Marino. In addition to his job of editing, Mr. Neider has written an introduction and added notes throughout to clarify the text. It's not only the first time the entire diary has been published: the book contains photographs of RLS, Fanny, and others of the family taken from old albums, some of which have never before been reproduced.—F. T. K.

LOWELL THOMAS has a whale of a book in "Great True Adventures" (Hawthorn, $5). As in his own life, Thomas takes adventure where he finds it so he does this compilation of spine-tingling episodes recorded by such stalwarts as Lawrence of Arabia, Joshua of the Bible, Benvenuto Cellini, Plutarch, Gen. John C. Fremont, Xenophon and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen. And as the adventures range from ancient to modern times, their settings cover a great part of the earth. Thomas, author, explorer and, above all, adventurer, has written an introduction and prefatory notes to each of the 29 stories.—P. F.

WHEN THE CITY was founded, a soothsayer recited its life as more than nine generations. "The Years of the City," by George R. Stewart, (Houghton Mifflin, $4.50) is an account of those years, beginning with the landing of the people, their conflicts to establish themselves in a hostile area, and the building of the city walls, and their vigorous defense. And as a city crumbles, Phrax crumbled, first from its less vigorous citizens, and then from trust in wrong leaders. You will find no city or land like this quoted in history, but it is symbolic of all of them.—G. L.

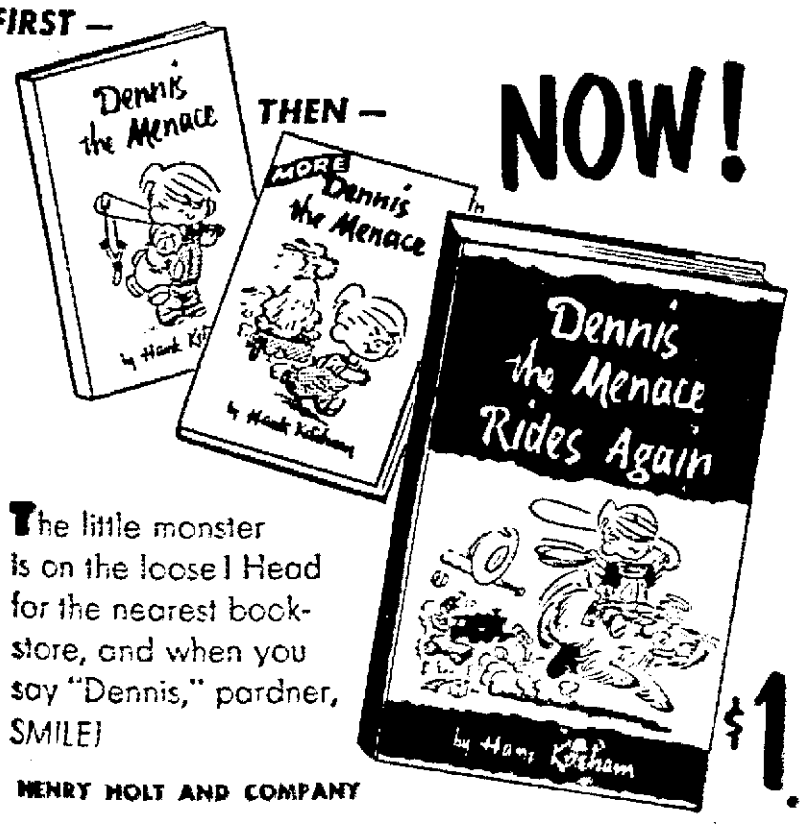

URANIUM is vital in this atomic age, not only for weapons of defense but also in such peacetime fields as medicine, industry and agriculture. An important book, therefore, is "Uranium and Other Miracle Metals" (Sterling, $3.50), in which Fred Reinfeld tells where uranium is likely to be found, what it looks like, what happens to it after it comes out of the mine, and what role the Atomic Energy Commission plays in obtaining it. Field prospector of uranium or armchair prospector of knowledge, either will find it absorbing.

A HIGH-RANKING GIFT for the man whose hobby is guns will be "The First Winchester: The Story of the 1866 Repeating Rifle" (Morrow, $5). John E. Parsons, who will be remembered for two previous books about guns — "The Peacemaker and Its Rivals" and "Henry Deringer's Pocket Pistol" — fondly traces the development of the famous Winchester from its conception through its role on the western frontier. There are scores of interesting old illustrations, some of which make up the end papers.—F. T. K.

FROM HER HIGH PERCH in the old willow tree, Lesley Ross could see the countryside for miles around. Connecticut was at war in 1780 and the conflict was not always going well for the Americans. Lesley watched the coming and going of friends and enemies. How she became involved in intrigue and romance is the story told in Margaret Leighton's new book, "Who Rides By?" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $2.75).

In this historically accurate novel, the characters of Revolutionary War times become very real to the young reader. Older girls will like the book although boys should also enjoy the action it contains. The vocabulary is excellent for the young person, yet there is no sense of "writing down." Those who believe it is important that the youth of America understand something of the trials of other times will like it since the book pictures that phase very skillfully. Aunts and grandmothers will approve of this story as a gift for birthdays or for Christmas. Teachers and librarians will like it for supplementary reading lists.—E. G.

FIRST — THEN — NOW!

The little monster is on the loose! Head for the nearest bookstore, and when you say "Dennis," pardner, SMILE!

CAMERA ANGLE

Pictures in the Sunset

By the Shutterbug

DO YOU RECALL that wonderful song, "St. Louis Blues"—with its downbeat rhythm and its plaintive cry, "I hate to see that evening sun go down"?

Well, a lot of picture-takers once felt pretty much the same way. But no longer—because a great many of them have learned how easy it is to take beautiful sunset pictures with full-color film.

In general, it's safe to say that color shots of sunsets produce more spontaneous sighs of pleasure than any other type of scenic shown on home screens or mounted in the family album.

ACTUALLY, the making of a color shot as the sun goes down has become about as easy as anything can be.

If you should miss out on the exactly correct exposure, nothing much will be lost—your chances for a superb picture are still excellent.

A bit of over-exposure will just seem as though the days were getting shorter a little ahead of schedule.

Now think back for a moment to the sunsets you've most enjoyed. Probably there were trees or distant buildings or hills somewhere on the edge of the view.

BE SURE to include them—you know, foreground interest is almost an essential for any scenic view.

Why not try to have someone standing beside a tree—and when you shoot, remember that the overhanging boughs can nicely frame your whole pcture.

Naturally, anyone or anything between your camera and the setting sun will come in silhouette, because all the light is far, far beyond.

LADIES' NIGHT, a yearly event of the Long Beach Cinema Club, will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Houghton Park clubhouse. Prize-winning films by the ladies will be shown and prizes awarded. Mrs. Lewis Underwood will be chairman with Mrs. Cliff Harris in charge of entertainment and Mrs. Howard Derr in charge of the contest. Refreshments will be served by the men.

LONG BEACH Camera Guild will have a color slide competition at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Municipal Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Winners of the black and white print competition this month were Virginia Callender, first; Bill Jordan, second; Ronald Selvester, third; Virginia Callender and Clare Grounds, honorable mention. Don Barrow, member of the Circle of Confusion, camera club of Whittier, judged the competition.

At this meeting the Guild became the proud possessor of two cups, presented by the Southern California Council of Camera Clubs, with which the local Guild is affiliated, for winning third place in A group, black and white, and third place in A group in color in competitions the past year.

A print by Christine Sandell, member of the Guild, recently was given a prominent place in the Los Angeles Times.

FOR THE RECORD, your prize catches will look better on film when you use a close-up lens on your camera. Such a lens is inexpensive, and will let you get within a couple of feet of your subject, add a lot of interest. Close-ups in color will be especially impressive when magnified by projection onto a screen. The close-up lens is a most enjoyable (and really easy!) way to build up your reputation as an angler who lands the big ones.

HOW TO Do Gluing Jobs; They Are Much Easier Than You Think

NINTY-NINE times out of 100, you can join two pieces of material faster and easier with the right glue than with any other fastening device on the market. There's nothing complicated about using glue, if you keep these simple rules in mind: 1. Get the joint ready for glue by removing wax, grease, oil or paint from the surfaces you'll coat with adhesive. 2. Determine the kind of glue that suits the purpose best. 3. Clamp the joint until the glue dries.

1. THIN COAT of glue is best. Spread it out over glue area, and wipe off the surplus after you clamp up the job. Most glues work best when temperature is 70 degrees or higher. A clean scrap of wood serves as spreader.

2. GLUE AREA determines strength of glue job . . . the more surface you coat, the better. Open mortise-and-tenon joint (bottom) gives glue 8 inches more holding surface than butt joint. Plan the joints so you have more glue area.

3. WHEN GLUING edges, turn alternate sides of stock up to reduce warping. Turn heartwood side up on every other board, when three or more boards are used. Plastic resin glue is resistant to moisture when set; gives firm bond.

4. WOOD EXPANDS more across grain than with the grain when it becomes wet . . . the cause of most joint failures. Assemble the pieces so grain direction is parallel on both pieces (arrow), for the same expansion and contraction.

Plants That Resist the Bugs

By Bob Gilmore

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S splendid growing conditions are as favorable to bugs as to the plants they feed on. Millions of dollars are spent every year in an effort to decrease the bug population. Yet it seems that every year there are more pests in the garden than ever before.

One way to solve this problem is to plant ornamentals that show a resistance to the more common garden pests.

One of the best specimens for foundation planting is a very popular specimen, abelia grandiflora. Landscapers throughout this area, as well as amateur gardeners, are well acquainted with its value. The abelia may be set in either full sun or part shade.

THE LEAVES are shiny but quite small and possessed of a delightful bronzy-green color. Clusters of fragrant, pinkish-white florets appear during a large part of the year. The abelia is hardy down to zero and does not taste very good to bugs.

THE ESCALLONIA is another splendid choice in this area for gardens subject to pest infestation. This plant is a natural for gardens situated along the coastal region. It seems to delight in the sea air.

Two varieties are available: One with red flowers and the other with pink florets. Sun or partial shade will prove a satisfactory location. The plants like a lot of water and, in return, will provide bloom during almost every month of the year.

Japanese boxwood is another favorite for gardeners in this region. It has attained its greatest fame when used as a hedge. The plant may be kept trimmed to a height of about two to three feet as it reacts favorably to fairly regular pruning.

ANOTHER rather interesting, relatively pest-free ornamental is Nandina domestica. This is better known as the heavenly bamboo. This is actually a dual purpose plant, for it may be used in the garden as a hedge or in pots for specimen purposes. It is probably most attractive during the winter season, when the entire plant turns a beautiful coppery-red.

Red berries are also part of this ornamental's equipment. If allowed to grow it will attain a height of about five feet at maturity and tolerates cold down to zero.

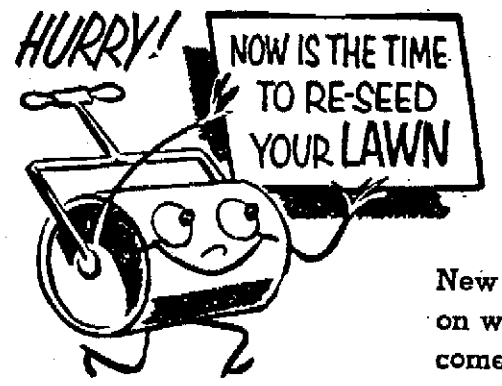

Bougainvilleas have been popular in this area for many years. While new varieties are introduced every now and then, it can be said that the old standby, Crimson Lake, is still one of the best.

Rhus ovata, a California native, takes heat and drought in stride. It is not bothered by the cold. It is often called the "sugar bush," a misleading name as the sugary coating tastes sour due to the sour berries. This plant wants lots of sun but thrives in almost any soil.

Other ornamentals that are not too palatable to the bugs include geranium, plumbago, podocarpus, polygala, veronica, vinca, scabiosa, iceplant, gazania, calendula, cedars, coreopsis, linum, gaillardia and arborvitae.

The podocarpus is relatively pest-free and is one of the Southland's most interesting hardy trees.

Gardening in Dusty Areas

By John Ronson

CERTAIN PLANTS, because of their texture or coloring, show little evidence of dust or dirt accumulation. Ornamentals whose foliage shows a neutral shade are best qualified for areas where dust particles fill the air. It should also be pointed out that for these sections glossy-leaved varieties should be discarded.

The pearl acacia, so named because of the pearl-grey foliage, is an excellent small tree for areas in which dust accumulates. This variety grows to about 15 feet and therefore can be recommended for practically any average sized landscape. It is actually a dwarf acacia but certainly one of the most colorful. The canary-yellow flower heads are at their peak during the holiday season and are excellent for cutting. Plant this acacia in full sun.

Another interesting tree for dust-infested sections is the olive or olea europaea. The foliage is a distinctive shade of grey-green and is excellently neutral. The tree is splendid for California landscape, attaining a height of not much more than 25 feet at maturity. This is a very easy tree to care for and it must not have too much water. A dry, relatively poor soil seems to suit it to advantage.

THE AUSTRALIAN tea tree, known botanically as leptrospermum laevigatum, is characterized by its grey-green leaves. These show very little evidence of dust, even when it apparently is piling up fast. This is a fairly wide-spreading shrub that requires a great deal of room. However, it seldom grows much taller than from eight to 10 feet. The flowers are small, dainty and white in tone. An open exposure and not too much water will keep this specimen happy.

Thujas, somewhat better known, perhaps, as arborvitaes, have splendid foliage for areas subject to dust storms. One of the most interesting for local growing conditions is Thuja orientalis Beverly Hills, often referred to as the golden column arborvitae. This is the tallest member of this plant group.

The dwarf ever-golden arborvitae, recognized botanically as T. orientalis Berckmen's, is perhaps the most popular dwarf conifer in the entire Southwest. This ornamental grows to a height of about 6 feet, is compact and conical in stature. The foliage is golden in tone.

PLUMBAGO CAPENSIS is somewhat of a hybrid between a sprawling shrub and a half-hearted climber. It is a tough individual and seems to thrive on neglect. Azure-blu flowers which look very much like the phlox appear intermittently throughout the year but mainly during the summer months. The plumbago is a very aggressive grower; it seems at its best when planted in a light soil and given very little moisture.

Cotoneasters are valuable foliage plants but during the late fall, winter and spring months their crowning attribute is the mass of bright-toned berries. The foliage is a dull grey-green which is not bothered very much by any accumulation of dust.

Lavendula officinalis with its silvery-grey foliage shows very little evidence of dust accumulation. This is the plant with the marvelous scent and actually the purple-blue flowers have even more fragrance than the leaves. This is a sun lover and enjoys a very easy culture. Other ornamentals that may be recommended for dusty areas are buddleia, erica, cedrus deodara, ceanothus and the pepper tree.

Plumbago capensis is an aggressive grower, not affected by dirt or dust; requires occasional pruning.

Tips on Gardening

GARDENING TIPS for the week . . . Gerberas, often called Transvaal daisies, are very much at home in the Southland. The plants enjoy a sunny exposure along the coast but partial shade will be better for the hot inland areas.

Trees that will cast shade during the summer months should be considered at this time. Your nurseryman will show you a wide range from which to choose. One of the best is the evergreen elm, which grows to just about 25 feet and therefore can be accommodated in practically all average-sized landscapes.

This is a splendid time to sow dichondra seed as the plants come along quickly in warm weather. A nurse crop of either white clover or rye grass is recommended.

tailored draperies of deep chocolate.

A pass-over counter separates the preparation center from the dining area.

THE SAME chocolate draperies are carried over to the den area which is carpeted in a sturdy and good-looking carpet of brown and beige tweed.

Here, as in the living room, the accent color is orange-red. Cushions of that vivid hue are scattered across the corner sectional of brown tweed fabric. A television set is within pleasant viewing range of this and a custom lounge chair in lighter orange. When the occasion demands, a floor-to-ceiling accordion-type divider door of opaque white plastic may be drawn across to separate the den from the dining-kitchen portion of the room.

A LARGE BATH opens off the hallway leading from the entry to the right. This, in turn, connects with a spacious dressing and wardrobe storage area adjoining the master bedroom.

Marion McClaughry's bedroom is peach with brown and cocoa accessories. Her private bath is pale green and cocoa.

Marcia's room is brown and gold and features Paul McCobb storage units, much additional behind-the-wall storage and a connecting bath carried out in yellow gold.

GEORGE BROWER
A Happy Harlequin

IF GEORGE BROWER seems to be smiling like a friendly, happy clown these days, it's not difficult to determine why.

The new Harlequin Room at Brower's glamorous restaurant, Pacific and 23rd St., is the most talked about cocktail lounge in Long Beach. Each afternoon and evening, Brower is showered with congratulations from friends and casual customers alike, all delighted with the restful atmosphere of the room with the buffoons on the walls.

A harlequin, of course, is a clown or buffoon. When he chose this motif for the lounge, Brower was determined to make the Harlequin Room one of the Southland's most distinctive sites for the serving of perfect potables. In this he has succeeded with ease. The clown theme is carried out by paintings of buffoons which hang above the long sunken bar and elsewhere in the room. A number of the pictures are clever originals painted by Joseph Pellitier of Paris. The predominant colors in the room are chartreuse and black, shades that convey a feeling of warmth and life.

THE HARLEQUIN ROOM is not the only new attraction at Brower's. When Brower recently redecorated his restaurant he went all-out. The main dining room and Continental Room have been done over, and the numerous private dining rooms—such as the Rendezvous Room, Coral Room, Memory Room, Flare Room and Green Room—all display beautiful new effects.

Perhaps the most striking change at the restaurant is the broad, new entranceway, including a large lobby and a driveway where patrons may leave their cars to be parked by attendants.

It's hardly necessary to mention that the cuisine at Brower's is superb. Most everybody knows that already. Only absolutely top quality ingredients are used in all the dishes. Nor is the food permitted to lose its flavor sitting around on steam tables. There are no steam tables at Brower's; every item is cooked to order. This technique alone makes the restaurant outstanding among California's better restaurants. —TEDD THOMEY.

Buenos Aires Faces Bombing by Rebels

Planes, Ships Flee Wrath of Hurricane

125-MPH Winds, Worst of Season, Roar on Carolinas

MIAMI (U.P.) — Ione, a "very dangerous hurricane" more severe than either devastating Connie or Diane, headed its powerful 125-mile-an-hour winds Saturday night at the storm-battered lower Atlantic seaboard.

Already military bases began evacuating planes and ships from seashore bases. However, the Miami Weather Bureau said the coast should not begin to feel any increased winds before late this afternoon or tonight.

"Tides are now averaging about one foot above normal tide on the north Florida coast," the advisory stated. "Tides should continue to increase gradually along the Carolina and Georgia coasts to two and one-half feet above normal in some areas by dark Sunday with higher tides Sunday night."

* * * *

FORECASTERS said "this storm appears to have developed into a major hurricane during the past 18 to 24 hours and is now more severe than either Connie or Diane."

The special advisory said the storm was centered about 380 miles east of Melbourne, Fla., and was moving toward the northwest at about 12 miles per hour. That position was slightly more than 500 miles southeast of Charleston, S. C.

"Unless there is unexpected acceleration in the movement of hurricane Ione, winds should not begin to increase materially along any section of the coast before late Sunday afternoon or night," the weathermen said. "However, this is a very dangerous hurricane and all interests on the Carolina and Georgia coasts are again urged to remain on the alert for future advices especially all day Sunday."

Forecasters said Ione has shown marked intensification during the past 18 hours and they predicted a "further gradual increase in the area covered by the storm."

* * * *

MEANWHILE, Ione's elder sister, Hilda, whirled out over open waters again in the Gulf of Mexico and was expected to reach the coast of Mexico a little north of Tampico late Sunday. Small craft along the Texas and Louisiana coast were warned to stay in port because of Hilda which also showed signs of growing in size and intensity.

Large sections of the port city of Tampico still were under water after hurricane Gladys sent the Panuco River boiling through low-lying districts. Some 3,000 inhabitants fled their homes and still were housed in public buildings and temporary buildings.

A violent tropical storm struck the Pacific Coast port of San Jose, about 50 miles south of Guatemala, Friday night, flooding nearby communities and disrupting communications.

Hurricane-force winds and torrential rains lashed the port for four hours.

SHE TOOK LAKE MEAD IN STRIDE

First woman to conquer Lake Mead was 19-year-old Yvonne Sharpe, Long Beach City College coed who swam the lake in three hours. L.B. Girl 1st Woman to Swim Lake Mead

A 19-year-old Long Beach City College coed Saturday became the first woman swimmer to conquer Lake Mead.

Yvonne Sharpe, an advertising major at City College, swam across the Colorado River and Lake Mead, a distance of 6½ miles. She was officially timed at three hours for the long grind.

Skipper J. R. Sombs and Gene Carpenter, of the Lake Mead Marina, accompanied the swimmer in a power boat and certified that she made the swim.

Miss Sharpe had originally planned to try the 13-mile round trip. However, winds were high and the water very rough. Under these adverse conditions, Miss Sharpe did not attempt the two-way swim.

Several men have turned the trick, but Miss Sharpe is the first woman to officially make the long swim.

Miss Sharpe, a 129-pound, 5-foot 2-inch-tall blonde, lives at 36 Sicilian Wk. According to her father, C. R. Fromlath, Yvonne "wants to swim the Catalina channel and has been making long swims to condition herself for the task."

Miss Sharpe has served as a pacer for many long distance swim attempts recently.

She learned to swim at the Pacific Coast Club here and was a member of the club's famed Aquabelles. Later she was coached in the finer points of distance swimming by August Pacheco, former University of Hawaii mentor.

The local amateur swimmer has participated in many rough-water ocean swims staged in Southern California.

L.A. Man Killed Near Where Wife Slain by Sniper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emory Leon Bice, 26, was killed Saturday by a hit-run automobile a few blocks from where his wife was slain by the "phantom sniper" who terrorized East Los Angeles in 1951.

Bice, father of five children, was thrown 255 feet from the impact point on Telegraph Rd. near McDonnell Ave., California highway patrolmen reported.

Later George Edwin Guinn, 27, of 1444 S. Atlantic Blvd., East Los Angeles, was booked on suspicion of felony hit-run driving. Police said blood spots and bits of cloth were found on the front bumper of his car.

Mindanao Quakes

MANILA (Sunday) (AP) — Earthquakes of medium intensity shook the cities of Cotabato, Dansalan and Misamis on southern Mindanao Island Saturday. No damage was reported.

Cypriots Burn British Office, Flee Troops

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Rioters burned down the British Institute here Saturday night. They are believed to be members of the outlawed underground terrorist organization Eoka.

British troops of the South Staffordshire Regiment later dispersed mobs of demonstrators with tear gas and warning shots.

Eoka was outlawed this week in an effort to stop disorders resulting from demands for self-determination or rule over this British Eastern Mediterranean island bastion.

A recent British-Greek-Turkish conference in London failed to reach a decision on the island's future.

Britain and Turkey want Britain to keep it. The majority of people here are of Greek descent and Turks are in a minority. It is Britain's most important Middle East base since the decision to leave Suez to Egypt.

Saturday night, the rioters began attacking cars and stoned police who attempted to halt them. A military police jeep was set on fire.

GAY KHRUSHCHEV WARNS:

'Reds Won't Collapse Till Shrimps Whistle'

(Compiled from AP and UP)

MOSCOW—Soviet Communist Party Chief Nikita S. Khrushchev warned Saturday night the smiles of Russian leaders since the Geneva conference do not mean they have abandoned Communist policy.

"Those who expect this to happen might just as well wait for a shrimp to learn how to whistle," Khrushchev said.

Khrushchev made the remark at a reception in honor of the visiting East German delegation following the start of talks here Saturday. It was the longest diplomatic reception at the Kremlin in recent years.

Khrushchev declared, "It is said that the Soviet leaders smile. This is a real smile. It is not false.

"We want to live in peace, in tranquility," he added.

"But if anyone thinks that our smiles mean the abandonment of the teachings of Marx, Engels and Lenin he is deceiving himself cruelly," Khrushchev said.

A thousand guests milled around tables laden with the choicest spread of food and drinks — caviar, turkey, sherbets, vodka and champagne.

Khrushchev kept the party gay. He drank dozens of toasts, demonstrating the bottoms-up technique of downing vodka. He kissed the East German premier, Otto Grotewohl, and the East Germany Communist Party leader, Walter Ulbricht.

Premier Bulganin vainly kept trying to bring Khrushchev back to his table. But the Communist leader insisted on a round of foreign ambassadors, drinking toasts at every stop.

Then he came back to the central table, glass in hand, and made an unexpected speech declaring that Russia wanted friendship with all countries.

He said that "socialism will win the peaceful competition between socialism and capitalism."

Bulganin introduced his merry colleague as "my best friend."

Khrushchev was waving his glass and weaving before

'Ivan Come Home,' Russia Tells Exiles

MOSCOW (Sunday) (AP)—The Soviet government announced today a broad amnesty which sets free or reduces the prison terms of Soviet citizens convicted of collaborating with the Germans during World War II.

The terms of exile and deportation of many other Russian citizens were ended.

A 10-point decree of the Praesidium of the Supreme Soviet published in this morning's Moscow newspapers also cleared of guilt Soviet citizens who collaborated with the Germans during the war and then stayed abroad. It said they would be permitted to reenter society if they return home repentant and work for their country.

Peron Told to Quit or City Burns

Loyal Forces Claim Cordoba Retaken; Denied by Enemies

BUENOS AIRES (Sunday) (AP) — Rebel forces held a threat of naval bombardment over Buenos Aires and demanded that President Juan D. Peron resign by dawn today.

The threat and the demand were voiced independently in broadcasts from the rebel radio stations. Informed sources said they amounted to a loaded ultimatum.

A broadcast in the name of the Puerto Belgrano Navy Base declared Peron must get out by 6 a.m.

A station identifying itself as Radio Cordoba said the man who has run Argentina as chief executive for nine years must resign by the Sabbath's "first light." The sun comes up at 6:49.

* * * *

IN ANY CASE, the implication was that any attack on Buenos Aires would be deferred until the deadline passes.

Early this morning a rebel radio broadcast said the Argentine fleet is steaming toward Buenos Aires and would reach the mouth of the River Plate (Rio De La Plata) by noon today. Both the rebel and loyalist forces have claimed support of the fleet.

The broadcast from the port of Bahia Blanca, south of Buenos Aires, also claimed that the Argentine second army, commanded by Gen. Guillermo Lagos, had yielded to the rebellion.

The heart of Buenos Aires, the Plaza De Mayo, was blacked out in the night.

* * * *

WHILE THE PROSPECTS centered on this capital city, home to three million of Argentina's 19 million people, the government claimed a major victory inland—recapture of the city of Cordoba.

Rebel radio broadcasts disputed this. Two rebel stations that proclaimed they were in Cordoba fought on in the battle of the airwaves hours after the Peron forces said they had regained the city and put insurgent survivors into disorderly flight.

The loyal army, in a midnight communique, asserted the rebels were using portable radios to air their claims that they still control Cordoba, 400 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

* * * *

A MASSIVE government force was reported moving on the Puerto Belgrano - Bahia Blanca area in the south of Buenos Aires province.

The communique said the Loyalists have not yet launched an

Top Scientist Sails for China, Raps U.S.

WILMINGTON — A top level scientist sailed for Red China from here Saturday after declaring his sympathies for the Chinese Communist government and hurling a few barbs at the U. S. State Department.

He is Dr. Hsue-Shen Tsien, 47, until recently head of the Jet Propulsion Center at Cal Tech.

Another scientist, sailing at the same time was Dr. Cheng Wu Li, 37, who has been physicist at the City of Hope hospital in Duarte for more than a year.

* * * *

THEY SAILED for Hong Kong aboard the American President Line vessel President Cleveland.

Also aboard the ship were about 50 students returning to Red China.

Dr. Li refused to talk to reporters, but Dr. Tsien granted a brief interview.

However, he dodged many pertinent questions, particularly regarding his plans when he returns to his Red homeland.

He declined to state whether he would do any research in connection with armaments or if a specific post of that nature had been offered to him.

"I have to be careful," he said, speaking softly but using perfect English.

* * * *

"I'M IN SYMPATHY with the Chinese People's Republic," he told newsmen.

"I'm sure of getting a position. I want to do my best to help the Chinese people build up a nation where they can live in dignity and comfort.

"I do not intend to come back. I have no reason to come back."

Asked if he was bitter, Dr. Tsien replied:

"Are you embittered when you are bitten by a dog? You instead blame the owner."

Questioning indicated that he was referring to the U. S. State Department.

When reminded that the U. S.

3 American Priests Freed by China Reds

HONG KONG (Sunday) (AP)—Three American Roman Catholic priests crossed freedom bridge today from detention in Red China.

The three freed prisoners were Fathers Frederick A. Gordon of Somerset, Ohio, Joseph E. Hyde of Lowell, Mass., and James G. Joyce of Clinton, Mass.

* * * *

THEIR RELEASE brought to six the number of Americans freed by the Reds in the past three days.

Fathers Gordon, Hyde and Joyce are Dominican priests who have been held under house arrests by the Chinese Communists since late 1953 or early 1954.

* * * *

THE THREE AMERICANS were accompanied behind the Bamboo Curtain by a Spanish priest, Father Louis Bolumburu. He said at the border the Communists began mass arrests of Chinese Catholics in Shanghai last Sept. 8, arresting one bishop, 23 priests and 200 or 300 laymen on charges of counter-revolutionary activity.

The release of the prisoners came as a result of negotiations at Geneva between representatives of the United States and Red China.

There was no immediate indication whether any more prisoners arrived at the border today aboard the daily train from Communist Canton.

Knowland Says He'll Back Ike, Nixon Slate

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif) said Saturday that if President Eisenhower is nominated for another term, Vice President Nixon will also be on the ticket.

"I think that most political observers believe that the President will be nominated if he wants to be," he said at a news conference televised over a Sacramento station. He added that he would support an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

L.A.C. SAYS:

Write to Yourself

Some months ago a young man came to us with what he considered to be a great problem. He was married, with two children. He had a good job with what seemed a good future. But he had been offered another job. The new job had great advantages but it would mean giving up seniority in his present job. It would mean moving his family to a new environment. He and his wife had been struggling with a decision as to what to do and asked our advice.

It was a problem this writer had experienced several times in his own life. The advice we gave the young man was based on the best advice we had ever received. It came to us many years ago when as a young man we had been called east as sales manager of a concern. We were young and enthusiastic. Often we would dash into the president's office with an idea. After this had happened several times we were met with the order "put it on paper and let's look at it."

Result was that we started writing letters to ourselves on such problems. Often we used a system advocated by Benjamin Franklin. The system was to make a balance sheet of the problem. Put down all the good aspects in one column and the bad aspects in a parallel column. Then try to make a decision from the facts you have before you. Much the same result can be had by writing yourself a letter analyzing the problem.

Unless some such system is used, decisions are too often made on an emotional basis. When you have to put your arguments in black and white you often find that what you thought was important is found to be unsound. There is a natural tendency to avoid unpleasant facts. But when you are putting it down on paper

Bomber Crashes Airport Fence Here

THREE AIR FORCE reservists escaped injury Saturday when their B-26 bomber smashed through 35 feet of fence bordering Spring St., following a power failure on takeoff at Municipal Airport. Aboard the plane, all members of the 452nd Bombardment wing of the AF Reserve, were Capt. John Wooley, 36, pilot, Los Angeles; Capt. Wesley Maxwell, 30, co-pilot, and S. Sgt. Richard N. Patton, 28, both of San Bernardino. Only damage to the plane reported was two flat tires.

L.A.C. SAYS:

Write to Yourself

you are more apt to put down the unpleasant points unintentionally avoided when thinking them over.

This system is valuable in making any important decision—in buying a car or a home, taking a trip or making an investment. Thousands of bad decisions would be avoided daily if people took on themselves the responsibilities of making decisions. It is good to talk over your problems with people whom you trust. But when the point of decision comes it can only be made by the individual, or family involved. Unless all the facts are assembled before him the individual is very apt to make the wrong decision.

The young man referred to in the first paragraph recently came back to us. He said he had followed the advice and was very happy in having decided to stay where he is now employed. He said he had talked to his employer about what he had done and had been greatly encouraged. It was his own decision. It was based on facts, he said he had never considered until he had to prove them to himself.

When he found himself putting it on paper he felt he had to prove his reasoning. He made his own decision by writing out arguments which he said he could present to anyone without having to back down. It is a system each executive as well as each family should follow in making any important decision.—L. A. C.

Yank, Freed by Red China, Clasps Wife in His Arms

HONG KONG (U.P.)—Lawrence Robert Buol, an American civilian pilot, joyously held his wife in his arms Saturday and told of five harrowing years that ended with his release from a Red Chinese prison.

Buol, of Stockton, Calif., crossed the border with Italian Roman Catholic Bishop Alfonse Ferroni. Buol, chewing gum and wearing slacks, a sport shirt and faded tennis shoes, looked in good condition. The 63-year-old Ferroni had to be carried across the border. Dressed in a brown cape and slippers tied to his sockless feet, the emaciated bishop was delirious and was rushed to St. Theresa Hospital.

* * * *

FERRONI was the second cleric released in the past two days. The Rev. Harold W. Rigney of Chicago, rector of Catholic University in Peiping until his arrest in 1951 as a spy, was released earlier with Walter A. Rickett of Seattle, Wash., a Fulbright scholar who praised his Communist captors.

Buol's pretty wife, Sue, was waiting for him at Sheungshui Police Station when he drove up in a police van. She ran down the five steps and into his arms.

He was speechless with emotion.

"Gee, he looks just wonderful," she cried.

* * * *

THEY KISSED with but little urging from photographers.

Buol in a statement thanked "each and everyone, large and small, who contributed to our amelioration of conditions and all those responsible for my release."

Buol, a pilot for Gen. Claire Chennault's Civil Air Transport and a wartime Flying Tiger under Chennault, said he was arrested on Jan. 16th, 1950, at Mentzge in the interior. After two and a half months in house arrest he was jailed in Kunming, where the Flying Tigers had their headquarters during the war.

He said he begged his captors to tell him the charges against him, but got no reply. Two of his five years in prison were spent in solitary confinement in a 10-foot by 10-foot cell. He said he was constantly interrogated and "re-educated," although no physical force was used.

* * * *

AFTER A SESSION of intense questioning, mostly about CAT, last Sept. 10th, he was finally brought to trial on the 11th and told the charges: "Intruding into China aboard an aircraft to conduct military espionage." Buol, his voice quivering, said he had to confess, as the only way to win his release.

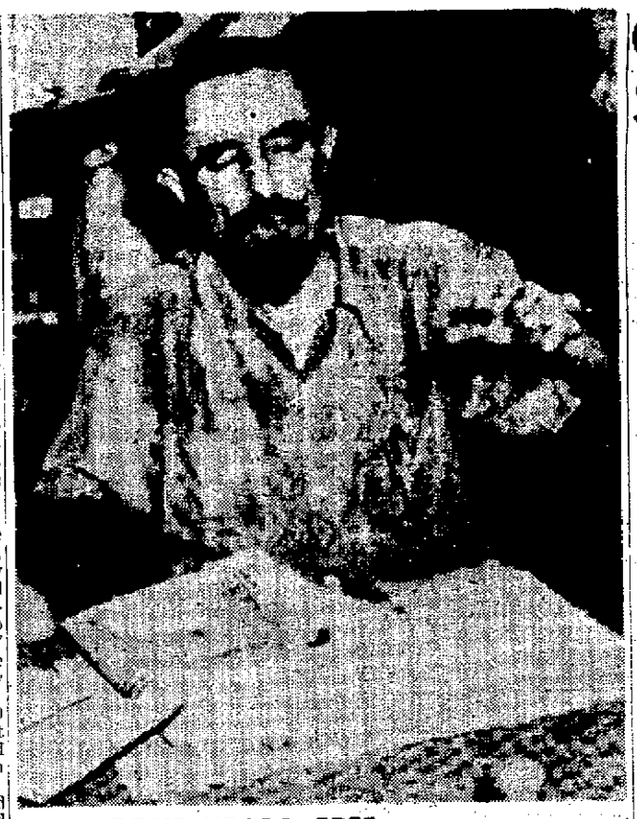

Buol said he lost about 30 pounds during captivity on a diet of rice and vegetables but gained back 10 pounds last month with an improved diet.

Told that Rickett had praised his Communist captors and wanted to return to China as a guest, Buol said he was flabbergasted.

"I canot believe it," he said. "How can any person in his right mind want to go back there?"

In contrast, Bishop Ferroni, a Franciscan, could only ramble.

The bearded churchman now weighed only 70 pounds after losing 80 pounds in five years of captivity.

AFTER FOUR YEARS, FREE

Freed by the Red Chinese, the Rev. Harold W. Rigney, a Catholic missionary, tells reporters in Hong Kong details of his imprisonment since 1951.

Gay Khrushchev Says Soviet Smile Is Real

the microphone when he arose to speak.

"We want friendly relations with all countries," he said. "We are honest people and we tell the truth to our friends and our enemies. We are for coexistence, but we are also for socialist construction.

"We are for coexistence because two systems exist—the capitalist and the socialist.

"We don't have to fight. Let us have peaceful competion and we will show you where the truth lies. If you believe the capitalist system can accomplish something, enter this competition. The truth is on the side of the people. Apart from that, we do not depend on your hate or love. We go our own way. Victory is ours."

Referring to the recent negotiations here between Bulganin and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, Khrushchev said:

"Bulganin has said that he received Adenauer in this room. We had hard and honest negotiations. The word we gave him will be kept. Our word, spoken or written is law."

This seemed to be a clear promise that the unwritten agreement between Adenauer and Bulganin on the return of any German war prisoners still held by the Soviets would have the same effect as a formal signed declaration.

In his reply, Grotewohl asserted that his government and not Adenauer's speaks for all Germans. He declared that his negotiations with the Soviet Union are in the name of the entire German people.

"We laugh at Adenauer," he said. "Our negotiations are not about 9,626 war criminals. We have bigger questions to discuss with the Soviet Union — political and cultural questions."

Grotewohl apparently thought it necessary to deny that he was feuding with Ulbricht.

"It is an absolute fable," he declared, "that Ulbricht and I are feuding. We have a strong and deep friendship and the wind will waft away the rumors that we are divided."

DRUNK ROLLS TIPSY PAL IN PADDY WAGON

VANCOUVER, B. C. (AP)—Police charged a man Saturday with committing a robbery in—of all places—the paddy wagon on the way to jail.

Police said they picked up two men for booking for intoxication. One had no money; the other had $60. On arrival at the jail, one had $20; the other $40. Result: a robbery charge against George David, 29, for the $20 item.

Police Quit Search for Terrorizer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—About 80 police Saturday abandoned search in the Hollywood hills for a two-gun robber—possibly a cave-dwelling hermit — who robbed, bound and terrorized four women Friday.

Officers beat underbrush and poked powerful flashlights into the caverns in wooded areas around Laurel Canyon for about 18 hours before admitting the unkempt prowler had escaped.

* * * *

HE ENTERED the home of Mrs. C. Ray Wilson at 3110 Laurel Canyon Blvd. shortly after noon Friday while she was entertaining three women friends. He ransacked their purses of about $100, tied the women with strips of sheeting, kicked and smashed furniture in a bedroom and locked them in it. They described him as 25 to 28 years old, with unruly hair.

When Mrs. Wilson's husband, a building contractor, returned home the intruder robbed him of $10.

* * * *

ONE OF THE WOMEN, Mrs. James R. Baird, whose $2,500 ring the robber had overlooked, managed to free herself.

Officers theorized that because their quarry fled toward the canyon he might be living in a thicket or cave. They believe he was the same robber who knocked down 200-pound Policeman John Slattery and beat the officer with his own gun last Aug. 18. Slattery was answering a burglary call.

Motorcycle Riders Win Pope's Praise

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius XII has upheld motorscooters as a means of making life easier, even if some persons think they are noisy.

Addressing a group of Spanish motorscooter and motorcycle riders who had driven here on a pilgrimage, the Pontiff said:

"There will be persons of delicate hearing or enemies of any risk who will criticize the unmistakable noise which announces your presence on the city streets, or the slippery agility which permits you to wind among vehicles and pedestrians with incredible speed.

"But we wish to underline the evident progress which all this signifies. It elevates the level of life among those who cannot afford more costly mechanical means.

"Use your machines, but try to do it always with prudence, discretion and respect which alone can assure you the sympathy and affection of all. Love your machines, but remember that before them come yourselves, and your family, social and religious duties."

The Pope addressed the group several days ago but his remarks were released only Saturday in L'Osservatore Romano.

$3-Day Jurors Hard to Find; People Are Full of Excuses

By FRED SCHOTT

Jurors are hard to come by these days in Long Beach Municipal Court.

Last week Jury Secretary Robert N. Hovard needed 65 new jurors. He selects a fresh panel every four months.

In order to get 65 eligible jurors, Hovard examined more than 500 citizens. Each was interviewed and given an intelligence test.

* * * *

THE JURY secretary was obliged to excuse the big majority of the 500 because they couldn't afford to take time off from work.

Most of those who gave this excuse said their employers would not pay them while they served on a jury.

"We have no intention of depriving anyone of his source of income for four months," Hovard said.

For each day of actual service, a juror is paid $3, plus 15 cents per mile from home to court. If a juror completes 20 days of actual service before four months, he is then excused.

* * * *

HOVARD also excuses those who work on a commission basis, professional people such as doctors and teachers, and employes who are needed because they hold key jobs.

Mothers with minor children are not required to serve if they cannot make arrangements for their care. Poor health and defective hearing also are acceptable excuses.

A few persons fail the intelligence test, which consists of 25 multiple choice questions on vocabulary. Prospective jurors miss an average of 7 questions.

Sometimes a juror's excuse needs considerable clarification before Hovard accepts it:

"I have to work to live," was one citizen's cryptic explanation of why he could not serve.

* * * *

ANOTHER was: "I do not drive in the city."

Still another: "I can't hear well enough to be fair."

One citizen, knowing prospective jurors' names are picked at random from voters' lists, confessed to the jury secretary:

"I never registered to vote because I don't want to be called for the jury."

* * * *

A 59-YEAR-OLD woman submitted by mail what Hovard considered the best excuse of the week:

"Have 12-room house. My family consists of 5 adults and 3 grandchildren. I also have 9 roomers and boarders and can't afford to hire anyone to do the work and cooking."

She added: "I don't see how I can possibly serve."

Hovard agreed.

MAE GILCHRIST, 5744 Campo Walk, gets a juror's questionnaire from Robert N. Hovard, Municipal Court jury secretary. She found she has time for jury service despite her duties as a teacher at a modeling and charm school.—(Staff Photo)

Lost a Week, Elderly Pair Found Safe

SPIRIT LAKE, Wash. (AP)—Two elderly prospectors lost since last Sunday in the rugged Mt. St. Helens country and given up for dead were found alive Saturday by a friend.

Little information was immediately available except that Charles Allger, 85, Tacoma, and Charles Dickens, 70, San Diego, were weak, hungry and cold when found.

An ambulance has been sent to a point four miles from where they were found and they are being brought out on stretchers.

The name of the man who found them was not immediately learned but sheriff's officials said he was an old friend who thought he would "go in and look around for himself."

Mitchell to Answer

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell will make a nationwide radio broadcast Tuesday in response to former President Truman's Labor Day speech attacking Republican labor policies.

Mine Rescue Crew Nears 2 Kansans in Old Diggings

GEORGETOWN, Colo. (AP)—Rescue workers, overcoming bad air and seeping water, advanced slowly down an abandoned mine tunnel deep inside a mountain late Saturday seeking two Kansans lost since Thursday while prospecting for uranium.

They have little hope of finding the pair—Glenn Dew, 33, and Melvin LeBlow, 45, alive because of the lack of oxygen in the mine, which was given up as worthless two decades ago. Dew and LeBlow both live at Ulysses, Kan.

The hunt was spurred when the rescue crew found, 2,400 feet from the mine mouth, a rubber raft which the Kansans took with them to use in crossing a body of water caused by a partial cave-in of the tunnel. There was no other sign of the men at the spot.

The 10 professional mine rescue workers carried an air hose to pump fresh air in front of them. They had passed the half-way mark of the 6,000-foot tunnel about noon and maintained an advance of about 200 feet an hour.

Big Tuna Clipper Sinks in Pacific

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A 150-foot tuna fishing boat sank quickly in the Pacific Ocean one mile off nearby Coronado Saturday and all 17 crewmen were rescued without injury.

The big tuna clipper Normandie, which had just set sail from San Diego on a commercial fishing expedition to South American waters, went down in 40 feet of water. Many persons on shore saw her sink.

No reason was learned immediately for the loss. Witnesses saw no smoke or heard no explosion.

The crewmen took to three skiffs and were picked up by two Coast Guard cutters.

Auto Injuries Fatal to Churchman's Wife

SANTA MONICA (AP)—Mrs. Naomi Baumgartel, 65, died Saturday of injuries received Friday night in a traffic accident which critically injured her husband, former executive secretary of the Indianapolis, Ind., church federation.

The Rev. Howard Baumgartel, 65, executive secretary of the Santa Monica Bay Council of Churches, and his wife were struck by an automobile as they walked across an intersection in West Los Angeles.

Machines Looted, Suspect Nabbed

DOWNEY—A Torrance house painter was arrested on suspicion of burglary Saturday night when sheriff's deputies found him inside a tire company here with the cigarette and soft drink machines broken open.

Deputies said LeRoy Watkins, 47, of 3324 W. 187th St., Torrance, had about $30 in small change taken from the machines at the Paramount Tire Co., 11229 Paramount Blvd. Passers-by reported seeing the man in the building at 9:30 p. m. and called officers.

Investigating officers said Watkins reportedly was seen buying cigarettes and a soft drink from the machines earlier in the day.

Boy Badly Injured in Fair Accident

POMONA (AP)—A 12-year-old boy was in critical condition Saturday from injuries suffered when he was thrown out of a loop-o-loop plane ride at the Los Angeles County Fair.

Sheriff's deputies said the boy, Candy Mendoza of Pomona, suffered a fracture of the skull and possibly a broken back and leg in the accident.

THIRSTY BANDITS

Pair Rob Clerk, Also Take Drinks

Two thirsty and thorough bandits, one armed with a revolver, at 10:30 p.m. Saturday robbed a liquor store clerk of $63 and $30 worth of liquor.

Joe L. Barnes, 42, told police the men forced him into the rear of the store at 2826 E. Anaheim, rifled the register and carted away a case of beer and seven bottles of whisky.

They also lifted Barnes' wallet, containing 80 cents.

Navy Cuts Active Duty to 2 Years

Two years active duty with the Navy instead of four is now possible under a new plan announced Saturday by the Long Beach Naval Reserve Training Center.

Rather than enlist in the regular Navy of four years, men between 17 and 31 years may join the Naval Reserve for two years active duty.

The plan is considered especially important in view of the facts that for the first time since World War II, the Navy will begin in November to get some of its manpower by draft. This draft is necessary, according to the Navy, to replace men whose four-year Korean War enlistments are expiring.

* * * *

ACTUALLY all enlistments both regular and reserve require six-year contracts. They are divided into active service, Ready Reserve time in a drilling unit of the Naval Reserve, and Standby Reserve duty in an inactive status. This applies to both regular Navy as well as the Naval Reserve. But by enlistment in the reserve men are only required to serve on active duty for two years.

All benefits such as leave, Navy schools, veterans rights, as well as regular pay, accrue to the Naval Reservist while on active duty. Men between 17 and 18½ may defer their two years active service until they graduate from high school or make the first rate in the Naval Reserve. Those 18½ to 31 must take active duty upon enlistment.

* * * *

OPPORTUNITIES for reservists will be outlined at a public meeting 8 p. m. Tuesday in the U. S. Naval Reserve Training Center at the Navy Base.

The program is especially planned for youths 17 to 19 years old and their parents.

"New Active Duty Opportunities for the Naval Reservists" will be the principal topic, according to Chief Machinist J. H. Schumaker, Submarine Reserve Division.

Young men interested in enlisting in his division may also contact the chief at the training center at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesdays.

Home Loans for Vets Hit 5-Year High

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Labor Department reported Saturday housing construction spurted ahead in August after a lag in July.

In another index of the home-building boom, the Veterans Administration said GI home loan guarantee applications last month hit a five-year high.

Builders started construction on an estimated 123,000 new homes in August, or 8,000 more than in July, the Labor Department said. The August figure exceeded all previous totals for the month except in the record 1950 year.

Gains were registered in August in all sections of the country.

The VA said it received 66,305 GI home loan guarantee applications during August—the highest monthly total since October, 1950.

Air Cargoes Rush Noted at City Port

Municipal Airport had one of its busiest 24-hour periods in the field of air freight up to dusk Saturday as eight cargo planes landed here.

Four of the planes brought in approximately 45,000 pounds of automotive parts for General Motors and Ford assembly plants, according to R. W. Nielsen, whose Comet Service handled the unloading.

* * * *

THREE OF THE FOUR C-46 planes were operated by Zantop Air Transport, out of Jackson, Mich. They brought in nearly 33,000 pounds of General Motors parts. The fourth, an American Air Export-Import Lines C-46, hauled the Ford parts.

The other four planes were four-engined DC-4's owned by California-Eastern Airlines, which has a contract with the Navy to fly freight cross-country on a daily schedule. The California-Eastern planes handled an estimated 25,000 pounds of cargo here, Nielsen said.

* * * *

ALL OF THE PLANES loaded and unloaded at the Wardlow Rd. extension on the west side of the airport, site of the city's proposed air freight terminal. In addition to landing fees paid by the aircraft, the city received additional revenue from more than 3,000 gallons of aviation fuel purchased by the C-46's while refueling.

Book Engineer as Child Beater; Admits 'Slaps'

LOS ANGELES (U.P.) — John Stanley Cameron, 39, construction engineer, Saturday was booked on suspicion of child beating after police said they found his infant daughter with multiple bruises on the face, back, eyes and legs.

The child, Melinda, 22 months, was taken to General Hospital in serious condition.

Officers said Cameron admitted "slapping the child four times" when she would not stop crying. He was arrested at his home.

Cameron's wife, Mildred, 35, told officers her husband once tried to "choke" the girl.

Those accepted for the positions will be trained without charge and on beginning work will receive $288 a month. The work starts when personal property appraisal begins in January and lasts for about three months.

The jobs are open to both men and women. Candidates must be 21 years old by Friday, but must not be over 70 at the time of appointment.

Application may be obtained in the county assessor's Long Beach branch office, 709 Jergins Trust Bldg., according to L. G. Ericksen, deputy in charge of the Long Beach area.

Factory Employment Rises in California

SAN FRANCISCO (U.P.)—Manufacturing employment in California's three major cities increased more than 19,000 during August with Los Angeles hitting an all-time high of 690,400 wage and salary workers, according to the State Department of Industrial Relations.

The department announced that manufacturing employment rose 11,000 in the San Francisco-Oakland region during the month and 8,300 in Los Angeles.

Texas Tiny, 470-Pound Hunter, Shoots 2 Deer, Outweighs 'Em

TEXAS TINY . . . Bigger Than His Prey

A lot of Californians went deer hunting Saturday, but none was more triumphant than Guy (Texas Tiny) Cherry, 5725 Oxnam Ave.

Tiny bagged two deer, as the singular is used in sporting circles. Even more singular was the fact that the expatriate Texan outweighed his prey.

* * * *

THE CHAGRINED animals felled in Santa Ana Canyon by the really big game hunter were a seven-pointer weighing 280 pounds undressed and a four-pointer weighing 165 pounds, a grand total of 445.

Tiny weighs 470 pounds, undressed. When he came to Long Beach from the Lone Star State five years ago, he weighed 640.

* * * *

HE SAID the seven-pointer was "big as any deer I ever saw in Texas." He said it must have come from Texas. He said he didn't see how it got across the desert.

FDR Jr. in Mining Deal

VANCOUVER, B. C. (AP)—The Vancouver Sun says a multi-million dollar smelter for Field, B. C., is under study by a mining company headed by Franklin Roosevelt Jr. The company, headed by the late United States president's son, is Base Metals Mining Corp. Ltd., with head office in Toronto.

Buenos Aires Faces Guns

attack on Puerto Belgrano, but that the 5th Infantry Regiment and supporting warplanes are in position for the assault. A broadcast earlier from the naval base said the infantry regiment had switched to the rebel side.

"With the exception of these focal spots of rebellion," said a government broadcast, "the most absolute tranquility reigns."

But the announcement of these provincial developments was paralleled by an order from Maj. Gen. Franklin Lucero, supreme commander of the Loyalists, blacking out the Plaza De Mayo area of downtown Buenos Aires.

The blackout order — unexplained — came after repeated warnings from rebel radio stations that the insurgents would bombard Buenos Aires from the air and from the sea in their battle to drive Juan Domingo Peron from the presidential office he has held since 1946. The rebels proclaimed a blockade of Argentina's coast.

Though the government has contended the navy is loyal, Adm. Juan F. Rojas said in a rebel declaration:

"All the fleet heads toward Buenos Aires. Triumph is near for the good of the fatherland and its institutions."

* * * *

ACROSS THE BROAD River Plate (Rio de la Plata) in Montevideo, Uruguay, an authoritative source said Saturday night that the rebel warships were preparing to bombard Buenos Aires within a few hours.

Nine small ships and a submarine of Rojas' river fleet waited all day near Montevideo, the informant said, to join forces with the more powerful and heavily gunned Atlantic fleet.

Behind the vacated piers along Buenos Aires' waterfront, artillery batteries watched and waited. And on the Plaza de Mayo, on which Government House fronts, anti-aircraft gun crews stood vigil beside weapons mounted soon after the rebellion flamed Friday. Police shooed out all civilians and clamped a tight cordon around the plaza, scene of the bloodiest bombardment of the June 16 naval-air revolt against Peron.

Many business houses and public offices in the district were already closed. The few operating quickly slammed down steel shutters and locked up. The plaza was plunged into pitch darkness.

The casualty toll of the revolt will be high but how high no one can say at this stage.

By Loyalist account, the fall of Cordoba is the third big defeat of the rebels who triggered a wave of uprisings against Peron before dawn Friday. Others were at Curuzu-Cuatia, in Entre Rios Province, 325 miles north of Buenos Aires, and at the Rio Santiago Naval Base, 30 miles southeast of the capital.

The rebel radio in Cordoba abruptly went off the air temporarily at 7:33 p.m. but 17 minutes later a broadcast from a sister station at the Puerto Belgrano Naval Base, heard in Montevideo, said "troops loyal to the government who are marching on Cordoba by the Alta Gracia road are just on the point of being exterminated."

A loyal army communique broadcast at 8:55 p.m. said the government had whipped the rebels in that provincial capital of 350,000 population.

"The rebels in Cordoba are defeated," it said.

Gen. Jose Sosa Molina, the 2nd Army's commander, was identified as the leader of the attack, staged from the east and south.

The government declared that Brig. Gen. Dalmiro Videla Balaguer, leader of the rebel forces, fled his post with members of his staff and that the city of Cordoba "has been liberated."

Loyalist Meteor jets from the Rio Cuarto airbase bombed and disabled several planes parked at an airport near Cordoba, including three British-built Avro-Lincoln bombers, the government said.

"In this way," it said, "the insurrection forces lost air support."

DR. HSUE-SHEN TSIEN

DR. CHENG WU LI

Top Scientist Sails for China, Raps U.S.

State Dept. is owned by the American people, he said that he liked the people of the U. S.

"They're like people everywhere who want peace and comfort," he said.

* * * *

DR. TSIEN said he reached his decision to return to China after long thought. He said he would have returned previously but had been "artificially delayed."

He declined to say whether or not he was being "exchanged" for American military and civilian personnel held in Red China.

"Ask your State Department," he said.

(Spokesmen for the State Department this week denied speculation that Dr. Tsien and other Chinese citizens were involved in such a swap.)

Clad in an expensive brown suit, the scientist smiled through most of the interview, but ended it abruptly and returned to a cocktail lounge on the ship where a farewell party was in progress. About a dozen persons, including three former Cal-Tech associates of Dr. Tsien, attended the farewell.

Dr. Tsien attempted to minimize his work on jet engines and rockets.

* * * *

"I AM an engineering scientist who helps engineers work out their problems," he said. "My work has covered a much broader field than just jet engines.

"You American newspapermen overemphasize armaments."

Before being placed aboard the vessel, the luggage of Dr. Tsien and Dr. Li was searched by customs officers, but neither had any research documents in his possession. Each, however, had a textbook containing information on nuclear energy of an unclassified nature.

Dr. Tsien is sailing with his wife, Yin, and their two small children, Jungjen, and Yucan.

Dr. Li is returning with his wife, Sun, and an infant child. They have a 13-year-old daughter in China.

FBI agents were at the APL terminal until the vessel sailed.

Both scientists are traveling third class, since better accommodations were not immediately available.

Dr. Tsien came to this country in 1935 as a graduate student.

* * * *

HE RECEIVED his doctor's degree at Cal Tech in 1939 and worked there during most of World War II. He was professor of aerodynamics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1946 and 1947. He returned to Cal Tech to set up the Guggenheim Jet Propulsion Center in 1948.

Immigration authorities granted him a permanent residence permit in 1947 and he visited his native China that year. He was granted a reentry permit upon his return.

He was arrested by immigration officers five years ago as he was preparing to sail for China. He had not reapplied for a reentry permit. Following a hearing at which he was accused of being a member of the Communist party during the late 1930s, immigration authorities ordered that he be deported.

This order was not implemented, however, and he remained at his Cal Tech post under a $15,000 bond.

He made his home in Altadena. He resigned his Cal Tech post three weeks ago.

* * * *

AUTHORITIES said that Dr. Tsien had eight cases of scientific papers ready for shipment to himself in China when he attempted to leave in 1950. They were returned to him after it was found that they were not of a classified nature.

He has aged parents residing in China and associates say that he has expressed concern for them.

Dr. Li came to this country seven years ago and received his doctor's degree at Cal Tech. He was there as a research fellow until 1954.

While at the City of Hope, he designed the hospital's cobalt unit for radioactive treatment of cancer. He resided in Pasadena.

VFW OKs Air Force 'Antibrainwashing'

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — Veterans of Foreign Wars Saturday voiced "100 per cent" approval of the Air Force's controversial course in brainwashing techniques at Stead Air Base in Reno, Nev.

Timothy J. Murphy, VFW commander in chief, wired the Air Force that "we would be better prepared in the event of another war" if similar training were given to soldiers and sailors.

Moody has been training and recently received permission to buy a bull and battle it on this next week's card.

Man, Wife Slay Each Other in Duel With Knives

CHICAGO (AP)—Police said a married couple slew each other Saturday in a knife battle over finances.

Brainimir Spacik, 48, and his wife, Olga, 47, were found dead of stab wounds in their third-floor apartment on the northwest side.

Police Sgt. James MacNamara said Spacik, a sheet metal worker, had been stabbed six times with a butcher knife; his wife 11 times with a hunting knife.

Two-Car Crash Fatal to Three

EL CAJON, Calif. (U.P.)—Three El Cajon residents Saturday suffered fatal injuries in a two-car collision a half mile east of here on U. S. Highway 80.

Police identified the dead as Warren Leslie Anderson, 50; his wife, Theodore Josephine Anderson, 50, and Marlene Luppke, 17.

Authorities said the accident occurred when the Anderson car was attempting a left turn and was struck by another vehicle driven by George O. Smith Jr., 18, of El Cajon. Smith suffered serious injuries. Miss Luppke was a passenger in Smith's car.

DON'T SHOUT! I Can Hear Now!

After the first treatment with the Auditonic Neurogenerator, people have noticed definite changes in their hearing range.

Reports are constantly more encouraging concerning the value of this improved treatment for loss of hearing. Regardless of the nature or severity of your deafness, we invite you to have our thorough hearing examination and a trial treatment. This is not a cure-all and will certainly not restore perfect hearing in every case. But we have enough evidence now available to demonstrate that many deaf persons can expect radical benefit even after years of unsatisfactory experience with hearing aids and a wide variety of treatment. To help you solve your hearing problem we will give you a careful hearing examination and a convincing trial treatment for a limited time for only $2.00. Please phone for appointment (at your convenience) and bring this notice with you.

Carolina Youngsters Deeded Away

By DEL BOOTH

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP)—No. 28463 in a title to real estate book in the county court clerk's office is a deed—but not to real estate.

It is a deed to a child.

Sale price: $1.

The title number and the names have been changed, but here is the language of a deed filed in one county under an ancient law which, although infrequently used, is still valid in South Carolina.

"Whereas, my wife, Mary Drake, has recently died leaving the following children: Bill, age 5; Jo, age 4; and Mae, age 2, and

"Whereas, I have no home in which to take care of said children and nobody to assist in caring for them, and

"Whereas, Dena Gray has kindly taken said children and is tenderly nurturing and caring for them; and

"Whereas, I desire that a home be provided for my said children, and

"Whereas, Dena Gray has expressed a desire to provide a home for them during their minority, . . .

"Now, know all men . . . that I, Bill Drake, father of Bill, Jo and Mae Drake, in consideration of the promise and covenant on the part of Dena Gray—to properly care for and provide a home for my said infant children . . . during their minority, and in further consideration of the sum of one ($1) dollar to me paid by the said Dena Gray, . . . do grant, bargain, sell, release and give unto the said Dena Gray, the custody and tuition of my infant children . . . for and during the time as each of my said children remains under the age of 21 years.

"(Signed) X (Bill Drake, his mark)."

THE LAW PERMITTING such transactions dates back to 1660, when it was drafted in England. It was incorporated into South Carolina's colonial laws in 1748 and much of the original language remains in the state constitution today.

Use of the law was not uncommon until only four years ago. In 1946, for example, a welfare department survey showed there were 135 such cases.

Welfare workers believe the circumstances most often involved were those in which Bill Drake found himself: One or the other parent left with small children and not enough income to provide a home.

Childless couples sometimes used the deed method rather than formally adopt a youngster. It was simpler and cheaper, with the average cost of getting the deed written and recorded ranging from $5 to $10.

DISPARITY IN public school facilities was another reason for deeding away a child.

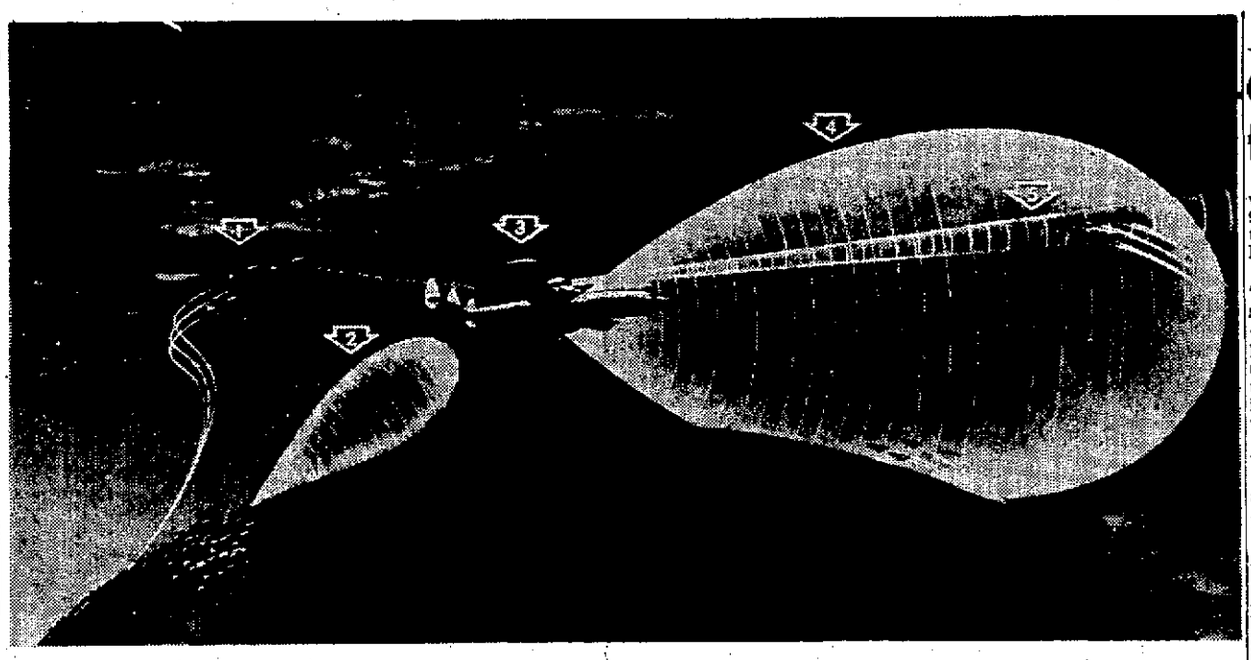

Suppose a family lived in a suburban area with inferior schools. Crowded city schools won't accept out of towners. Parents have gotten around this situation by deeding children to city residents, usually relatives. City schools then had to accept the children.

Much of this has been changed, however, by a 1951 legislative act requiring that state circuit judges review and approve all child deeds. This put the mechanics of the transaction into the same category as adoption, insofar as concerns cost, complications and time required.

Welfare officials believe the practice has been all but abandoned, even though the statute remains on the books.

The deed gives custody, rather than ownership, and expires when the child reaches 21. It carries no right of inheritance from the foster parents, nor does it curtail the child's right of inheritance from the natural parents.

The foster parents are charged with clothing, feeding and educating the child whose custody they have bought. Their treatment of the child is always subject to court review.

SKY SENTRY
Sketch portrays giant radar sentry plane (No. 3) on long-range patrol duty. Around it are other links in continental defense screen: 1. Defending fighters. 2. Ground radar. 4. Huge search area covered by radar plane. 5. Height-finder radar operates from dome on top of search plane.

Radar Planes Patrol Seas

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The Continental Air Defense Command (CONAD) has mounted its radar eyes on high-flying, long-range airplanes which patrol far out over the oceans.

This provides a piercing scrutiny which makes it even more difficult for unfriendly aircraft to approach this continent undetected.

Search radar achieved unprecedented heights and speeds after being married to the military version of the Super Constellation, known to the Navy as WV2 and to the Air Force as RC121.

* * * *

THESE GIANT SENTRIES now prowl the skies for 12 to 15 hours on end, much of the time well beyond sight of land. They are a new link in a vast radar system that includes blimps at lower levels, offshore picket ships, ground stations — now under construction—Texas tower radar platforms along the continental shelf.

Blimps operating out of the Santa Ana Air Base, picket ships from Long Beach and Super Constellations join in the screen against unfriendly aircraft. The Super Constellations in the main operate from Travis Air Force Base 40 miles northeast of Vallejo.

No trained plane spotter is needed to identify the huge radar craft, each of which has a prominent bulge amidships. Underneath is a dome housing the radar antenna which scans the skies horizontally. Jutting sharply upward is another dome containing the vertical search antenna. This, called the height finder, determines the altitude of any object picked up on the radar.

The 2½ million dollar flying radar station has a crew of 21. Inside the "passenger compartment" is a double row of radar observation booths — nine radar duty stations in all.

* * * *

SINCE RADAR WAVES travel in straight lines, the range is limited to the horizon. The high flying Super Constellation surveys a horizon much wider than the ground station, thus its radar range is vastly increased. Too, it moves constantly to new horizons, further extending its vista.

Because its missions are long, the plane offers weary crew members some of the comforts of home. It has bunks with foam rubber mattresses and a compact galley which often dispenses steak and chicken dinners and provides hot coffee at any hour. There is a recreation table for games or letter writing.

The sentry plane not only is charged with intercepting any intruding aircraft long before it reaches land; it also guides in fighter planes sent up to intercept the intruder.

From there on in the job started by the huge flying sentry becomes a matter for the interceptor's shorter range radar, automatic pilot and, if the plane remains unfriendly, rockets.

Ocean Skiers Race Today to Avalon Bay and Back

Approximately 75 water skiers will start from Magnolia Pier at 9 a. m. today in the Grand National Water Ski Race to Catalina Island and back.

Preston Foster of Channel 11's "Waterfront" will be official starter.

The non-stop race, sponsored by the Long Beach Boat and Ski Club, generally takes two or three hours to complete, according to Bill Williams, chairman of the event.

Entries will be accepted until the start of the 58-mile race.

Trophies and other prizes with a total value of $2,000 will be awarded to entrants finishing among the first 10.

In addition, the first three women finishing — regardless of their overall position in the race —will receive trophies.

The racers will cross to the island, make a turn around a boat anchored in Avalon Bay and start the return trip.

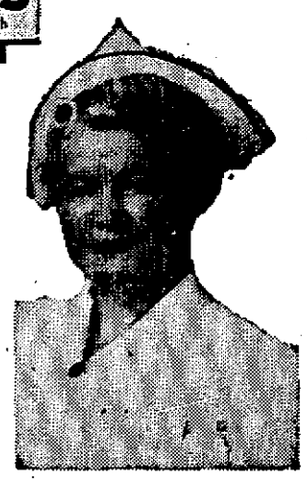

Any skier spilling my remount and continue the race. However, he will not be permitted to get into the boat or rest by holding on to the craft.

Musical Education
use the
Humphreys Plan

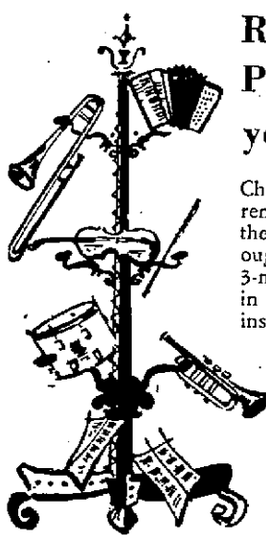

Authorities agree that musical training for the young is an important aspect of their education.

But we've learned that many youngsters start with a rush, only to lose interest later. Beginning with the wrong kind of instrument that doesn't suit their fingers, teeth, lips or personality . . . a "cheap" instrument . . . or a poor teacher . . . any one of these can lead to early failure. Buying an expensive instrument at the start is also folly.

That's why we have a Rental Plan that enables the beginner to use a truly fine instrument, yet not risk a lot of money.

That's why we have set up Humphreys School of Music: To guarantee our patrons excellent training in the instrument of their choice. We're here to help in every way. Visit us soon.

U.S. Testing New Methods to Quiz POW

STEAD AIR FORCE BASE, Nev. (UP)—Air Force experts here are testing new methods which the United States may some day use to extract information from prisoners captured in war.

This base has received a lot of publicity recently as a center for training American combat fliers to withstand enemy brainwashing techniques if captured.

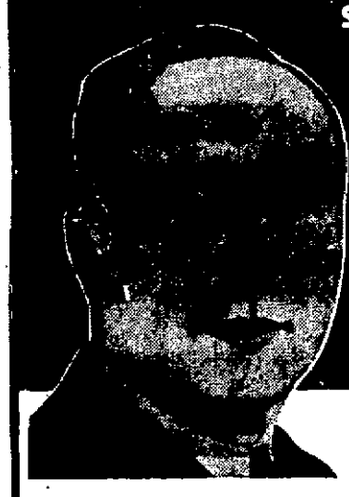

But Maj. John Oliphant revealed that Stead also is a center for testing practices the U.S. military might effectively employ against enemy captives.

The precise methods which U. S. intelligence has used or plans to use to elicit military information from reluctant POWs are secret. Similarly, the research ideas tested here are highly classified.

The new U. S. interrogation ideas are believed, however, to be based on the most modern psychological concepts and to be as effective against certain kinds of personality as less subtle and more brutish practices.

OPEN MONDAY AND FRIDAY EVENINGS

POISED FOR LONG SWIM

Housewives to Try Channel Crossings

Long Beach's swimming housewives—Amy Hiland and Daisy Murchie—will attempt to conquer Catalina Channel this week.

Only woman to succeed in the distance swim is Florence Chadwick.

Amy Hiland, who tells her own story in today's Southland Magazine, has twin goals: to be the second woman completing the swim and to be the first amateur splasher of her sex to triumph over the treacherous currents.

Mrs. Murchie, who turned professional earlier this summer to compete in the famed Atlantic City Steel Pier swim, expects to plunge into the channel at Emerald Bay Thursday night, while Mrs. Hiland is planning to leave on her second try at swimming to the mainland on Saturday night.

Daisy, who will be sponsored by the Belmont Shore Businessmen's Association, hopes to complete her swim early Friday afternoon while Amy's goal is to reach the mainland by noon on Sunday.

* * * *

THEY WILL HEAD for Point Vicente in Palos Verdes, 21 miles from Catalina.

Both are conceded excellent chances of completing their swims.

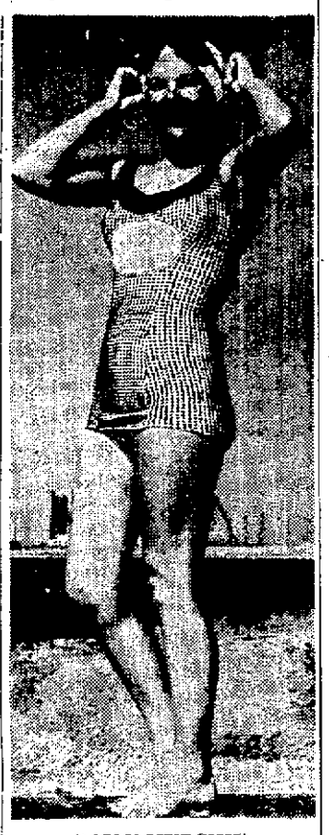

Mrs. Murchie is expected to encounter the more favorable conditions.

After receiving a report that the tides and currents will be most favorable for a crossing from Wednesday through Friday, Mrs. Hiland considered moving up her swim, but finally decided to hold to her original Saturday jump-off date because arrangements had reached an advance stage.

It will be Mrs. Murchie's first attempt.

* * * *

THE HILAND SWIM has attracted widespread attention due to Amy's dramatic struggle to complete her June swim. It was estimated that Amy swam 30 miles due to the strong currents and tides, and at the end she was losing as much ground as she gained.

DAISY MURCHIE
Target: Point Vicente

She finally was pulled out of the water by her husband, Pete, in a state of near shock just 2½ miles from the mainland after being in the cold, choppy water for 19 hours. A total of 16 sharks were killed during the crossing by armed guards on accompanying boats.

Tough Law Cuts Dope Traffic 'Way Down'

WASHINGTON (UP)—Federal Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger said Saturday the four year-old stiff-penalty law against narcotic peddling has helped to cut such traffic "way, way down" in some areas.

But the chief of the treasury's 250-man narcotics squad said he wants a federal law that is even stiffer.

He said the average sentence in narcotics convictions now is almost four years, compared to 18 months in 1949.

"They're scared," Anslinger said of the veteran narcotics pushers.

* * * *

HE STILL wants Congress to pass a law which would set a higher penalty than the current minimum of two years for a first offender.

Veteran hoodlums, who are subject to a minimum of five years imprisonment on a second offense and 10 years on a third, "are having the peddling done by the fellow who hasn't had a first conviction," he said.

He had high praise for the new Ohio law which sets the most severe penalties in the nation for narcotics offenders. It went into effect this week and includes such provisions as a minimum sentence of two years for inducing or trying to induce a person to use or administer narcotics unlawfully (the first time any state has provided such a penalty), and a minimum of 30 years for inducing a minor to use narcotics (maximum of life imprisonment).

* * * *

A NATIONAL law of such severity is too much to hope for, Anslinger said, but he did hope Congress, which has 20-odd narcotics bills before it, would act to tighten up the current federal law next year.

As for enforcement of the law as it stands now, Anslinger said peddlers in Hawaii "collapsed like an accordion" when two federal judges there started imposing maximum sentences. The same happened in Seattle, he said, and now that city is "one of the cleanest towns" in the country.

Big cities are the centers of U. S. narcotics traffic, Anslinger said — New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington, Detroit, Chicago, and "all the big cities in Texas and California." He said traffic is sporadic in the rest of the country.

Vatican Hits Red Report on Cardinal

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican's l'Osservatore Romano said Saturday a Hungarian communique two months ago on the "suspension" of Josef Cardinal Minidszenty's prison term may have been propaganda for foreign ears.

A front page editorial entitled "Where is Cardinal Mindszenty?" said the cardinal's fate still is not known.

Scientists Find Huge Green Spot on Mars; May Be Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—Discovery of a vast new blue-green area, believed to be living vegetation, on the surface of Mars was reported Saturday by the National Geographic Society.

The announcement said the discovery of this 200,000-square-mile area, almost the size of Texas, "has produced the greatest change in Martian geography since the planet was first mapped 125 years ago."

* * * *

THE DISCOVERY was credited to Dr. E. C. Slipher, leader of the 1954 National Geographic-Lowell Observatory expedition which photographed Mars from South Africa. Slipher alone made more than 20,000 photographs.

Saturday's announcement said discovery of the new area, near Mars' Great Thoth Canal, was totally unexpected, adding:

"Never before has such a new dark splotch appeared except as an increase of an existing dark area.

* * * *

"THE REMARKABLE transformation indicates that the division between Martian (orange-red) desert and dark areas is not necessarily fixed or permanent; one may change to the other at any time. It helps support the conclusion that Mars is not a dead world, that the darkening is due to the growth of plant life.

"Biologists suggest that this life may be akin to lichens that grow on earth's barren rocks and mountaintops."

SWELL IN SLOT MACHINES

Wooden Nickels Drive Nevada Casinos Nuts

RENO (AP)—The old adage about not taking any wooden nickels never was taken more seriously than it is today by Nevada's legal gamblers.

A commercial stunt by the neighboring city of Sparks in issuing 10,000 wooden nickels, can turn into a gambler's nightmare.

Somebody has made the horrifying discovery from a gambling operator's standpoint, that is, that the wooden nickels work very nicely in the big dollar slot machines used in many of the state's casinos.

* * * *

"MY GOSH," said one operator when informed of the discovery. "Now I'll get ulcers for sure."

Some brands of machines will take the wooden nickels just like they take the silver cartwheels. Others require a little gimmick easily discovered by the player with a chiseling soul. Still others, in the minority, won't permit a pull of the handle, jamming instead.

Only a few gambling houses report finding the phoney pieces of pine in their slots so far, but word of the wooden nickel's dual role is spreading fast.

"We may have to put on extra girls to keep an eye on the dollar machines alone," said a slot operator.

* * * *

THIS WAS backed up by an official of the Sparks Chamber of Commerce which issued the 10,000 souvenir pieces to commemorate the city's 50th anniversary.

"There's nothing we can do now," he said. "I guess they'll just have to put a doll on every dollar machine."

"That will make a bigger payroll for Reno as well as for Sparks," he added.

The nickels, manufactured by a novelty house in Texas where slot machines are illegal, are the exact dimensions of a silver dollar.

* * * *

THEY ARE being distributed by Sparks merchants and are redeemable for a nickel's worth of merchandise or for cash from the Chamber of Commerce.

The only thing which possibly may keep the 10,000 nickels—actually worth $500—from reaching their full potential value of $10,000 is this paragraph inserted into the law by the 1955 Legislature:

"It shall be unlawful to use anything but a coin minted by the United States government in a slot machine. Violators may be punished by up to six months in jail and-or a $500 fine."

Law or no law, Nevada gamblers are stocking up on aspirin

Czechs Furnish Arms to African Rebels, Report

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Free Europe Bulletin says Communist Czechoslovak munitions factories have been delivering weapons to the insurgent tribes in French North Africa.

It said Friday night the factories had offered 9mm. pistols at reduced prices through a "western trading company" in August. The Czechoslovaks also came up with a specially constructed "sabotage pistol, looking like a fountain pen," it said.

REGIONAL POLITICS

Heavy Schedules Keep Solons Busy

BY THE LOOKOUT

Heavy schedules of interim committee work, speechmaking and conferences with constituents are keeping Long Beach area's legislative representatives busy in this between-sessions season.

Assemblymen Herbert R. Klocksiem and W. S. Grant are in the Sacramento area this week end. On Friday, they attended meetings of the Assembly committee on manufacturing, oil and mining, of which both are members.

Klocksiem will attend the League of Cities convention in San Francisco Sept. 18-22, and will return to Sacramento next week end for a meeting of the joint Senate and Assembly Committee on Legislative process.

HOSMER 'CO-STARS'

Rep. Craig Hosmer, who has been busy for a week making speeches on the Colorado River water dispute, will "co-star" with Assemblyman Grant at a Wednesday night meeting in Lakewood to which all interested citizens are invited.

This session will be held at the Lakewood Country Club at 8 p.m. under sponsorship of the Lakewood Young Republican Club. It will be in the nature of a legislative report to the people of Lakewood. Hosmer will discuss in particular the river water fight, and Grant will review developments in the tidelands oil controversy.

State Sen. Richard Richards is likewise busy in his county-wide district. This week Richards formally asked Gov. Knight to call a special session of the Legislature, concurrent with the 1956 budget session in March, to include on the agenda the subject of air pollution.

MUNNELL COMING

Assemblyman William Munnell of Montebello will address a meeting of the Lakewood Democratic Women's club to be held at the Lakewood Country Club on Sept. 29, starting at 9:45 a.m.

PLANNING "Report to People" Wednesday night at Lakewood Country Club are, from left: Dick Alexander, Young Republican program chairman; Rep. Craig Hosmer and Assemblyman W. S. Grant.

Buys Redondo Firm

DALLAS (AP)—Texas Industries, Inc., Dallas building materials producing firm, Saturday announced purchase for $1,500,000 of the Redondo Tile Co., Ltd., of Southern California. Redondo makes glazed ceramic tile for walls and floors.

Nisei Claims Hearings Begin Sept. 29

Hearings on legislation to speed settlement of claims arising out of the Army's evacuation from the West Coast of persons of Japanese ancestry during World War II will be held at the Federal Building in Los Angeles on Sept. 29 and 30, Rep. Craig Hosmer announced Saturday.

The hearings will be conducted by a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee and will start at 10:30 a.m. each day.

Specific purpose of the hearings is to receive testimony on HR-7763, which proposes to expedite and liberalize determination of the remaining 2,000 claims approximating $50,000,000.

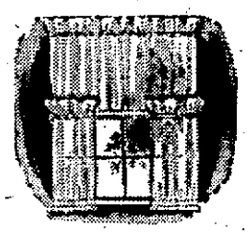

Hosmer said that any persons having an interest in the matter may arrange to testify by directing an airmail request to the subcommittee at the House Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.

He said that the legislation has been considered desirable so that loyal American-born citizens of Japanese ancestry may have their rights adjudicated without further delay.

Hosmer said the purpose of HR-7763 is not only to speed up court determination of claims, but permit the attorney general to dispose of many claims so as to avoid the necessity of protracted court procedures.

West, Russ to Tone Down U.N. Demands

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The western powers and Russia, at odds for a decade in the U. N., will take moderate but firm courses in the 10th U. N. Assembly convening Tuesday.

The aim of both blocs is to obtain as much Assembly backing for their pet projects as possible without rocking the Geneva boat and without giving major concessions. The Americans are hoping for unanimous approval of President Eisenhower's arms inspection program.

Secretary of State Dulles and Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov are slated to make the most eagerly awaited addresses in the general debate beginning Thursday. Dulles will be the lead-off man. Molotov may hold his speech until the next week. Authoritative sources said the U. S. view on major issues to come before the Assembly is as follows:

1. The United States, backed by Britain and France and a majority of the 60 U. N. members, will squash an expected Russian attempt to seat Red China.

2. Debate on disarmament will be held up until the Big Four foreign ministers meet in Geneva Oct. 27. Once that meeting is over, the Americans will drive for a resolution embodying President Eisenhower's proposal, made at Geneva in July, for the United States and Russia to exchange military blueprints and aerial and ground inspections.

3. Despite protests of the Asian-African group, the United States will oppose putting tension in Algeria on the Assembly agenda. It will abstain on the question of debating the Moroccan case.

4. The United States has not made firm its position on Cyprus but hopes some way can be found to ease the tension among the British, Greeks and Turks.

U.S. Jolted at Russia's German Aim

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — The United States was disturbed Saturday by new evidence that Russia is plotting to delay German unification or to freeze the western allies out of negotiations to achieve it.

These possibilities and other German developments were discussed today by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Undersecretary of State Herbert Hoover Jr., and other key State Department officials.

Dulles, who returned from a vacation Friday night, is considering ways to meet Soviet strategy at next month's Geneva conference of the Big Four foreign ministers. He will go to New York next week to deliver a major foreign policy address at the 60-nation meeting of the United Nations General Assembly. He is expected to emphasize America's determination to obtain German reunification at an early date.

* * * *

LATEST EVIDENCE of a hardening Soviet position against early German reunification has been channeled to Washington from Moscow, Bonn, Germany, and other capitals. The evidence has been gleaned from recent talks in Moscow between high Soviet leaders and U. S. senators and from secret accounts and on-the-spot interpretations of this week's Moscow talks between the Soviet leaders and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

The result of this and other evidence of longer standing has cast a noticeable pessimism over western hopes for major progress on German reunification at the Geneva conference. German unity and European security will be the key issues.

Informants said the gist of the Moscow position, as put to Adenauer, amounts to this:

Too much should not be expected on German unification at the Geneva conference because of the "many underwater rocks" or difficulties which are sure to be encountered. Western plans for security guarantees against future German aggression are unlikely to be accepted by Russia. The Soviet Union is content to maintain the current existence of two Germanies. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the cornerstone of western security, must be dissolved. West Germany must not be rearmed as a NATO partner. American and British troops must get out of Europe.

* * * *

PERHAPS MORE DISTURBING than these points is the Kremlin word, said to have been communicated to some visiting senators, that "the question of German unity is for the Germans themselves to decide."

This was borne out Saturday by Otto Nuschke, deputy premier of East Germany, who said that unification of Germany would have to be worked out through negotiations between East and West Germany.

This is regarded as a strong hint that Russian strategy is aimed at future direct bargaining with the Germans on German unity, thus leaving the western allies out in the cold until the "deal" is sealed.

Murphy Leaves to Settle Row on Yugoslav Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Murphy, deputy undersecretary of state, left Saturday on a European mission during which he hopes to resolve a dispute with Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito over U. S. military aid.

Tito has resisted efforts of the American Military Mission at Belgrade to keep a close check on American equipment he receives, and, according to Yugoslav sources, to indicate how he should use it.

The dispute, which reportedly involves other problems also and which has irritated American-Yugoslav relations for months—is now regarded here as near the point of settlement.

French, Moroccans in Desperate Debate

PARIS (AP)—French officials and Moroccan nationalists met Saturday in a desperate attempt to solve one issue—the composition of a regency council—which is holding up settlement of the crisis in Morocco.

The other parts of the French plan for semi-independence for the protectorate are ready to roll as soon as all sides on the three-man panel which is to take over the throne from aged and unpopular Sultan Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafa.

Resident-General Pierre Boyer de Latour du Moulin, who flew in from Rabat in answer to a government summons, joined Pierre July, minister for Tunisian and Moroccan affairs, in a lengthy session with the Nationalists. The principals said, without much conviction, that they hoped to settle the regency issue Saturday night.

Premier Edgar Faure was racing three "deadlines" in the talks with the nationalists. These were the United Nations Assembly opening Tuesday in New York, a rising tide of political opposition at home which could menace the Faure cabinet when parliament reconvenes next month, and an ominous restiveness among nationalists in Morocco which could plunge the protectorate into another blood bath at any time.

Solon Praises Russ Finances

LONDON (AP) — An American senator touring Russia was quoted by Moscow radio Saturday as expressing surprise that the Soviet Union is free of debt while the United States is 281 billion in the red.

The broadcast of a recorded interview with Sen. George W. Malone (R-Nev) said "he found out that the U.S.S.R. had no national debt and contrasted this with the United States national debt of 281 billion dollars."

"So," Malone was quoted as telling the Moscow radio interviewer, "I am trying to understand your method of operation, the approach of the people to the government, their acceptance of it and what you produce, the methods of production and how you intend to better the standard of living of your people."

The broadcast was in English and beamed at the United States.

The Soviet announcer asked Malone what had made the greatest impression on him and he was quoted as replying: "Well, I don't think some of my countrymen come with entirely open minds. We have had a lot of misinformation on Russia in the U.S.A. We've had a lot of accurate information, but I've come to find out.

"And the thing that has impressed me, I think, the most, is the tremendous industrial program and what you have done in the last 10 to 15 years."

Farm Supports Top '56 Issue—Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson indicated Saturday new farm price support legislation will be a first order of business when Congress resumes Jan. 3.

The Texas Democrat listed as other "major issues (which) can be tackled early next year: social security liberalization, federal aid for school construction, an expanded highway program and the Senate-passed Colorado River basin project.

All these programs made some progress in either House or Senate this year.

The Democratic leader gave no hint what form new farm legislation might take. The continuing decline in farm prices, a target of major criticism by Democrats and some Republicans, promises to be a spotlight political issue in next year's general election.

Sen. Kerr (D-Okla) said Saturday Secretary of Agriculture Benson is "directly responsible" for dropping farm prices and should be removed from office.

Wickard Rips Ike 'Bankrupt' Farm Policies

CAMDEN, Ind. (U.P.)—American farmers are going bankrupt under a Republican policy of broken "pledges" which is threatening the entire nation's economy, former Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard charged Saturday.

Wickard sounded the keynote for a meeting of a Democratic committee opening Monday in Chicago to hunt solutions to the farm problem, which the party hopes to build into a top 1956 campaign issue.

Wickard, chairman of the 15-man committee which will draft advice for the Democratic National Committee, said farm income will be the chief topic because "it's hard to have any kind of an effective program when farmers are going bankrupt."

"Agriculture today is in dire circumstances and the outlook is pretty dark," he said. "We're all active farmers on this committee and we're interested in seeing how we can get agriculture back on its feet and regain some of the losses suffered since January, 1953."

Nixon Vows Bold Move to Aid Farmers

WABASH, Ind. (U.P.) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon Saturday promised "bold imaginative" government action to halt sagging farm income and spike Democratic charges President Eisenhower has broken his pledges to the farmers.

Nixon swung hard in defense of the administration's embattled farm policies as the troubles of the farmer boiled up into the biggest issue of the 1956 general election campaign.

Even as he spoke, farmers in Iowa called nonpartisan meetings to demand the resignation of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson. And the Democrats scheduled a huddle in Chicago Monday to map new strategy on the issue.

Nixon, the administration's top trouble-shooter, jumped into the controversy with a major speech at the national plowing contest here.

He blamed Truman administration policies for the sag in prices, declared the administration's flexible price support program is "basically sound," and insisted Mr. Eisenhower still stands by his 1952 campaign statement that farmers are entitled to full, 100 per cent parity in the marketplace.

Nixon also said the Agriculture Department is ready "to go into action promptly" if necessary to avoid a threatened drop in pork prices "which would bring real hardship."

Esther Williams Ends Long Contract; Will Keep Busy

By BOB THOMAS

Recently the Movie Mermaid got permission from MGM to end a 14-year exclusive contract with the studio. From now on, she's a free agent — except for three more films she must make for the Culver City lot in the next five years.

"It was best for them and it was best for me," she related beside the pool of her Mandeville Canyon home. "This gives me a chance to enter the outside ventures and it allows the studio to plan ahead for my pictures.

"Fourteen years is a long time to stay in any one place. By the time you've been that long at a studio, you've worked for all the producers and you've gleaned all the ideas for pictures that the people on the lot can devise. It's time to seek a fresh outlook."

Since winning her freedom, she has been flooded with scripts. She keeps a stack of them by the bed and tackles a few every night. Her films as an independent star may surprise the fans who are used to seeing her in glossy musicals. One of the most promising scripts would feature her in an adventure yarn in which she swims not for pleasure, but for her life.

"I have some projects lined up for filming in Europe," she reported. "It will be ideal, because I'll be touring with my water show there next year. We can film the rehearsals and incorporate them in the pictures."

Esther plans to make the enterprises a family affair. All the business details are handled by her husband, Ben Gage. They intend to take their three children on the tours.

"I've got to talk to Burt Lancaster when he gets back from Europe," Esther remarked. "I understand he takes his five children with him all over the world. I want to find out how he manages it."

Masons to Hear Dr. W. H. Moore

Dr. Wallace H. Moore, dean of education at Long Beach State College, will talk on conditions in the Far East at a meeting of Long Beach Masonic Club Thursday noon in the Wilton Hotel.

He recently returned from an extensive trip to the Far East. Dr. Reynolds B. Thompson will preside, and chairman of the day will be Edwin W. Wade.

Readings Monday For Next Play

Readings are scheduled Monday at 8 p. m. at The Theatre for its next production, the Clifford Odets play, "Country Girl."

Parts to be cast call for six men ranging in age from 20 to 50 and a young lady of about 20. Pat Brown will direct and play the role of Georgi Elgin.

NOW PLAYING

Villainous Kurt Schneider, right (Bob Krug), is grabbed by Detective Jim McLeod (William Dusablon) in "Detective Story," now playing at "The Theatre," 2400 Magnolia Ave. Krug drives from Hollywood to appear in the play, which will run every night but Monday through Sept. 24.

It Happened Last Night

By Earl Wilson

AND SHE 'DIED' SO YOUNG

NEW YORK—The B.W. and I had a dinner date not long ago with Kim Novak—and Kim was very sad.

Perhaps she was sad to be with a guy pushing 50 and his wife who's pushing him — when she could have been squired by numerous millionaires who have ogled her curves in the magazines—but we wouldn't admit it . . . and we won't yet.

"I'm so young," Kim complained.

"That's terrible," I said, pushing my fourth chin up against my third chin, endeavoring to make it appear that I have only triple chins.

"It's an awful weakness!" chimed in my BW. "How do you get it?"

Kim was sitting with us at the Cafe de la Paix sidewalk spot outside the Hotel St. Moritz. Numerous gentlemen bolting by flung darts of admiration—with their eyes — at this twentyish girl with her platinumish hair. Just to keep everything right at home, they also glanced rakishly at my BW. (For that matter, several of them seemed interested in me.)

"Crying, for example," Kim mentioned.

I'd just been hearing Josh Logan proclaiming her greatness in "Picnic"—and how she happened to be in town filming "The Eddy Duchin Story," much of it at Tavern-on-the-Green in Central Park.

"I'm too young," Kim said, "to know how to cry technically."

We were now on our way to Toots Shor's. Sitting back in the gloomy darkness of the cab Kim told us how she managed a death scene in "Picnic."

"I have such an wonderful-beautiful death, I wanted to do it well," she said in the same breathy, gaspy voice.

"So somebody said I should try to think of myself as dead."

I shivered a little. Just to make sure everything was all right, I patted Kim on the arm. Kim has a very nice pair of arms.

"I did it so well," Kim continued, "that my hair straightened out . . . my throat rattled . . . and I got cold and clammee."

"Lenumee outa here!" I said, nervously. Fortunately, we were by now at Shor's, and I gave Kim another pat just to make sure, you know, that she was all right. You can't be too careful about such things.

We went in and talked to Toots about Eddy Duchin, who had hung out in this very place, often at this very table.

"That's where Jimmy Walker used to sit," I said pointing.

Kim looked blank.

"Jimmy Walker?"

The Mayor—and a great night owl when Eddy Duchin was starting out." I replied. "But why should you know — you weren't even born yet!"

Yes as the B.W. says, being young is an awful, awful deficiency . . . and how can we get it?

"DON'T PRINT THAT": An ad agency killed a singing commercial with the line, "Ain't it a shame about Maine," fearing it might reflect on Mamie Eisenhower. It's now "Ain't it a pity about Kitty."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A woman writes: "Men have their particular pleasures, but they never enjoy the relief of getting out of a girdle after a long, hot day."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Donna Attwood, star of "Ice Capades of '56," says, "Learning to ice skate is like having your portrait painted. It requires a lot of sittings."

Jerry Vale claims his young nephew's idea of a balanced meal is an ice cream cone in each hand. That's earl, brother.

In each other's arms they found a love that defied 5000 years of tradition!

Here's One Actress Who Is Choosey About Roles

HERE TUESDAY

Alvino Rey, long a favorite among the nation's top orchestras, will be featured at the Twin Flame Supper Club, 2727 E. 4th St., Tuesday night.

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Eileen Heckart is in an enviable position in Hollywood. She can afford to be very choosey—which she is.

"I waited a long time for a motion picture role that I thought was right for me," she said. "And this happened to be it."

She referred to the part of Jane Wyman's kind, gentle companion in Warners' "Miracle in the Rain." It represents her film debut.

Miss Heckart came by her reputation in the acting business in an unusual way. She has a fine standing among television actors and actresses although she has appeared in only three important TV shows. She appeared in these only because she evaluated them as fine dramas which would help her.

"Mediocre productions don't interest me," she said. "I have the choice between them and being at home with my husband and children. So if I don't like a part a great deal, I don't take it."

Miss Heckart's attitude toward stage work is the same. She has won awards for her stage performances—as well as for her TV work—which include "Picnic" and "The Bad Seed." Warners took note of these two roles and suggested she try the film role with Miss Wyman.

Miss Heckert is matter-of-fact about her selectivity. In about the last month she has received more than a dozen scripts for Broadway productions. As might be figured, she hasn't accepted one as yet.

"If it sounds as if I'm being superior about the whole thing, that really isn't so," she said. "Look at it this way. I love to act, and I love every branch of acting, but there seems to me to be no sense in taking a role that doesn't interest or stimulate you.

"I'm much, much better off at home as a wife and mother than working at something half-heartedly."

NEW RECORDS AT CITY LIBRARY

The new lp list at the Public Library could be named "comfortable concertos," for on it such favorites as these are found:

Bach, "Concerto No. 2 in F Major" (Edwin Fischer conducting); Beethoven, "The Concerti for Pianoforte and Orchestra" (Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5), Wilhelm Kempff, pianist; Dvorak, "Concerto in B Minor for 'Cello and Orchestra" (Fournier, cello); Mozart, "Concerto in A Major for Clarinet and Orchestra" with "Concerto for Bassoon and Orchestra" and Mozart, "Concerto No. 14 in E Flat Major for Piano and Orchestra" (Friedrich Gulda, pianist).

L. B. DANCER

Jerry Caraco, young Long Beach dancer, who for eight weeks danced in the Harry Bellafonte and Spike Jones shows in the Riviera, Las Vegas, left Saturday for San Francisco where she will dance at Bimbo's. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Caraco, 1121 Ramillo Ave.; is a graduate of Poly High School and attended USC and State College.

State Motor Vehicle Chief Orders Data Confidential

SACRAMENTO (UP) — Paul Mason, state director of motor vehicles, says information in his department's files relating to the physical and mental condition of people who take out drivers licenses should be kept confidential.

"We are convinced that applicants would be reluctant to declare conditions which often determine their ability to drive safely, Mason said in a statement Friday defending an attack on his policies.

The California Records Searchers Assn. said it retained an attorney to file suit against Mason, protesting that his new policy of denying their employes direct access to the files would knock the 15 firms in the association out of business.

* * *

THEY COMPLAINED that a staff of clerks Mason set up to bring out requested files is inadequate and objected to the fact that the clerks blocked out the health data.

Insurance companies and other businesses use the services of the search firms.

Mason said he has asked Atty. Gen. Edmund G. Brown for a legal opinion on the confidential health data policy. The department will be guided by the opinion when it is rendered, Mason said.

Caricature of Nixon Stirs Row

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Muralist Victor Arnautoff Saturday demanded that his caricature of Vice President Richard M. Nixon as "Dick McSmear" be restored to the San Francisco Art Festival's exhibition in Civic Center.

The color lithograph was removed Thursday at the order of Harold Zellerbach, president of the Art Commission.

Zellerbach was not available immediately for comment on Arnautoff's demand.

* * * *

NIXON, who was at Wabash, Ind., for a national plowing contest, told a reporter:

"I wouldn't care to comment about the lithograph."

The lithograph depicted Nixon wearing an eye mask. In his left hand was a pumpkin, apparently a reference to the "pumpkin papers" of Whitaker Chambers in the Alger Hiss perjury case in which Nixon played a part.

In the vice president's right hand was a bucket labeled "smear" and a paint brush dripping red.

* * * *

ZELLERBACH in ordering removal of the lithograph said he defended the "right of artists to uninhibited self expression," but he added that "elected public officials of whatever party should not be the subject of a caricature displayed at an art exhibit financed by all the people."

Felix Rosenthal, the festival art director, said he disagreed with Zellerbach.

"Some of the greatest works of art known to mankind have, at the time they were made, been porvoked by very bitter political struggles," Rosenthal declared.

Arnautoff, a Russian-born immigrant, now teaches at Stanford University.

Vet Trainer on Safari to Catch Vickie

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UP) — A veteran circus trainer arrived here by plane Saturday and asked for an elephant on which to ride into the woods in search of errant Vickie, the misunderstood pachyderm.

Louie Reed, head trainer for Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, arrived at the scene of Vickie's jungle retreat and asked for several hundred loaves of fresh bread for Vickie. He also wanted assurance that police will guarantee him privacy while he tries to lure Vickie from her woodland fortress.

Arrangements were immediately made to bring in one or more elephants from the King Brothers Circus now encamped at nearby Gastonia, N.C.

Army Throws in Towel on Ax Murders

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Army has written off as an unsolved crime the bloody ax slaying of three army officers nearly 10 years ago in a villa on the Danube in Passau, Germany, it was learned Saturday.

The Army, in reply to inquiries, said it has no jurisdiction in the Passau slaying and considers the case closed. The Justice Department said it's out of its hands also.

Maj. Everett Cofran, Washington, D. C., Capt. Adrian Wessler, New Rochelle, N. Y., and Lt. Stanley Rosewater, Omaha, Neb., were hacked to death as they slept in Cofran's quarters in a villa Jan. 7, 1946. The killer then threw gasoline about the scene and burned the villa.

Charles were once filed against former Capt. James M. Leech, Lima, O., but he was never extradited or tried. The U. S. military government in Germany which would have handled the case no longer is in existence.

There has been no official explanation of why the case was not pressed earlier after an exhaustive investigation in 1947. The Army used sodium pentothal "truth serum" and lie detectors on the suspects in an effort to solve the crime.

245,000 Rail Workers Get Wage Offer

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's railroads Saturday offered pay raises and a health-welfare plan to about 245,000 operating employes. One union official called the offer inadequate.

The concessions, in essence, were an acceptance by the carriers of recommendations by a presidential emergency board Aug. 1 for settlement of disputes affecting firemen, enginemen, trainmen and switchmen.

A general raise of 4 cents an hour was proposed, and 4 cents per man hour worked would be paid by the railroads for the health-welfare program.

ONE of the wonders of America that we Yankees take for granted is popcorn.

It is hard to believe that there are millions scattered over the globe who have never seen the little, hard kernels burst into marvelous, fluffy, delectable blobs of white.

But it's true. I've seen newcomers from foreign lands watch a popcorn popping with excitement and fascination.

They've agreed with me in my firm conviction that popcorn is one of the finest things about the U. S. A.

THAT leads us to the story of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Robinson of Artesia, who left by plane the other day for a visit to Europe.

Just before they took off they received an emergency message from Mrs. Yvonne Crowe, a Long Beach woman who had preceded them to France, her native home, and who was visiting with friends at Le Mans.

"PLEASE BRING A PACKAGE OF UNPOPPED POPCORN" cried Mrs. Crowe across the ocean and the continent.

She had friends and relatives in Le Mans who had never seen popcorn pop or popped popcorn.

The Robinson hustled right out to a market for a few cans of the wonderful stuff, stashed them in their luggage, and left for France anticipating a revealing demonstration for the underprivileged French.

A PET project of this dept., and of this newspaper's editorial page, is to get the city about once a year to smooth out the ruffles that develop beside curbs where the wheels and weight of cars have depressed the asphalt.

Recently, mention of this matter was taken up in these pages, as is customary about this time of year. And sure enough, along came the street repairmen in a few days. They worked, among other places, on a stretch of Sixth St., right below my office window.

While we were congratulating ourselves on this little demonstration of the press' power for good, along came some new machines and began tearing up the street to put in a storm drain.

As I write this, a gigantic pounder is knocking holes in the street with a noise that must be resurrecting every fossil within a depth of 100 feet.

BUT if we thought we had it bad here in the midst of this tremendous noise, we just didn't know what was happening down on First St. in the other end of the business district, where a similar storm drain project is under way.

Marvin Tincher, an up and coming young barrister, called up from down there with the claim that the street pounder working there was half again as big as the one making the din in our neigborhood, and its noise was proportionately bigger.

Furthermore, said Tincher, he had been out to examine the horrific machine and had discovered that it is operated by an internal combustion engine with an exhaust pipe and NO MUFFLER.

He figured it was producing several times the volume of din that it would turn out if it was properly equipped with a muffler of the type required on oil well apparatus. He'd been to the law books and had an idea the city ought to put a damper on that bedlam.

If he's got a leg to stand on, we're for him.

TRAFFIC safety in school zones is an important topic of the season, and we're indebted today to Adolf Stone for a different angle on it and one that seems significant.

He says that many mothers and fathers who drive to school and pick up their children endanger youngsters just as much as do motorists who whiz by.

These parents park on school cross-lanes, double-park in front of the school, honk their horns and in other ways create confusion. While picking up their own youngsters, they sometimes jeopardize the lives of others.

So here's a friendly suggestion: If you drive to school to pick up your offspring, why not try always to meet the child at a pre-designated spot, being careful at all times not to permit your own actions to become a traffic hazard.

You coud save a life that way, and it could be your own child's.

Pretty Donna's Back in School

Today blue-eyed Donna is back in Orange Coast College, a sophomore art major dreaming at 18 of a teaching career. She drives a modest new car and has quit her job as waitress. But Donna still relies on a scholarship and part-time modeling to see her through college. Staff Photographer John H. Neagle pictures here the girl who may become California's fairest teacher.

TREED by admirers, Donna Schurr smiles at jests of Spence Rush, Stanley Weaver and Dick Williams.

Burglars Loot 2 Cruisers Here

Two boats were burglarized here Friday night or Saturday morning and a total of $334 in clothing and fishing equipment taken, police reported.

Earl Humphries, 53, of Los Angeles, told officers the door on his 28-foot cabin cruiser was forced open and $222 worth of fishing equipment taken while it was tied up in front of 5719 Corso De Napoli. Arthur J. Frost, 43, of 221 Rivo Alto Canal said his 42-foot cruiser was burglarized of $112.80 worth of clothing while it was moored in front of his home.

The globe fell, hitting him on the head, shoulder and hand before crashing to the floor.

Stanson, who lives at 1630 E. 63rd St., was treated at Magnolia Hospital for cuts over the right eye, on the left shoulder and hand. Fifteen stitches were required to close them.

Giant Planemakers Battle for Jet Line Supremacy

By STEVEN V. DAVID

NEW YORK (AP)—When American-built jet airliners take to the skies some four years from now, whose design will dominate?

That question, the subject of a tense, behind-the-scenes business drama right now, may be answered in the months immediately ahead.

The major contestants are two of the biggest aircraft firms in the world—Douglas Aircraft Co. of Santa Monica, and Boeing Airplane Co. of Seattle.

A prototype of Boeing's 707 Stratoliner already is flying—it made its maiden flight July 15, 1954—and the company estimates it can make its first deliveries late in 1958, with the plane going to work on the airlines in the following year.

Douglas announced in June that it will enter the jet transport field with the DC-8. Douglas plans for an initial test flight by December, 1957, with airline deliveries beginning in 1959.

* * * *

THE QUESTION IS: Which one will get orders big enough to justify setting up a line to produce the planes?

With its present lead, Boeing would appear to be in the favored position. It stresses, too, that it has built more heavy, high-speed jets than any other company. On the other hand, Douglas has built more transport planes than all other manufacturers combined and its planes are the core of many airlines' fleets.

So far, only one airline has stated its intentions. National Airlines says it will buy six Douglas DC-8s. However, the contract hasn't been signed and industry sources say it probably won't be until Douglas gets enough additional orders to go ahead.

Earlier this month, Pan American World Airways sent a team of crack engineering pilots to Seattle to study the 707 in flight. What they find out, Pan Am said, will be used in determining whose jets the airline buys.

Boeing officials say they're ready to go ahead if the firm gets a sizable order from one big airline.

* * * *

THE POTENTIAL customers for the 707 and the DC-8 also include such companies as United, American, Trans World Airlines and Eastern—and foreign airlines as well. All the big domestic lines are studying the matter, uneasily aware that the company which places its orders first will get delivery first—and thereby will gain a big advantage over its competitors.

United Air Lines has said it plans to order 25 jets by the end of this year. President W. A. Patterson said United's major competitors will place orders of similar size, probably with the same manufacturer because this would bring unit costs down. Foreign orders, he added, might bring the total to 180 planes.

* * * *

A JET COSTS a lot of money: The contract drawn up with National involves a price of $4,600,000 each, plus $1,400,000 for spare parts.

Actually, you'd have to look twice to see much difference between the 707 and the DC-8. Both are beautifully sleek ships whose four jet engines are mounted in pods before and just below the wing. One difference is that the 707's wings are swept back more sharply than the DC-8's.

They will be pretty much alike in performance, too, cruising at about 550 miles an hour. Both will be powered by Pratt & Whitney engines. Both will carry from 80 to 125 passengers.

But no matter who wins, you'll get there faster. The flight from Los Angeles to New York will take only 4½ hours. And from New York to Paris will be merely a 6½-hour journey.

LB Plant Eyed in Jet Survey

Douglas Aircraft Saturday was reported to be considering several sites, including the Long Beach plant, for manufacture of the DC-8 jet transport.

However, company officials have announced no decision.

READY FOR ENCAMPMENT

He Fired 'First Gun' in War With Spain

Meet Samuel Perry, 81, credited with firing "the first shot from a gun" in the Spanish-American War. He will be a prominent figure in the national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans opening here today.

As mementoes of his service Perry has: One Navy discharge, dated 1898; three Army discharges, dated 1918, 1923 and 1924.

Perry, of 525 W. 1st St., was publicized in Ripley's "Believe It or Not" cartoon June 4, 1939 for firing "the first gun" in the Spanish conflict and for having been the only man in the Pacific fleet in 1898-98 who was not tattooed.

Ripley made a distinction between broadsides from fixed naval guns operated by crews and the individual action of Perry with a Hotchkiss, the forerunner of the machine-gun. Several engagements following the sinking of the Maine by explosion in February, 1898, had preceded Perry's one-man show.

* * * *

IN JUNE 1898, Samuel Perry was in the crow's nest of the cruiser Charleston a mile off the harbor of the Spanish island of Guam. At the command, "Comfence firing!" he aimed a salvo at the fort from a brand new Hotchkiss capable of shooting 500 rounds a minute.

The transports Sidney, City of Peking and Australia were ordered to fall back out of range and the Charleston blazed away with her 16 guns. The island of Guam fell and Sam Perry had fired the first shot. They took 54 Spanish prisoners, most of them military men, left the civilian governor, and sailed to Manila.

Arriving June 30 at Cavite, the Charleston found six U.S. Navy vessels had sunk 11 Spanish ships in the harbor that day and learned that Dewey was waiting at Manila for orders to take the harbor.

Later in Hong Kong, Sam was paid off with $800 in gold, which he tied in a sack around his neck.

* * * *

FROM 1898 UNTIL 1914 Sam lived the life of an American sailor of fortune in Manila and environs. He tended bar—at the Alhambra, the Silver Dollar and the Saratoga. For a while he ran a coconut plantation 600 miles south of Manila on an island near the place where the monkeys have no tails—Zamboanga. Tiring of that he sold out for 11,500 pesos, which was about half that amount in dollars.

Signing as an oiler on the transport Sheridan, he landed in San Francisco, got a job the same day as a lineman for the Santa Fe. On Nov. 10, 1914, just past 40 years of age, he enlisted in the army as a private, and once more served in Manila and Zamboango. In 1918, his trick done, Sgt. Perry took a day off and reenlisted at Camp John Hay, 170 miles north of Manila.

In 1923 he reenlisted but within a year was discharged under an economy move that retired over-age sergeants. On Jan. 24, 1924, just crowding 50, he got his third army discharge ("conduct and performance excellent.")

City Fathers Attend S. F. Civic Meet

Twenty-six Long Beach officials are en route today by train, auto and plane for the 57th annual conference of the League of California Cities, opening Monday and continuing through Wednesday in San Francisco.

Among the delegates are five City Council members — Gerald Desmond, Mrs. Ruth H. Bach, Lewis D. Reese, John F. Baker and Virgil H. Spongberg. Thus it appeared that for the first time in several years there will be no quorum for the Council's regular meeting Tuesday.

Desmond, acting mayor while Mayor George M. Vermillion is touring Germany, will preside over a panel discussion for mayors of cities over 25,000 at the Tuesday morning session.

* * * *

OTHERS WHO HAVE MADE reservations include Sam E. Vickers, city manager; John C. Spence and John R. Nimocks, deputy city attorneys; Margaret Heartwell, city clerk; Sam M. Roberts, director of finance; H. P. Beckman, city accountant; Frank W. Brejcha, city treasurer-collector; Don Gill, administrative analyst; Dr. I. D. Litwack, city health officer; Frank Sandeman, fire chief; William H. Dovey, police chief, and Dr. Frank Harnett, assistant recreation director.

Still others are Dr. Reuben F. Pieters, member of the Recreation Commission; Mrs. C. H. Culbertson, Mrs. Thurlyne Waite and Aubrey Edwards, members of the Planning Commission; Werner Ruchti, planning director and a director of the league; Leoda Baynham, associate planner; William Feistner, a member of the Park Commission; Jess D. Gilkerson, city engineer, and Sydney Preen, superintendent of sewer maintenance.

* * * *

THE CITY COUNCIL last month authorized $125 expenses for each of the administrative officials and commission members, with "necessary expenses" for councilmen.

General sessions are scheduled for Monday and Wednesday, along with 10 parallel department meetings. Mayor Allen Thompson of Jackson, Miss., president of the American Municipal Assn., will give the principal address Monday. Gov. Goodwin J. Knight will speak at the Wednesday luncheon, the concluding event.

Erle Stanley Gardner, the author of mystery books, will discuss "The Real Cost of Crime" at a luncheon with police chiefs.

Most of the Long Beach delegates are expected to return late Wednesday. Many are accompanied by husbands or wives.

Hidden Burglar Gets $100 in Bar

Herman Lashua, 52, proprietor of a beer tavern at 1966 Orange Ave., reported to police that someone apparently hid in the building after he closed early Saturday morning and then made off with $100 in cash from a cigar box in one of the cupboards.

I, P-T Co-Sponsors Meet of Red Feather Workers

Community Chest campaign chairmen of 925 plants have been invited to Lafayette Hotel Tuesday noon for a luncheon sponsored by nine local businesses.

David E. Root, chairman for the commerce and industry unit of the campaign, announced that Hancock Oil Co., Douglas Aircraft, Buffums', J. C. Penney Co., Ford Motor Co., Mytinger & Casselberry, Independent, Press-Telegram and Procter & Gamble will be luncheon hosts.

* * * *

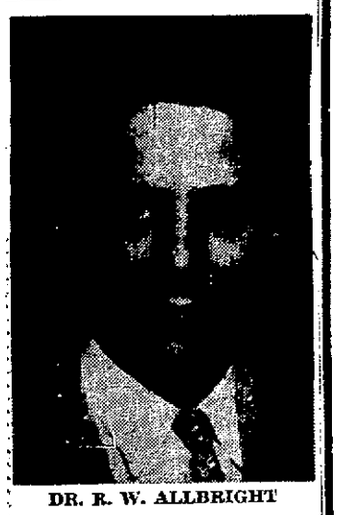

GUESTS WILL SEE the new slides promoting Red Feather services, hear the spot announcements for use over firm loudspeakers and view the promotion materials available for all in-plant drives. William T. J. Harris will be master of ceremonies.

Employe chairmen are expected to organize plant solicitors into teams, arrange for campaign speakers, or show films or slides explaining agency activities.

* * * *

STRESSING the importance of fair-share giving, Paul A. Nichol, campaign chairman, will point out how the new pledge cards not only carry a chart of suggested fair-share gifts for various wage levels but tell what those contributions will buy in health, welfare and youth services.

In-plant drives will begin Sept. 26 with the first report meeting scheduled for Oct. 11.

Union Masons Toil on Day Off--for Free

A group of union craftsmen Saturday spent their day off working—and without pay.

Volunteers from Brick Layers and Stone Masons Union Local No. 13, under leadership of Buz Schappel, business agent, started construction of a cement block fence at the East Long Beach branch of the Boys' Clubs of Long Beach. The clubs are Red Feather services of the Community Chest.

Fathers of club members and branch club council members served as laborers to help the masons. Food was provided by the Mothers' Club under direction of Mrs. Laverne Stoops.

The new fence is needed to protect youngsters playing in outdoor areas at the club, according to Carl Baylor, East branch club director.

Material for the fence was purchased by funds given by the East Long Beach Kiwanis Club, the East Long Beach Improvement Assn. and the Mothers' Club.

Exceptional Children Will Gain Benefits of Classroom Monday

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Janet perches on piano played by Mrs. Gladys Floyd at new training center for exceptional children here. Observing is Mrs. Harold Bierce, executive secretary of California Community Foundation, which donated piano.

A different kind of school will start Monday . . . a school for youngsters who have been denied classroom companionship.

And with the opening, nearly 80 students at the Long Beach Exceptional Children's Foundation will be grateful to hundreds of craftsmen who donated their week-ends, businessmen who donated materials and clubs that gave furnishings for the school building at 4519 E. Stearns St.

A flag from Golden State Auxiliary, VFW, will be raised at opening ceremonies. Mrs. Edith Robinson is chairman of the donor group's Americanism committee.

* * * *

AN EXCEPTIONAL CHILD is one who lacks the ability to learn in the regular classroom. The new training center is designed to supply classroom benefits.

Although most of the group are in the younger age bracket, one pupil 23 years old expected to benefit from the classes.

Because of the learning block, the crowded schools have been unable to provide the necessary facilities.

Disturbed over this lack of facilities for their youngsters, a group of parents four years ago organized the Long Beach Exceptional Children's Foundation.

The group, given free use of the Sciots' Bldg. at 1005 E. Sixth St., opened a training center for exceptional children in September, 1951.

Governed by a 14-member board of directors, the foundation is headed by Mrs. Ray Stevens as president of the training center and William Hart as chairman of the board.

Members of the building committee who guided construction of the new school are Jim Orman, Vincent McDonnell, Jim Nason, Lawrence Eby, Mike Hollub and Mrs. Iris Trafton.

* * * *

AIMS OF THE FOUNDATION are to give youngsters the opportunities for an education suited to their needs and capacity, instruction by people who understand the exceptional child and a chance for the child to live without pity or ridicule.

SPECIAL DESK at Exceptional Children's Training Center is tried by 12-year-old Gary and admired by Mrs. Ray Stevens, foundation president, and 14-year-old Rose.—(Photos by Dick Tolbert.)

On these basic principles, the foundation began to serve the handicapped youngsters. But permanent and expanded quarters were needed.

Land at 4519 E. Stearns St. was obtained for a token fee from the City Water Department and a grant of $25,000 toward construction of the school was made by the city.

* * * *

BUILDING CRAFTSMEN, members of the AFL unions in this area, stepped forward and donated their Saturdays and Sundays to building the school.

Members of the Culinary Alliance union donated their time to feed the workers at lunchtime. Building supply firms made materials available at or below cost. Service clubs came forward with desks and blackboards. Arts and crafts materials were supplied by the Recreation Department.

Teachers trained in the instruction of the exceptional child were employed for the school. They are Austin Shaffer, who will serve as principal and senior class teacher; Suwayne Jennings, intermediate class teacher; Sue Bremmer, kindergarten class, and Alice Mader, nursery class teacher.

* * * *

THE SCHOOL basically is like any other school in its construction. However, it has a radiant heating system in the floor to warm youngsters at play and individual fenced playgrounds for each classroom to separate age groups in their games.

"Stand up" desks assist pupils who should remain on their feet a portion of the day to strengthen their legs and backs.

Teaching the exceptional child will vary according to the capacity of the individual. While some youngsters may progress to the level of reading, others may be limited to drawing pictures.

But, with the modern classroom facilities, each youngster may enjoy the classroom pleasures of fellowship, personality growth and personal appreciation that the average child enjoys.

Sierra Group Plans Supper

Long Beach Group of the Sierra Club will have a pot luck supper at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday in Birney Elementary School, Spring St. and Maine Ave. Films taken by members on summer vacations will be shown. Club activities include hiking, mountain climbing, skiing and ice skating.

McCARRAN ACT TO BE SCRUTINIZED

High Court to Study Curb on Reds

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — Communism in America will be the major issue facing the Supreme Court when it opens its fall-winter term two weeks hence.

Before the summer recess next June, the nine justices are expected to decide the controversial cold war question of how far the government can go in outlawing the American Communist Party and still stay within constitutional bounds. The party has been ordered to register as a subversive group.

At issue is the constitutionality of the McCarran 1950 internal security act which Congress enacted over former President Truman's veto, and perhaps the existence of the Communist Party, as such, in this country.

THE HIGH court will hear Communists' challenge — and the Department of Justice defense — within the next few months. Also awaiting it is a brief filed by more than 350 persons who asked permission to intervene, not on behalf of the Communist Party but to argue that the act represses non-communist Americans.

Under the disputed statute, the Communist Party must register as an organization taking orders from the Kremlin; membership rolls and finances must be thrown open to public scrutiny, and mail and broadcasts must be labelled as propaganda. Front groups face the same restrictions.

* * * *

DIRECTLY and indirectly, communism figures in many other important cases up for action.

One will determine the fate of the three GI's who chose to stay with their Communist captors during the Korean War and then decided to return home. The Army plans to court-martial the three for their conduct in prison camps even though they are now civilians.

A case brought by another veteran, Robert W. Toth of Pittsburgh, directly challenges the right of the military to try civilians in peacetime. If the Supreme Court should uphold Toth (not a turncoat), the three turncoats probably would be freed from military prosecution.

Another measure clamping down on the Reds is scheduled for consideration either this year or next. It is the far more severe 1954 Communist control act which outlaws the Communist Party and makes membership in it a crime if the member is aware of the party's subversive aims.

* * * *

OTHER CASES involving either communism or the national security will test:

Whether states, as well as the federal government, can enact anti-subversive laws.

Whether the government can force a witness to testify in cases involving espionage by granting immunity from prosecution.

Whether New York City has the right to discharge teachers who refused to tell congressional investigators whether they are Communists.

DR. CHAN SAYS: NO LONGER MUST YOU SUFFER FROM High Blood Pressure — Eczema
Diabetes — Bad Heart — Asthma

928 American Ave.
Long Beach, Calif.

For the past two generations, the offices of Dr. Chan, D.C., located at 928 American Avenue, have had outstanding results in treating chronic ailments such as ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, ARTHRITIS, NEURITIS, RHEUMATISM, HIGH OR LOW BLOOD PRESSURE, HEART TROUBLE, STOMACH OR LIVER DISORDERS, KIDNEY OR BLADDER AILMENTS OR A GENERAL RUNDOWN CONDITION. Men and women from all walks of life come to take these treatments because other methods of healing have failed to help them. Many have spent a fortune in seeking cure before they try this simple, effective natural method of Dr Chan. Our patients tell us that they wish they had known of our wonderful treatments sooner so that their suffering could have been avoided.

READ THESE AMAZING TESTIMONIALS!

Dear Mr. Chan: "The day I came to your office with my mother and brother I was about to give up hope of getting rid of my asthma attacks. I spent hundreds of dollars for shots and pills but yet found no results. After reading your advertisement, I tried you for my last resort and was thrilled to find that I responded wonderfully. After the first treatment I was able to breathe normally and could sleep better for the first time in months. Now am feeling fine and hoping others will benefit from my experience with Dr. Chan's Natural Method." Signed, Mrs. Vivian Murray.

To Whom It May Concern: "Five years ago I was badly stricken with neuritis in my shoulders and extremities. My hands and knees were so badly swollen that I could hardly use them. I wasn't able to raise my arms above the shoulders. I was told by several doctors that they have done all they could for me and that I no longer will be able to work again. Finally a friend referred me to try Dr. Chan's Herbal Therapy. After the first week I felt much improved and the fourth week found me walking much easier with the pains in my shoulders disappearing; my hands returned to normal and I had use of them once more. I cannot too highly recommend Dr. Chan to anyone who is ill." Signed, E. H. Irving.

Peron Can't Keep Control, Says Expert

(Editor's note—The writer is an expert on Argentina, having spent 12 years there and knows President Juan D. Peron well.)

By THOMAS R. CURRAN
Copyright, 1955, by the United Press

In the long run President Juan D. Peron of Argentina cannot win.

Even if his troops crush the present rebellion, his power will continue to decline. Somehow and some day in the near future Peron will cease to be the dictator of Argentina.

Every revolt again him—and there have been a half dozen in the last four years—chips away some of the foundation of his power. Eventually the structure will collapse.

* * * *

THE UNDERLYING CAUSE for the repeated uprisings against Peron is simple. The people are tired of being ruled by a dictator. They are tired of being spied on. They are tired of having their mail opened and their telephone lines tapped. They are tired of having friends and relatives arrested without being able to find out where or why they were jailed.

Under Peron Argentina has become a thorough police state. There is no free press. There are no civil liberties. People are arrested on whim and held without trial and the penitentiaries are packed with political prisoners. Boy students as young as 14 years are jailed.

After the Navy rebellion on June 16, Peron conceded in a public speech that he had abolished democratic liberties but said it was for the good of the people.

Peron declared a "state of internal war" four years ago after a revolt against him failed. That measure was never repealed. It permitted the president to take any step against the person or property of any Argentine citizen without being responsible to the courts. Recent announcements of a "state of siege," therefore, mean nothing.

The present Army movement was supposed to coincide with the revolt of the Navy on June 16. The time table was knocked out because bad weather delayed the Navy bombing planes.

* * * *

PERON WAS ELECTED in 1946 on a platform calling for a 20 per cent wage increase to all workers. He won and the 20 per cent increase was made effective. As a result, however, production dropped off because the workers started looking to him for raises and advancement. Those workers, among his strongest supporters, were those whom his late wife, Evita, called "descamisados," or shirtless ones.

Even their fervor has been ebbing a little in recent years.

Another factor in the widespread discontent is the corruption now rampant in Argentina. Most governmental business is done on the basis of bribes. Official permits are allocated not on merit but on the basis of the biggest pay-off.

General Dalmiro Videla Belaguer, who is leading the rebel general, Oscar R. Silva, was director general of the Military Academy when Peron came into power. Later he was ambassador to Madrid.

* * * *

THE PRESENT REBELLION, as in the case of the June 16 revolt, does not seem to be an effort of an ambitious officer trying to set himself up as a dictator to replace Peron. It seems rather to be an expression of the "fed-up" feeling with the Mussolini-type government Peron introduced ten years ago.

Another factor is the economic situation. When Peron took over, the Argentine government had fantastic reserves of blocked sterling and frozen dollars which it had received for wartime food and strategic material shipments. After the war he cashed in on a world hungry for food and vegetable oils, which Argentina possessed in abundance.

Now Argentina is faced with declining production of meat and cereals. Great Britain has abandoned government buying, forcing Argentina into bi-lateral trade deals with many countries, including Russia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. All shipments from Argentina are handled by the government itself which fixes the price it pays to the ranchers and pockets the profit. That has resulted in less produce because the farmers have scant incentive to work and invest.

Peron's fight against the Catholic Church also caused a great wave of resentment.

The attack on the Catholics alienated even some of the president's strongest supporters, who resigned from the party rather than participate in the campaign.

Russ Offer to Give Back Finn Base

MOSCOW (UP)—Premier N. A. Bulganin, apparently recovered from his cold, Saturday offered to return the Soviet-held naval base at Porkkala to its Finnish owners more than 41 years ahead of time.

A foreign office spokesman said Bulganin told Finnish Premier U. K. Kekkonen Russia "finds it possible . . . to eliminate the naval base and withdraw its troops from this territory."

The Russians also offered to renew their 1948 friendship treaty with Finland, which is due to expire "soon," the spokesman said.

Easy Drive Super Road Spans Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) —You soon will be able to roll through the nation's industrial heartland—the 611 miles from Philadelphia to the Ohio-Indiana line—without the bother of red lights or traffic jams.

That becomes possible at the stroke of midnight Friday when the entire Ohio Turnpike opens.

The men who turned the dream of a 241-mile superroad across northern Ohio into the nation's newest turnpike claim it is the safest in the country.

You really will be able to see where you're going as the minimum sight distance is 900 feet. There are no steep hills, because the maximum upgrade is 2 per cent and the maximum downgrade 3.2 per cent. You won't have to slow down from maximum speed limits—65 miles an hour for cars and 55 for trucks when you drive around curves, they're that gentle.

* * * *

YOU'LL BE SO FAR from traffic going the other direction that bright headlights shouldn't bother you. At no point are roadways less than 56 feet apart, and sometimes the distance is 192 feet. This center strip is depressed so it will be next to impossible for a car to bounce across it into your path.

The concrete roadway each way is 24 feet wide. Each has an outside paved shoulder 10 feet wide and an inside one 8 feet wide. Only in emergencies can you park on the shoulders.

Markers you can see at night keep you from running off the road, and the 15 traffic interchanges will be lighted brightly after dark.

The 16 service plazas are opposite each other so there is no temptation for you to make a U-turn to get gas or food—and cause an accident.

* * * *

IT TOOK MORE than six years of planning and construction and lawsuits — plus about 336 million dollars including administrative and financing costs —to lay wide ribbons of concrete over rivers and streams, across swampland and rolling hills, and to build the 611 structures that go into the pike.

The Ohio Turnpike runs past four major cities — Cleveland, Youngstown, Akron and Toledo. The Ohio Turnpike commission expects 14 million vehicles will use it the first year. Revenue for the first year is expected to hit $20,576,000 and rise to $35,403,000 by 1965.

An the commission confidently expects the turnpike will be so well received that it can pay off 326 million dollars in revenue bonds that mature in 1992 some 20 years ahead of time.

That revenue bond issue to finance the construction, by the way, was the largest ever floated in the nation. The commission made millions of dollars by reinvesting bond revenues during the time they weren't needed for construction payments and was able to build its own service plazas.

The toll for the entire 241 miles of the turnpike is $3 for cars and light panel trucks and ranges by vehicle weight up to $30 for the biggest trucks allowed, 90,000 pounds.

If you drive a car across Ohio you have save 3 hours, but if you're a truck driver you get to your destination 5 hours sooner.

Disneyland Hotel Labor Contract Discussions Over

Negotiations for a five-year contract to provide labor for the new 650-room Disneyland Hotel have been completed, Jack Arnold, secretary and business manager of the Long Beach and Orange County Culinary and Hotel Workers Union Local 681, said Saturday.

A staff of more than 200, including cooks, waiters, waitresses, busboys, maids, bartenders and other personnel will be furnished, Arnold added. The negotiations were completed by the Joint Board of Culinary and Hotel Workers and Bartenders with the Caw Corp. and the Wrather Alvarez Hotel Corp.

Scheduled to open soon after the first of the year, the new hotel, adjacent to Disneyland, will feature swimming pools, large cocktail lounges, dining rooms and a huge auditorium.

1,000 Lobbyists Toil in Capital

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — Congressional files revealed Saturday that almost 1,000 individuals, firms, associations, and corporations engaged in lobbying during April to June of this year.

Those complying with congressional lobby registration ranged from the American Medical Association, the American Legion, and the CIO to the National Institute of Diaper Services Inc. and the Clothes Manufacturers of America.

One Reason Why Reds Began Smiling

LONG BEACH Mayor George M. Vermillion, who is touring Germany, sent home a letter the other day which mentioned a point significant in the current relationships between East and West.

Mayor Vermillion reported that an estimated 600 to 700 refugees a day are moving into West Berlin from the Russian-controlled Eastern zone.

The East Germans cross the border to the West even though it means starting life anew in a foreign place, without property and on the charity, at least temporarily, of strangers. It means living for a time under the crowded conditions of refugee centers, and often it means the separation of members of a family for long periods or forever.

Yet they keep coming. The movement has been going on at a varying pace, but steadily, for years.

Why? The answer is that the initial hardships they have been told to expect are less forbidding than the old life under the Reds.

The Communist areas have not been good places to live. They have not been free, and they have not had anywhere near the level of prosperity prevailing in the West.

These movements are part of the whole broad picture of weakness behind the Iron Curtain. The weakness of over-extension, of an economic system that functions badly, of government by force that stirs rebellious instincts. Such things cannot be concealed even by an Iron Curtain. The weakness is of course obvious to the Reds, and they know that it is obvious to us.

When we take this into account, we can understand more clearly what President Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles mean when they say that the new spirit of "friendliness" exuded by the Soviets stems from an advantage the West has.

We talked at the Summit from a position of strength. And it was not military strength alone, though some persons think that is all the phrase means.

It means economic and moral strength as well.

'Our Good Friend, Mr. Eisenhower, Shot 86 Today'

MALCOLM EPLEY

200-Mile Los Angeles Yarn Was Magazine's Idea, Not Poulson's

JUST what did the mayor of Los Angeles say? Was Mayor Norris Poulson of the near-by city misquoted in those stories about Los Angeles eventually encompassing a 200-mile stretch from Santa Barbara to San Diego?

The quotations, carried on national news wires based on a story and an interview with Poulson in the U. S. News and World Report, caused hairs to bristle on civic necks throughout the area mentioned.

EPLEY

Long Beach's own officials let loose with some of the sharpest sarcasm that has emanated from our city hall in a long time. Vice Mayor Gerald Desmond said that the heat must be affecting Poulson.

The picture attributed to Poulson was obviously politically unrealistic. Major cities of Southern California are not going to give up their identity and become a part of Los Angeles.

For example, Long Beach, Los Angeles County's second city in size, has a steadily developing community spirit. It is full of ambition and aggressiveness. There's not a single indication that it will ever give all this up and become just another district of Los Angeles.

Because the statements attributed to Poulson in the news story from Washington, D. C., seemed both brash and rash, we decided to find out a little more about them. We read the magazine article and interview, and we asked the L.A. mayor's office for clarification.

Examination of the magazine material shows that Poulson did not predict a Los Angeles stretching from Santa Barbara to Mexico.

That idea was advanced by an anonymous writer who prepared an article for the U. S. News and World Report to accompany the interview with the L.A. mayor. This article said that "most analysts" believe that the "200-mile Los Angeles" will develop in the next decade.

So, to be fair to Mayor Poulson, it must be admitted that he is not the direct source of the story that aroused resentment and derision. The Associated Press, which seldom makes such mistakes, confused Poulson's interview with the magazine article in these sentences:

"A national news magazine Monday pictured fast-growing Los Angeles as a future metropolitan area stretching 200 miles from Santa Barbara to the Mexican border.

"Mayor Norris Poulson interviewed on the subject predicted the entire area would be designated as Los Angeles and would have a type of government similar to the borough system."

NOT EXACTLY IT

As we have explained, that wasn't exactly what happened.

Now, what does Poulson's office have to say about this?

Alan Williams, Poulson's chief executive assistant, said that Poulson did not speak of a 200-mile Los Angeles.

He does foresee, however, some larger unit of government embracing not all but a certain number of municipal type services, and extending over the metropolitan area of Los Angeles and Orange Counties—what is now officially designated as the Los Angeles-Long Beach Metropolitan Area.

He does not suggest when this would occur—just sometime in the future when the need is apparent. But he believes it inevitable.

By a "larger unit of govment," Poulson did not mean that the mayor of Los Angeles would be mayor of the whole metropolitan area, according to Williams. The larger government would be a new conception embracing previous subdivisions, including the Los Angeles government.

SEES EXTENSION

Poulson sees the new setup as more or less an extension if the idea exemplified by the present area-wide services—like the Metropolitan Water District, the county sanitation districts, and recreation and parks. The idea would be to unify other services in which there is now overlapping and which could be carried on more efficiently and economically under a unified setup. One exception he mentions is police departments—he thinks they should be locally controlled.

In brief, Poulson pictures a rapidly growing, filled in area which some day must integrate itself politically or be lost in a labyrinth of confusion.

This explanation puts the Mayor of Los Angeles in better light, and we're pleased to report it.

But we're not quite ready to drop the matter at that. The article, the interview, and accompanying art, indicate a failure to recognize the size and importance of Long Beach.

In the interview Poulson did not once mention Long Beach, although he had occasion to talk of other cities than Los Angeles in the county and did mention Burbank, Pasadena and Glendale. The county's second largest incorporated city likewise went unmentioned in the separate magazine article.

This oversight was carried to a map of Southern California illustrating the presentation. The map shows location of such cities as Santa Monica, Pasadena, Pomona, Santa Barbara and Oxnard, but omits Long Beach.

The magazine did not forget Long Beach altogether, however. When it needed a picture to show "sun and sea on the doorstep" it used a view of a fellow surf-fishing on the Long Beach strand, with the Villa Riviera, the Wilton and the auditorium in the background. But of course, it did not mention that the view was at Long Beach, because the magazine people evidently haven't heard of Long Beach.

That's something we ought to take care of right away.

Chrysler Comeback Tells What Makes Detroit Tick

DETROIT—In recent months, Detroit has produced a lot of headlines.

Millions of words have been written about Walter Reuther's struggle with the motor giants for a guaranteed annual wage.

There will be more headlines when the "guaranteed annual wage" is put to the test. At this stage, no one can say for sure how this company-paid addition to unemployment insurance will work.

KNIGHT

The skeptical view is that in good times, the guaranteed annual wage is unnecessary and that in bad times it won't last very long.

But in general, the GAW agreements are being accepted philosophically on the theory that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

For business is booming in Detroit, employment is high and the great automotive concerns are engaged in fierce competition.

What makes Detroit the dynamic influence on democratic life, the hothouse for bold innovation, that it is?

Currently the answer is best found in the story of the Chrysler Corporation.

For years, Chrysler had a comfortable 20 per cent of the motor car business. Chrysler executives were facing the future full of confidence in their product and the company's competitive position.

Then began a disturbing development which caught Chrysler unprepared. The public's taste in automobiles, influenced chiefly by Chrysler's competitors, was changing.

General Motors and Ford stylists had set a new trend in motion.

The customers preferred their sleek, beautifully designed cars to Chrysler's comfortable but conservatively styled models.

In 1954, Chrysler's sales dropped almost 50 per cent from the company's former peak and earnings slacked off 75 per cent from the previous year.

Into this picture came Lester Colbert, an ebullient Texan with a Harvard law degree. "Tex" had a rich background of practical experience stemming largely from his successful management of Dodge's huge B-29 plant in Chicago during the war years.

THE COLBERT LEGEND

Colbert assembled a top team of executives, plunged into labor relations, added more than 500 regional, district and zone managers, gave the go-ahead signal to his designers and announced the Chrysler's goal was 20 per cent of the market.

An extensive advertising campaign featured the "Forward Look" in the new restyled Chrysler cars and produced an encouraging 18.1 per cent of the industry's passenger car sales.

Chrysler was on the move.

Last Monday, in company with 500 newspaper, magazine, radio and television newsmen, I attended the preview of the new 1956 cars at the firm's proving grounds.

The new Flight Sweep models are eye-catching, exciting creations with push button drives, added safety devices, improved driving visibility and even hi-fi record players for the gadget lovers.

Instead of riding along on the popularity of the successful 1955 Forward Look, Chrysler spent $175 million to tool up, equip and prepare its plants to produce the 1956 Flight Sweep cars.

TEX'S DAY

As I said before, the story of Chrysler is the answer to "what makes Detroit tick?"

It has been told in depicting the forward surge of the Ford Motor Co. under the progressive management of Henry Ford II and "Ernie" Breech. The fabulous saga of General Motors, raised from a tottering empire to a position of undisputed leadership, exudes the romance of business. The valiant fight being made by the independents in the automobile field is ample testimony that the quality of courage is not limited to the big three.

But today's salute is to "Tex" Colbert and members of the Chrysler organization for their refusal to be counted out when the going was rough.

DAVID LAWRENCE

Party Unity Can Make the Difference in 1956 and Ike Shows He Knows It

WASHINGTON — Something significant has just happened in Republican politics which has been generally overlooked. When President Eisenhower met at Denver with the 48 chairmen of the Republican State Committees throughout the country, he took a step which few occupants of the White House have ever taken fully a year before a presidential campaign begins.

LAWRENCE

The purpose of the conference was not to write slogans or to discuss whether Mr. Eisenhower will run for renomination. It was to encourage a fundamental job of organization which the Republican party has acutely needed.

What the President said about Republican philosophy got more headlines than what he said about door-to-door organization, and yet the fact that Mr. Eisenhower discoursed on it as fully as he did shows conclusively that he has learned and taken to heart the most important lesson in modern politics—intensive organization.

It is natural that there should be some passing comments about how the Eisenhower men have taken over the party and how there is no longer a Taft organization. But that's what always happens with the party in power—the man in the White House becomes the leader and preconvention factionalism tends to disappear.

Looking back as far as 1912, when Woodrow Wilson was elected, there was frequent mention after his inauguration about the ascendant influence by the preconvention supporters he had as opposed to the followers of Speaker Champ Clark, who was the unsuccessful runner-up in the bitterly fought Baltimore convention. It took only a little while for the Wilson group to become dominant in party councils and for party unity to be achieved.

The same thing happened in 1928, when the Hoover supporters quietly invaded the Republican party organizations and took over the control. There is nothing unique, therefore, in seeing the Eisenhower leaders of the party in command. But it would be a mistake to assume that this means any change either way in fundamental philosophy at the grass roots or in ideology. The party organization doesn't go in much for highbrow stuff about progressivism or conservatism or any other "ism." It is interested in control for city or county or state reasons, and the party organization works with the congressional candidates because as a rule the ticket as a whole, and not fragments of it, has to win support at the polls.

BIG WEAKNESS

The big weakness in the Republican party has been the fact that, when the "amateurs" took over in 1952 after Eisenhower was nominated, they had to learn the hard way—through defeat in the congressional elections of 1954—that it doesn't pay to keep alive party grievances or to sharpen cleavages. As a matter of fact, a big danger today to the Republicans is that, despite the outward professions of harmony, the Eisenhower spokesmen have failed to win over the small percentage of zealous persons who think the administration hasn't been vigorous enough on the anti-Communist issue. It is no answer to argue that these voters have no other place to go. In New Jersey, by staying home, they almost defeated Clifford Case, the successful Republican nominess for the Senate, and that's one of the states where they are going to need a lot of harmonizing to get the entire Republican votes to go to the polls next year. Chairman Leonard Hall of the Republican National Committee, in his talk on the "Meet the Press" television feature last Sunday, emphasized that very point, especially in offsetting the strength of the labor organizations.

For the truth is the Democrats today have the benefit of the AFL and CIO organizations combined.

The Republicans are up against a stiff battle, and they know it. The President knows it. "Popularity" with respect to a candidate is an ambiguous word in politics. The more popular or even the more able nominee doesn't always win, especially if the political climate is against him.

The President could win hands down if he ran today but, if there is anything like the economic recession under way such as the country experienced just before the 1954 congressional elections, all the Eisenhower popularity as an individual will not win for him. The practical politicians in both parties know this.

But no matter what the issues, the party organization is absolutely essential. The President's wholehearted recognition of that fact is political news of prime importance.

TOWN MEETING

Forestry Camps

TO THE EDITOR:

We read much in the papers of juvenile delinquency and what is to be done about it, but now one program to combat it which has, I understand, been operating successfully in Los Angeles County for over 25 years is being labeled "cruel and inhuman" since five boys lost their lives fighting the La Habra fire a few weeks ago.

The irony of it is that one of those boys was in the County Forestry Camp because he had participated in the setting of a fire in San Pedro. It seems to me that the good being done in giving boys who have made a mistake, the opportunity of a few months of discipline and useful work in order to make men out of them instead of hoodlums, far outweighs the tragic deaths of these five boys.

Was their death so much more tragic than the deaths of those killed in traffic accidents or in gang fights? At least their parents can be proud and not ashamed of what they were doing when they were killed.

In all the letters decrying the county's use of the boys as fire fighters not one word of praise for his heroism, or sympathy for his family, has been given to the county fire captain who thought enough of those boys and the others who were injured to risk and lose his life in trying to save them.

Fifth Amendment

TO THE EDITOR:

Why are some people still confused about the "Fifth Amendment" issue? There is nothing wrong with the Fifth Amendment. Since it was probably passed for the purpose of being used nothing is wrong with using it.

Those who sympathize with people who are criticized for using the Fifth Amendment when they are asked, "Are you now or were you ever a member of the Communist Party or any other subversive group," are those who do not explain what the only possible true answer could be when the person questioned replies that if he answers he might incriminate himself.

If the honest answer is, "No," then how could a person be incriminated, or convicted of perjury or any other crime if he answers, "No"?

How can the true answer be other than "yes" if a person uses the Fifth Amendment to protect himself when asked that question? Protect from what?

For the good of our country the investigating committees want to know the true answer, and for the good of our country everyone should be glad to give the true answer.

Brief Attire

TO THE EDITOR:

Some old timers of the dark ages say a good deal against the brief attire of young folks today, yet they smoke and drink and in doing so strain on a gnat and swallow a camel.

My parents used to wear underwear the year 'round, and I did the same, but now, except for shorts I wear only one thickness of clothes in summer and, when in my room, go barefooted. People wear less than they used to in summer and are better off for it.

Pauley Hauls Water on Both Shoulders

WASHINGTON — Ed Pauley's entertaining of Vice President Nixon, which created such a furor on the nation's front pages recenlty, shouldn't have caused such a stir at all.

Pauley, multimillionaire oilman, friend of Harry Truman and Democratic fund-raiser, has been playing the other side of the street for some time now. He didn't advertise it, but Big Ed even made a major contribution to the Eisenhower campaign in 1952. So the lavish party for Nixon at Pauley's swank Beverly Hills home merely makes it definite that the oilman is trying to carry water (or oil) on both shoulders.

PEARSON

One backstage factor in wooing Nixon is the fact that Pauley hired young Paull Marshall to be his administrative assistant, replacing Pauley's brother who died last year. And when you consider Paull Marshall's ties with Nixon it's no wonder that Harry Truman is miffed at his old friend Ed Pauley's maneuverings.

For Paull Marshall and Nixon were once New Dealers together—young lawyers in the same OPA; for Roosevelt hired Republicans as well as Democrats. Marshall is the son of arch-Republican John Marshall of West Virginia, long-time Taft booster and Assistant General Attorney under Coolidge.

Today Paull Marshall is the No. 2 man in the Pauley empire in charge of oil, films, television, etc., for the man Truman appointed Undersecretary of the Navy despite the undying opposition of Harold Ickes, who resigned from the cabinet in protest. Ickes claimed that an oilman could not be in charge of Naval oil leases and be raised the conflict-of-interest question which recently caused the exit of Harold Talbott. In the end, Pauley was blocked by the Senate and Truman lost one of his best cabinet officers, all over a man whom Truman has now snubbed by refusing to go to the West Coast.

CIVIL WAR GHOST

On the office wall of Sen. Tom Hennings of Missouri hangs a lithograph which helped inspire the investigation of the Bill of Rights that Hennings began yesterday.

The lithograph is a copy of George C. Bingham's famous Civil War protest against the imposition of loyalty tests at Kansas City, Mo., by Brig. Gen. Thomas Ewing of the Union Army on Aug. 25, 1863. It shows the people of Kansas City rising up against Gen. Ewing's suppression of their civil liberties.

"The artist who painted it," explains Hennings, "dedicated it to the friends of civil liberties. And the general who issued the order later had it come back to haunt him when he ran for Congress from Ohio. It almost defeated him."

MARQUIS CHILDS

Ike's Close Associates in Army Certain He Will Run

WASHINGTON — The guessing game over President Eisenhower's intentions for '56 serves at least to fill in a dead spot in the news. But for some of the President's closest associates during the 40 years of his military career there has never been any doubt of his intentions since a certain meeting of minds in mid-May of this year.

GRUENTHER

At that time Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Supreme Commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces, was in Washington on a liaison mission. He had a long private talk at the White House with his old friend and comrade in arms, the President.

According to close associates of the two men, the President asked Gruenther to remain at his post at SHAPE, the NATO headquarters outside Paris, for another two years. Gruenther, who succeeded Ike as Supreme Commander when the latter flew from Paris to become the Republican candidate for President in June of 1952, might well have expected a reward for his three years in a most-difficult post.

He might, for example, have expected to be named Chief of Staff of the Army. The NATO post is outside the traditional chain of command. While it looms large on the international horizon, it is not the kind of capstone to a successful military career that service men dream of. Moreover, NATO has increasingly been beset with troubles of every kind and description which call for the patience and the skill of a soldier-diplomat.

This was why, the President argued, it was imperative that Gruenther remain at NATO. Not only had he carried on successfully despite the political conflicts with NATO, but he had served for two years as Ike's Chief of Staff at SHAPE beginning in 1951 when President Truman had ordered Gen. Eisenhower to take the Supreme Commander's job. No one else, so the presidential argument went, was qualified to replace Gruenther.

But having put his old and loyal friend on the spot, the President went on to make a promise that put the situation in a much better light for Gruenther. He promised, in effect, that after Gruenther had served two more years at SHAPE he would be brought back to Washington to become Chief of Staff of the Army and perhaps also Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

That would be in August of 1957 and, obviously, if Eisenhower were not President he could not fulfill such a pledge. So ever since this word got around among military associates of the two, they have taken it for granted that the President would seek a second term. For professional military men rank and promotion are the breath of life. This was the conditioning the President had during the 40 years he wore the uniform. Such an assurance would not be given to an old friend lightly.

Basic Rights Under Threat, Probers Told

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citizens from several walks of life told a special Senate committee Saturday the traditional rights and liberties of Americans are being threatened on many fronts.

These threats, spokesmen for 11 groups maintained, range from "a constitutional crisis" involving the status of the Negro to an assertedly-too-frequent disregard by public officials of the people's right to know what their government is doing.

The occasion was a Constitution Day hearing, held in the capitol's old Supreme Court chamber, of the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights. It was the start of an inquiry to determine whether basic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution are being endangered.

Each of the witnesses presented, at the invitation of Chairman Hennings (D-Mo.), a "petition for the redress of grievances." To spotlight the importance of the individual citizen, the witnesses testified from the high bench normally occupied by senators while the lawmakers took seats in the spectator section.

• • • •

ROY WILKINS, executive secretary of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), testified the nation is undergoing "a constitutional crisis" and that "practically throughout the country Negro citizens are denied in varying degrees the full citizenship rights envisioned by the Constitution."

J. R. Wiggins, chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE), said the public's right to know about government, considered "fundamental" and "elementary" in 1789, now is "disregarded all too frequently" by officials. Wiggins is executive editor of the Washington Post and Times Herald.

Other testimony was given on behalf of these groups:

VETERANS—Donald R. Wilson, past national commander of the American Legion, said it is vital that the nation be safeguarded against those who would "destroy the government and enslave the people while proclaiming that the Constitution prohibits their being unmasked."

CHURCHMEN — Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, president of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., said no government body may set itself up as a judge of men's beliefs. Blake said some methods of the House Committee on Un-American Activities are "of grave concern to many of the churches."

LAWYERS—John D. Randall, chairman of the House of Delegates of the American Bar Assn., cautioned against attempting to examine constitutional rights on the basis of "catch phrases" or slogans. He said a mistaken belief may arise that some branches of the government have failed in their duty.

FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS—Luke E. Hart, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, urged the subcommittee not to pay "undue attention" to those who cry out that constitutional rights are being eroded "whenever a perjurer or a traitor is punished for his crime." Hart's statement was presented by Joseph F. Lamb, the Knights' Supreme Secretary.

FARMERS AND BUSINESSMEN—John C. Lynn, legislative director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and A. Boyd Campbell, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, said collective bargaining agreements forcing workers to join unions violate the first amendment's freedom of association guarantee.

Eisenhower Asks Health Aid to Youth

DENVER (UP)—President Eisenhower said Saturday that "we can and should do more than we are now doing to help our young people become physically fit and therefore better qualified, in all respects, to face the requirements of modern life."

The President's statement, made public by the summer White House, was addressed to the 139 leaders in a dozen fields of endeavor who have been invited to the chief executive's two-day conference on physical fitness of American youth here Sept. 27-28. It will be printed in the program for the conference, at which Vice President Richard M. Nixon will preside.

"I very much appeciate your interest," the President said in his greeting. "Your conference deliberations will help guide the efforts of all of us who are interested in improving the total fitness of all our children and youth."

Yankees Roar Into Game Lead

Rizzuto Beaned as Byrne Tops Bosox

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Yankees boosted their margin over the Cleveland Indians to a full game Saturday in the tense American League pennant race by defeating Boston 4-1 on Tommy Byrne's superb four-hit pitching job.

The Detroit Tigers, meanwhile, beat the Indians 3-1 for the second straight time and this left the standings:

	W	L	Pct.	Left
New York ..	90	56	.616	8
Cleveland ...	90	58	.608	6

A third big name, however, was added to the growing Yankee injury list. Phil Rizzuto, veteran shortstop, was hit in the back of his plastic head helmet by one of George Susce's pitches in the fourth. The helmet split open and Rizzuto was knocked unconscious, but Dr. Sidney Gaynor, the club physician, said the injury did not appear too serious and Rizzuto may even be able to play today when he is being showered with presents by fans.

★ ★ ★ ★

MICKEY MANTLE and Bill Skowron, two other Yankee stalwarts, are on the bench with injuries.

Mantle pulled the hamstring muscle in his right thigh Friday night beating out a bunt and Dr. Gaynor said he would be out for five days and possibly for all the rest of the season. Skowron sustained a broken left big toe in batting practice, but should be able to pinch hit in a day or so.

The game ended on a note of high drama for the crowd of 40,942. Going into the ninth three runs behind, the Red Sox opened up on Byrne. Norm Zauchin singled to left, and Grady Hatton bounced a single off Joe Collins' glove. With two out, Billy Consolo walked, filling the bases. The veteran Eddie Joost then came in to pinch hit for Billy Goodman. He protested loudly at Byrne's two successive strikes, and then flied to Irv Noren in center to end matters.

The Yankees jumped into a two-run lead in the first inning when Rizzuto and Cerv singled, and then worked a double steal. Gil McDougald's sacrifice fly brought Rizzuto home and Hank Bauer's single scored Cerv.

THE RED SOX presented the Yankees with a free run in the third when Bill Henry, the Boston starting and losing pitcher, walked Yogi Berra, Bauer, and Elston Howard. He was removed for Susce who walked Billy Martin on a 3-1 pitch to force in a run.

Jackie Jensen scored the single Boston run when he belted his 23rd homer of the season in the sixth with two out and the bases empty.

This only served to balance off the homer the Yankees' Joe Collins hit in the fifth, his 13th.

Byrne, who boosted his season's record to 16-4, was in command all the way except for the danger-loaded ninth.

35,051 See SC in TD Parade

By DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES COLISEUM — A slow-starting University of Southern California grid machine spotted Washington State a 6-0 lead in the first five minutes of play, then came to life to pile up 50 points and a convincing 50-12 victory here Saturday before 35,051 fans.

Despite exceptionally sloppy play on occasions, the Trojans displayed tremendous potential and great raw strength in easily whipping what has been touted as the best team in the Pacific Northwest this season.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE WHOLE Trojan bench saw action as Coach Jess Hill substituted freely against the inadequate Cougar club.

Recovering quickly after the shock of yielding a touchdown so early, the Trojans first knotted the count and then moved into a 13-6 first quarter lead. After that they steadily pulled away from the Cougars.

Jon Arnett led the scoring parade with a pair of touchdowns, one on a 19-yard sweep around end and the other on a pass from quarterback Ellsworth Kissinger.

Other Trojans who got into the scoring act with one touchdown each were Gordon Duvall, C. R. Roberts, Leon Clarke, Doug Kranz . . . and left tackle George Belotti.

★ ★ ★ ★

BELOTTI'S SCORE will go down as one of the oddities of the year . . . a tackle returning a punt for a touchdown.

The Trojans were leading 29-6 in the third period when Belotti caught everyone by surprise, grabbing a short Cougar kick on the first bounce and rumbling 35 yards to a touchdown behind a couple of murderous key blocks by his mates.

The otherwise dull Pacific Coast Conference opener could have produced two other unusual developments, but they failed to materialize.

Strangely enough, both incidents came on the same play.

★ ★ ★ ★

INSTEAD OF punting on the first play of the second quarter, the Cougars decided to try instead for a field goal from the Trojan 46 . . . a distance of 56 yards to the goal posts.

However, the placement by Frank Sarno fell far short of its target and was fielded on the first bounce by Arnett, three yards behind the Trojan goal line.

Arnett then had the unique opportunity of returning a field goal attempt 103 yards for a touchdown . . . but just as it looked like he might spring loose, he was tripped up on the SC 23-yard line by a lunging tackle.

From there the Trojans drove 62 yards to the Cougar 15 to get in position for Bob Isaacson to kick a field goal for SC from the 22-yard line.

Six interceptions by the alert Trojan secondary played a major role in the 50-12 score.

★ ★ ★ ★

ONE OF THE interceptions accounted directly for a touchdown, two more set the stage for a pair of Trojan scores, while a fourth—a spectacular one-handed grab by Jimmy Contratto—kept the Cougars from scoring what looked like a cinch TD.

The Trojans did better with Washington State's aerial game than they did their own. They completed four of their own pitches for 72 yards and two touchdowns, while they returned the six Cougar passes 100 yards.

The Cougars struck for their first touchdown the first time they got the ball.

★ ★ ★ ★

THEY WENT 41 yards in six plays with quarterback Bob Iverson setting the stage for the score with a 28-yard dash to the Troy two-yard line and a couple of plays later "sneaking" over at 4:52 of the initial stanza. Tom Gunnari's kick was wide.

A chain of three quick developments enabled SC to even it up at 6-6 three and one-half minutes later.

First, Arnett returned the kickoff 38 yards to the SC 49.

Halfback Jim Hagerty then stepped out of bounds on the Washington State two-yard line as he fielded Jim Contratto's punt, and Iverson promptly fumbled and tackle Dick Enright recovered on the Cougar five.

On the very first play from that point, Duvall swept around left end for the touchdown at 8:16. Don Hickman's kick was wide.

★ ★ ★ ★

THE TROJANS boomed into the lead a couple of minutes later after Clarke partially deflected a Cougar punt, which rolled out of bounds on the Washington State 39 after carrying only 19 yards.

A holding penalty against the Cougars set the stage for Kissinger's 22-yard scoring pass to Arnett off the buck lateral series at 10:48. Hickman's kick was good this time to make it 13-6.

Maryland Stops Tiger Surge, 13-12

COLUMBIA, Mo. (U.P.)—Mighty Maryland struck for two early touchdowns by Ed Vered and Bill Walker then held off a determined Missouri second half rally for a 13-12 win Saturday before 18,000 fans in 92 degree weather.

Even though they lost, the game was sweet revenge for Missouri, which got trampled 73-13 by Maryland last Thanksgiving Day.

The game could easily have ended in a tie, but guard Charley Mehrer appeared nervous on his first Missouri conversion attempt and kicked too early, the ball dribbling through the Maryland line.

Maryland had been tabbed as much as a 20-point favorite. The Terps, rated one of the nation's outstanding teams, meet UCLA, favored to retain its No. 1 national ranking of 1954, next Saturday.

Maryland scored the first time it got the ball after Missouri picked up two first downs, one on two straight off-side penalties against Maryland. Vered sparked the 63-yard drive, which came mostly on short plunges by Vered, halfback Jack Healy and fullback Fred Hamilton.

★ ★ ★ ★

VERED SCAMPERED 14 yards for the touchdown. Fullback Bob Laughery kicked the game's only conversion.

Maryland scored again early in the second period as quarterback Frank Tamburello passed 22 yards to Walker.

The Terps' other big threat came late in the first half when Bob Pelligrini intercepted Jim Hunter's pass on Missouri's 33. Maryland stalled, however, and Missouri took over.

That gave Maryland a 13-0 half-time lead, but the brilliant play of Hunter, a 191-pound junior, got the Tigers back into the game in the last half.

Hunter, converted from half, guided Missouri to both its touchdowns and got able assists from halfback Jerry Curtright, son of former Chicago White Sox outfielder Guy Curtright.

★ ★ ★ ★

CURTRIGHT set up the first Missouri tally when he intercepted a pass from Lynn Beightol and ran it back 28 yards to the Maryland 25. Hunter streaked 14 yards in the drive, then passed nine yards to halfback Sonny Stringer for the touchdown.

In the final period, Missouri started from its own 35 and drove down the field with the tally coming on a 15-yard pass from Hunter to end Harold Bernine. Hunter set up the touchdown pass with a nine-yard toss to half Bill Rice.

Indians Suffer 3-1 Loss

CLEVELAND (AP) — Al Rosen wore the goat's horns Saturday and the Detroit Tigers, for the second time in less than 24 hours, defeated Cleveland 3-1 to dump the despairing Indians a full game behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

Cleveland's third successive defeat together with New York's 4-1 triumph over Boston put the Indians two games behind in the all-important loss column.

Rosen, in the throes of a dismal batting slump, left five runners on base, four of them in scoring position, in two successive times at bat. He also committed a glaring error which led to Detroit's tie-breaking run in the fifth inning.

★ ★ ★ ★

IN ALL, the Indians stranded 15 baserunners as time and again, Frank Lary, a gritty little righthander with a big curveball, halted them in their tracks with men in scoring position.

Al Kaline, hitless in his last 15 times at bat before Saturday's game, was the Tiger batting star. He drove in two runs and scored the other.

Bob Lemon, Cleveland's 18-game winner, was charged with his ninth defeat.

AS TRIBE BITES DUST

So Quiet in Clubhouse You Could Hear Pennant Drop!

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland clubhouse was so quiet you could hear the pennant drop.

The players acted as if it were all over—and appeared resigned to it.

Here and there, a player growled half-heartedly that the blankety-blank Yankees hadn't won it yet and tried to cheer the others up. But hardly anybody paid any attention to him.

Such cries as "we'll get 'em tomorrow," and "it's not over yet," were greeted with blank stares. And even those remarks sounded hollow and uncertain.

Al Lopez, off by himself, had little to say. A wonderful loser as well as a gracious winner, the Cleveland pilot plainly showed the suffering he's gone through during those last three games, all agonizingly narrow defeats.

"Sometimes I wonder whether it's worth it," he mused. "What's the use of all the honor, and the glory and the money, if it's going to kill you.

"Well," he concluded, cracking his lips in what was meant to be a smile. "It's really not over yet. They've still got two more games to play than we have. Anything can happen, you know."

Once Over Lightly
by DAVE LEWIS

It has been a foregone conclusion for many months — in fact, since early last football season—that Ronnie Knox would be UCLA's No. 1 tailback this year.

It had to be that way.

While the other tailback candidates could turn in a fair job, it was obvious that the Bruins needed a stronger all-around man to engineer the UCLA offense than Doug Bradley, Sam Brown or Gerry McDougall.

Ronnie has been Red Sanders' "boy" from the very start of the "Knox incident" when UCLA inherited the talented back from its sister campus at Berkeley.

But Knox had to be brought along slowly.

The cloud under which he entered UCLA first had to be partly dissipated before turning Ronnie loose.

Thus, a sort of "pigskin curtain" was thrown around him. Knox has been soft-pedaled for more than a year now.

Shrewd Red Sanders has been protecting him from public opinion and criticism, trying to make it a little easier for one of the most controversial figures in college football history.

THE "KNOX INCIDENT" all began after Ronnie completed his freshman season at the University of California, which outbid dozens of other colleges interested in the "T" quarterback and passing wizard from Santa Monica High's 1952 CIF championship club.

He quit Berkeley in a huff, claiming Cal had not lived up to its promises.

Harvey Knox, Ronnie's celebrated stepfather and advisor, entered the picture and soon charges and countercharges began making the sports pages look like an issue of "Confidential."

The decision of Harvey and Ronnie for the latter to enroll at the southern branch of California—UCLA—added even more fuel to the messy situation.

Ronnie lost a year of eligibility by transferring to UCLA. He had to sit out the 1954 campaign, which leaves him only this season and next to play varsity ball.

Knox began learning the UCLA system the hard way last year, playing with the Bruin redshirts — ineligibles — whose main duty is to serve as cannon fodder for the varsity.

It is heard that the rugged 1954 Bruin crew took keen delight in giving the widely-publicized Knox a good going over . . . but he soon earned their respect.

It was obvious from the first that here was a boy who definitely had everything that goes to make a star football player.

And it was in those bone-bruising sessions between the varsity and redshirts that Sanders and his coaching staff were convinced that Knox was the key man in their 1955 plans.

Big question in most everyone's minds was whether or not Ronnie could handle the tailback spot in the single wing since most of his activity had been in the role of a "T" quarterback.

KNOX DEMONSTRATED to everyone Friday night that the single wing was right down his alley . . . a fact which has been known by the Bruin coaching staff for a year, but which has not been overly broadcast under Sanders' plan to keep Ronnie in the background as much as possible until he proved himself under fire.

Ronnie declared after Friday night's go with Texas A&M that he was completely relaxed in his first start, but admitted that "this game has been a big strain on me for several weeks.

"There's no use denying that I wasn't worried, after all I was on a really big spot. If I didn't make a good showing, I would have left myself wide open for a real pounding from fans and sports writers. The criticism would undoubtedly have hurt me in future games —shaken my confidence.

"Getting off to a good start (he passed for all three Bruin touchdowns in the 21-0 conquest of the Aggies) sure took a big load off me. I'm glad to get this one out of the way.

"Now I feel people won't be so critical of me from here on out even if I do have the misfortune of having a bad day.

"The fellows on the team have really been wonderful and have helped me a lot."

Sanders was particularly high in his praise for Knox, which is very unusual for the normally conservative Bruin mentor.

RED SAYS KNOX has a chance to be the best tailback the Bruins have ever had . . . "better, in time, than even Paul Cameron."

Sanders added that he's never seen a player turn in a cooler game in his first varsity start than Knox.

"He's not only the best passer I've ever had at either UCLA or Vanderbilt, but Knox runs hard . . . and hard runners can always gain yardage in our offense. What's more, Ronnie is real tough. Yes, he's real gifted," Red delcared.

Bear Bryant, Texas A&M mentor, said "amen" to that. "Knox will be a great player under the capable handling of Sanders."

Meanwhile, Sanders frankly admitted the Bruins far exceeded expectations in their more or less routine victory over the Aggies.

The Bruins methodically cut down the Texans while definitely playing "under wraps."

It was a perfect opener for the Bruins . . . a fairly rugged test against pretty much the same type of offense they'll meet

Burk's TD Pitches Top Rams, 35-21

DENVER (AP)—Quarterback Adrain Burk pitched three scoring passes to end Pete Pihos and flipped another to halfback Bobby Walston in guiding the Philadelphia Eagles to a 35-21 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in a professional exhibition football game Saturday night.

It was the sixth straight exhibition for the Eagles, who have lost only once to Los Angeles in 17 games.

The Rams were without the services of their No. 1 quarterback, Norm Van Brocklin, who appeared only in punting roles. His replacement, Billy Wade, connected with halfback Ron Waller on a 58-yard pass-run play and also fired an 11-yard scoring pass to end Bob Boyd.

The Eagles trailed only once, 14-7, early in the second period when the Rams' Tank Younger plunged two yards after a 56-yard pass play from Wade to Waller.

Les Richter missed a 25-yard field goal for Los Angeles in the first period, and his 40-yard attempt in the second was partially blocked. The Rams' Tom Fears missed a 40-yard fourth period attempt.

Burk sent the Eagles ahead to stay on his third scoring pass to Pihos, a two-yard shot in the third period.

Halfback Harold Giancanelli went 29 yards on a pitchout shortly before the final gun to ice it for Philadelphia.

The game almost developed into a brawl in the final half with the Eagles' Bill Stribling and the Rams' Larry Morris being ousted at one point for fighting.

MASTERFUL GOLF

Ward Gains Amateur Crown With 9-8 Win

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Harvie Ward's nine-year quest for the National Amateur golf championship ended in success Saturday when the young North Carolinian, near flawless and losing only one hole, smothered Philadelphia's William Hyndmann III, 9 and 8, in one of the worst shellackings in the tournament's history.

Hyndmann, a 39-year-old insurance executive little known outside his own district, was eight-down at the end of the morning round when Ward, his irons blazing, shot around the James River course in 66, four under par.

Ward, rated by his contemporaries as the finest amateur player in the world, lived up to this reputation with a brilliant exhibition of precision golf which would have done justice to the best of the pros.

He didn't miss a fairway on his drives and only three of his approaches failed to find the green in the orthodox number of shots. He had only one bogey, five birdies and a relentless string of steady pars over a long, 6,713-yard course which plays nearer a par 72 than its listed 70.

Rote Leads Packers Over Cardinals, 37-28

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The Green Bay Packers ended a four-game losing streak at the expense of the Chicago Cardinals Saturday night as Tobin Rote fired two touchdown passes of 76 and 72 yards in the final quarter of the Shrine benefit exhibition football game for a 37-28 win.

The Cards took a 21-20 lead before a minute was gone in the fourth period, the score culminating a drive that started in the third.

But Rote, the Packers' veteran signal caller, took over and flipped long paydirt passes to Gary Knafelc and Billy Howton. The first ate up 76 yards, while the aerial to Howton covered 72. Those two passes put the Packers ahead, 34-21.

The cards scored once more on an eight-yard end sweep by quarterback Lamar McHan, but Rote had put the ball game out of the Cards' reach. The Packers added three more points on a field goal by Fred Cone for insurance.

The Packers outplayed the Cardinals in both rushing and passing in handing the Chicagoans their third loss of the exhibition season against two wins.

Texas Tech Tops Texas in Stunner

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—Halfback Don Schmidt scored two touchdowns, one on a brilliant 79-yard run, to lead Texas Tech to a stunning 20-14 upset victory Saturday night over the University of Texas before 47,000 fans.

The Red Raiders from West Texas took charge early in the game, scoring their first marker with less than five minutes gone in the first period, to hand Texas the first home season opener loss in its history.

Playing before the largest crowd ever to attend a University of Texas home season opener, Tech capitalized on a Texas fumble early in the opening quarter, and Schmidt, a hard-running, 185-pound back, bounced over from the one to score.

Late in the second quarter, Schmidt ran 79 yards to give Tech a two-touchdown bulge.

Texas narrowed the margin when sophomore quarterback Walter Fondren tallied from three yards on the payoff end of a 64-yard march, but Tech bounced back with what turned out to be the deciding touchdown late in the final period.

'New Look' Beavers Roll to 33-0 Win

CORVALIS, Ore. (UP)—Oregon State, showing its "new look" single-wing offense for the first time under new head coach Tommy Prothro, romped to a 33-0 victory over Brigham Young Saturday at Parker Stadium.

Brigham Young's one good scoring chance came near the end of the second period on a 60-yard drive to the Oregon State two-yard line. But the threat ended when quarterback Carroll Johnston fumbled and Oregon State recovered.

Sophomores accounted for, or figured in, four of Oregon State's touchdowns. Sam Wesley, a 160-pound halfback from Dallas, Tex., scored twice, once in the first period on a nine-yard reverse and again on the opening play of the second quarter on a 44-yard gallop.

Joe Francis, sophomore halfback from Honolulu, ran 25 yards for one touchdown and passed nine yards to fullback Arlo Wenstrand for another.

DUPAS NABS EASY VICTORY

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — Ralph Dupas danced his way to a 10-round unanimous decision over Mickey Northup Saturday night in the main event at Hollywood Legion Stadium.

Dupas, 137½, New Orleans, La., won every round from Northup, 140, Los Angeles. There were no knockdowns in the fight as Dupas, No. 2 ranking lightweight contender, danced in and out during each round, hitting Northup, a recently discharged Korean veteran, with sharp uppercuts.

Referee Dynamite Jackson scored the bout 58-52, while Judges James Wallace and George Latka tallied it 57-53 and 56-54, respectively.

Hawks Close Season With 13-1 Victory

The Long Beach Nitehawks wound up one of the most successful seasons in their long, win-filled history Saturday night by trimming the service-champion Santa Ana Marines, 13-1, before 800 fans at Park Ave. Field.

Lucky Humiston got the Hawks scoring parade started in the second inning by tripling home Bill Hull. Hull banged out a three-run double to stretch the count in the third and hits by Larry Silvas, Humiston, Stan White and Cleo Goyette paced a five-run fourth.

Manager Joe Rodgers made his season's debut as a player for his national champions by taking over for Jones at shortstop late in the game. The cagey pilot garnered a single in two official trips. Pitcher Jack Randall homered for the Hawks in the seventh.

101-Yard Run as Florida Takes 20-14 Decision

GAINESVILE, Fla. (AP)—Jackie Simpson scooted 101 yards with an intercepted pass and went 46 yards on another scoring run as Florida defeated Mississippi State 20-14 in a Southeastern Conference opener Saturday.

Florida was throttled in the first half, but four minutes into the third quarter Simpson cut off his right guard, turned sharply and out-maneuvered the entire State secondary in the 46-yard jaunt to the goal.

Long runs of 48 yards by Jim Rountree and 22 by Bobby Lance gave Florida a 20-7 lead and they needed it for State came back with a Bill Stanton passing attack that scored in the closing minutes.

3,297 See Last Game of Series

By DOUG MILES

Quarterbacks Jack Price and O'Jay Bourgeois threw three touchdown passes between them while fullback Stu Farber scored twice to lead a surprisingly-potent Alumni eleven to an imposing 32-6 victory over the disorganized Long Beach City College varsity Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium in the final game of the 17-year-old series.

Farber startled the 3,297 fans on the fifth play of the game when he broke through left tackle and outsped Viking defenders for a 45-yard touchdown run.

Long Beach City College hosts powerful Modesto JC next Saturday night in a non-conference clash at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Doug Andreasen, City College's lineman star of the night, blocked Ben Aoki's conversion try to leave it 6-0 with three minutes gone.

* * * *

PRICE, WHO spearheaded the 1950 Junior Rose Bowl champions, hit Aoki on a 49-yard pass play late in the first quarter for the Alumni's second touchdown. Aoki's conversion was wide.

Farber, who rolled up 90 yards in 10 carries, scored his second and the Alumni's third touchdown on a six-yard sweep around left end midway in the second quarter. Aoki's kick was good, giving the Alumni a 19-0 halftime lead.

Midway in the third quarter the Alumni marched to the five with two to go for a first down. Jack Brannen bucked left guard for four to the one but a 15-yard penalty and eight-yard loss put the ball back on the 24.

* * * *

BOURGEOIS, with enough time to knit a football jersey finally saw Brannen shake loose and hit the scatback with a perfect aerial for the Alumni's fourth touchdown.

With a little less than two minutes remaining in the third quarter, City College seemed to show some offensive punch with Dave Proctor picking up three and then one yard.

Little Lanny Rupp, reserve Viking quarterback, hit end Henry Frese's outstretched hands for 39 yards. But as Frese attempted to bring the ball in, it squirted out of his hands and was recovered by a host of Alumni players on their own 16.

* * * *

BOURGEOIS connected with Jack Swan for nine and fullback Glen Briggs dived over guard for two. Bourgeois, who by this time could have knitted 11 jerseys with the protection he was getting, completed a 73-yard pass play to Brannen for the final Alumni touchdown. Bourgeois converted to make it 32-0.

After an exchange of punts the Alumni took over again, this time on their own six. With only 54 seconds remaining, Bourgeois attempted a hook pass that was intercepted by Andreasen and run back to the 14.

Brooks, needing a touchdown to halt the most lopsided score in the series, (Alumni defeated the Vikes, 57-25, last year), called a button hook to left end P. J. Robinson, who took the pass on the five and danced into the end zone.

With four seconds left, the burly Alumni line that had been spearheaded by Bob Angle, Leroy Hoffman, Bob Keller and Wilbur Necochea, broke through to block Andreasen's conversion.

* * * *

CITY COLLEGE fumbled eight times, recovering only two of the bobbles. Poor backfield timing and a weak defensive secondary against the pinpoint passing of Price and Bourgeois, who completed 10 out of 19 for 243 yards, logged the Vikes throughout the decisive beating.

Dick Romo led the Vike's backs, running back kickoffs 38 and 32 yards and a punt 49 yards, while picking up 4.1 yards per scrimmage carry.

Brannen, besides catching two touchdown passes, carried nine times for 75 yards. Aoki caught three passes for 101 yards.

In special halftime contests featuring local prep gridders, St. Anthony's Eddie Rodriguez took the lion's share of the honors. The baseball pitching star won the football pass for distance with a throw of 64 yards and the kicking with a boot of 58 yards. The 50-yard dash was won by Benny Sexton of Jordan over Kenny Jones of Poly and Vic Gauspohl of St. Anthony's.

Oregon Gains Vengeance Over Scrappy Utah, 14-13

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Oregon edged Utah by the margin of a point after touchdown, 14-13, Saturday night to avenge a 7-6 loss to the Utes in an intersectional game last year.

The Ducks scored first. Halfback Jim Shanley threaded his way 28 yards around left end for the score early in the second period.

After a series of pass interceptions and fumbles which went both ways, the scrappy Utes started a drive after recovering a fumble on their own 43. Halfback Stewart Vaughan went the final nine yards through center.

Oregon fullback Jack Morris carried the second half kickoff 43 yards to his own 46. The Ducks pounded straight down the field, with Morris shoving through center five yards for the score. He won the game by booting both conversions.

Utah's final touchdown was by halfback Herb Naaken, who went five yards around right end after he and fullback Lou Mele had carried on repeated plunges from Utah's 35.

BROOKLYN (AP) — Two home runs, including Willie Mays' 47th of the season, provided the New York Giants with the margin of victory Saturday as they whipped the National League pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-5.

Mays, setting the pace in the league's home run department, also drove home two more runs on a single and a force out. Bobby Hofman also homered for the Giants.

Carl Furillo homered for the champions, sending in two runs in the third off Jim Hearn. The Dodgers drove Hearn from the mound in a three-run third but were throttled the remainder of the way by Paul Giel.

Rocky 3-1 Pick Over Ancient Archie

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time since the days of Joe Louis, there is a "big fight" tang in the fall air as Rocky Marciano prepares to defend his heavyweight title against Archie Moore Tuesday night in Yankee Stadium.

Although Marciano, unbeaten in 48 fights, remains a strong 3-1 favorite to whip the long frustrated challenger, all signs point to a roaring crowd of 50,000 and a gate of over $750,000 for the 15-round match.

The latest call down on the odds also made it 2-1 that Marciano will win by a knockout and 6-1 that Moore will not win by a knockout.

With all due respect to Roland LaStarza, Ezzard Charles and Don Cockell, the public never gave any of Rocky's previous challengers a chance to win. Ever since the September night in 1952 when he got off the floor to knock out Jersey Joe Walcott and win the title, Rocky has been head and shoulders above the division.

The carefully planned publicity campaign for Moore, followed by his victory over Nino Valdes and his knockout of Bobo Olson in three rounds, has cast the 38-year-old ring gypsy in the role of a martyr. Encouraged by the delaying tactics of Al Weill, the champion's manager, people began to believe that Marciano was ducking Moore. A Marciano-Moore match became a "must."

Not since Louis fought his return watch with Walcott or his second bout with Billy Conn has there been such tremendous interest in a heavyweight match. The International Boxing Club reports an advance sale of $500,000.

Theater television really comes of age for this bout with 128 theaters in 92 cities piping the picture to their audiences over a closed circuit TV. There will be no home TV. Theater television network officials indicate they will gross $1,000,000.

On the basis of a 40-20 percentage split for the entire receipts, Marciano should drag down about $400,000 and Moore about $200,000 for the night's work.

The fight will be heard on radio over ABC.

Marciano has trained at Grossinger, N. Y. as usual, with his customary devotion to condition. He hasn't boxed as many rounds as he has for some fights, about 120 in all.

In contrast to Marciano's rather quiet camp, Moore has been sounding off like a carnival pitchman at his retreat in North Adams, Mass., where he has predicted he'll win by a knockout in 10 rounds.

Archie the gypsy will be bucking a jinx as well as Marciano's fists. No light-heavy champ ever moved on to the heavy title although seven tried. Bob Fitzsimmons held both crowns, in fact three in all, but he went from middle to heavy and then back to light-heavy.

Marciano, larger than Moore in most of the ring measurements, gives away 7½ inches in reach—68½ inches to 75½ inches. In theory this gives Moore a chance to spear at long range, pick his spots and drop in his sharp punches. But Rocky is a swarming, brawling type who bulls in with his head, arms and elbows. Archie loves to stand in one spot, turning in mid ring while an opponent forces the action. When he finds his opening, he lets go.

In 48 fights Marciano has won every one, 42 by knockouts. He has been down only once, in the first round of his first scrap with Walcott. Moore has a 120-19-5 record for 144 bouts dating back to 1936. He has knocked out 82 opponents and has been stopped four times by Jimmy Bivins, Eddie Booker, Ezzard Charles and Len Morrow.

The Moore camp, brimming with confidence, calls attention to the fact that Archie beat Nino Valdes in 15 rounds in May and Marciano needed nine rounds to stop Don Cockell at San Francisco, May 16. Their clincher is Valdes' knockout of Cockell in London last week.

This will be Marciano's sixth defense and his second of 1955. He expects to weigh 187 pounds, about a pound more than Archie at the Tuesday noon weigh-in.

Indians Display Mid-Season Form, Rout COP, 33-14

PALO ALTO (UP) — Coach Chuck Taylor's Stanford Indians, presenting a diversified running and passing attack that displayed mid-season form, walloped College of Pacific, 33-14, Saturday in the opening game of the season.

With quarterback Jerry Gustafson passing for two touchdowns and fullback Bill Tarr plunging for two more, the Indians roared back after spotting COP a touchdown in the first minutes of play to take 14-7 halftime lead before 29,000 fans.

The two Pacific touchdowns came in lightning thrusts at the opening of the game and at the opening of the third period.

The first came when halfback Ken Swearingen cut through center and went 61 yards to score. Then at the start of the second half, end A. D. Williams stole the ball from Stanford's Ernie Dorn on the Indian 20 and raced it back for a touchdown.

* * * *

THE ONLY OTHER time the Tigers threatened came two minutes from the end of the game when Stanford held on its own three.

The Tiger team was hurt defensively early in the game when its great tackle, John Nisby, was kicked out of the contest for "unsportsmanlike conduct." A brawl involving COP's Bob Lee and Stanford's fine end, John Stewart, in the fourth quarter also ended with those two on the sidelines.

Tarr got the first of his two touchdowns in the first period on a four-yard plunge after a 69-yard drive that was helped along with 25 yards in penalties against the Tigers. Stanford went ahead in the second quarter as Tarr scored from the five on a pitchout from quarterback John Brodie.

After COP had tied the score in the third period, Stanford came back again on a 52-yard drive in 12 plays with the payoff being Gustafson's 15-yard pass to Paul Camera in the end zone.

* * * *

IN THE FOURTH, the Indians cinched it with Gustafson passing to Camera again from the three yard line for the score. Sophomore Al Harrington of Honolulu, taking a pitchout from the five, finished it off with the final tally midway in the last period.

Pitt Humbles California, 27-7

Scores 20 Points in 4th Period

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Dick Bowen, a limber-legged sophomore playing his first varsity game, and veteran fullback Bobby Grier scored two touchdowns each Saturday as Pittsburgh spotted the University of California one touchdown and stormed back in the final period to win, 27-7.

Bowen entered the game in the final period with the score tied 7-7. On his first running play, he made four yards for a first down on the California 27. He took a pitchout from Corny Salvaterra on the next play and streaked to the six. Then he cut, took Salvaterra's pass in the end zone for the score.

* * * *

A BREAK GAVE Pittsburgh the ball on California's nine a few minutes later. End Fred Glatz recovered Hugh Maguire's fumble and Bowen was back in business again. He slicked off right tackle into the end zone to give the Panthers a 20-7 edge. John Paluck converted.

The Californians, who played Pittsburgh to a stalemate in the first half, were visibly wilted by the 92 degree heat and the steam turned on by Pittsburgh.

Grier, hard-hitting fullback from Massillon, Ohio, completed the scoring with a 33-yard touchdown gallop with four minutes remaining.

A hometown crowd of 34,976 sat stunned as the underdog and outmanned Bears from the West Coast easily moved in front after slightly more than three minutes elapsed in the first period.

Billy Vallotton recovered a Pittsburgh fumble on his own 45 and four plays later was on the receiving end of a 30-yard scoring pass from Maguire. Nick Poppin converted.

* * * *

CALIFORNIA held off the Panthers until the closing seconds of the half. Salvaterra lofted a lazy 35-yard pass to halfback Corky Cost on the California two. It took two line bucks from there, but Grier made it with two seconds left. Left-footed Darrell Lewis tied it at 7-7.

SECOND HALF IMPROVEMENT

Rugged Razorbacks Overcome Tulsa, 21-6

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UP)—The University of Arkansas, surprise of 1954 in the Southwest Conference, opened its 1955 season Saturday by beating a fiercely resisting University of Tulsa team, 21-6, before 18,500 spectators.

Both teams were playing under new coaches and they both looked a little disorganized the first two periods. In this respect, Arkansas had the edge on disorganization, but in the last half showed spots of the brilliance that gained it the conference crown last year.

Tulsa scored midway in the first period when fullback Dick Scholtz cracked over from the two. Charles Wynes' conversion attempt failed.

Arkansas took a 7-6 lead in the second period as fullback Hank Moore sped 64 yards off left guard.

The Razorbacks looked like a different team in the second half. They marched 54 yards in nine plays in the third period with halfback Joe Thomason plunging over from the three. In the last quarter George Walker threw 34 yards to halfback Ronnie Underwood for their final TD. Walker kicked all three extra points.

Day-Led Rebels Win, 26-13

ATLANTA (AP) — Eagle Day, supposedly shunted to the bench on pre-season performance, passed, punted and ran the Mississippi Rebels to a 26-13 victory over a slower Georgia team Saturday night in a Southeastern Conference football opener.

The 23-year-old senior quarterback staged a brilliant offensive show in the aftermath of Georgia Tech's defensive struggle against Miami in the day half of Atlanta's football doubleheader.

Day passed to halfback Billy Kinard for two first half touchdowns and ran six yards in the fourth quarter for the clincher score.

Mississippi, which hadn't kicked a field goal since 1932, got two from fullback Paige Cothren in the second quarter.

Georgia treated the 30,000 Grant Field crowd to both its touchdowns in the first half. Halfback Conrad Manisera capped a 71-yard drive with a six-yard scoring sweep in the first quarter. A pass from second string quarterback Dick Young to halfback Jimmy Orr covered 46 yards and gave Georgia a brief 13-12 lead in the second period.

Hawaii Pulls 6-0 Surprise on Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Skippy Dyer, a hula-hipped halfback weighing only 160 pounds, paced Hawaii's underdog Rainbows to a 6-0 upset win over Nebraska's Cornhuskers Saturday before 23,000 sweltering football fans at Memorial Stadium here.

Rocking Nebraska on its heels through three scoreless quarters, Hawaii punched across the game-winning touchdown with five minutes of the fourth period remaining and squelched Nebraska's desperation passes in the waning moments.

It was the elusive Dyer who kept Nebraska off balance during most of this long afternoon.

A 37-yard sprint by reserve halfback Bill Taylor put Hawaii within seven yards of pay dirt to set up the touchdown. Halfback Ed Kanawaki plunged to within inches and Hartwell Freitas, 185-pound fullback, bucked it over.

Once Over Lightly

against Maryland next Saturday.

On the other hand, it wasn't a tough enough game to sap their strength or interfere with the Bruins reaching the necessary physical and emotional peak against mighty Maryland.

THE BRUINS appeared more concerned with sharpening their timing and blocking and maintaining a perfect defensive record rather than running up a score.

The Aggies' refusal to "open up" also kept the score respectable. It appeared to most observers they were mainly concerned in keeping the score down.

After all, Bryant didn't want his sophomores humilated by a lop-sided score in their first varsity game. Such a result would definitely have been demoralizing to a group of youngsters who are destined to give Aggieland one of the nation's great teams in another year or two.

The Texas A&M camp definitely was impressed by the Bruins, "Bear" going as far as to say "UCLA certainly gets my No. 1 rating off this week's showing."

Best crack of the night came when Bryant was asked what he thought was the turning point of the game: "When Papa Knox brought his boy down from California."

The notorious switch in schools also could mean the national championship.

Georgia Tech Clips Miami in Bone-Cracking TV Game

ATLANTA (UP)—Paul Rotenberry, a plug-shaped halfback from Norfolk, Va., seized an opportunity with a penalty flag down — and also the enemy's guard—Saturday to go 48 yards for a touchdown and give Georgia Tech a 14-6 victory over Miami in a bone-cracking season opener. The game was televised coast-to-coast in color.

Tech Capt. Jimmy Morris went 25 yards with an interception for a second score in the last 54 seconds. But that was all anticlimax, made possible only by Rotenberry's quick thinking in the first period.

Rotenberry acted in a sudden rule-book situation and proved that he knew the rules. Miami had punted from within its 10-yard line and Miami's co-captain, Guard Joe Kohut, ran into Tech Fullback Ken Owen who had signaled for a fair catch.

* * * *

DOWN WENT OWEN and the ball skittered aimlessly while most of the Miami defenders were watching the area of the foul. Rotenberry picked it up, broke away from the scattered Miami defenders and went all the way.

Tech used eight and nine men to plug its line and it wasn't until the third period that Miami could drive 69 yards to a matching touchdown. Fullback Don Basseler was the hero of the drive, starting it with an eight-yard run and twisting 13 yards for the score. But halfback Ed Oliver, trying to tie the score, sent his placement wobbling wide to the right.

Miami had one more great surge left but it ended at the Tech 36 after a holding penalty set the Hurricanes back. Tech's Stan Flowers stopped Johnny Bomkman with a chilling tackle just short of enough to make it up on fourth down.

* * * *

TECH THEN WAS stopped by a penalty on a drive led by fullback Dick Mattison to the Miami five. In a final exchange of punts sub halfback Johnny Menger of Tech set one down on the Miami two and that was it. Marion Bonofiglio's final desperation pass was eaten up by the eager Morris as he went all the way.

Denver Cops, 19-7

AMES, Iowa (AP)—Denver University's Skyline Conference football champions, pulled out of possible danger by Ray Willsey's 63-yard touchdown run in the fourth period, whipped an unimpressive Iowa State team 19-7 in unseasonable, pound-shrinking 90 degree temperatures Saturday.

The visitors from the Rocky Mountain area, fronting an all-veteran line that carried them to a 9-1 record last fall, broke in front for a 13-0 lead with only 27 seconds gone in the second period. The Pioneers gave up a touchdown to the sophomore-dominated Cyclones later in the period and then broke up the game on Willsey's spectacular dash.

A crowd of 14,000 saw Denver commence the scoring with 4 minutes and 58 seconds remaining in the first period.

UCLA-Maryland Tilt Highlights Schedule

The football season reaches an early climax this week when the mighty gridiron machines of UCLA and Maryland clash head-on Saturday at College Park, Md., in a titanic struggle that could well decide the 1955 national championship.

The tremendous battle pits the 1953 national kingpin Maryland, against a Bruin aggregation that shared national honors in 1954 with Ohio State as it swept to an undefeated season after toppling the Terrapins, 12-7, in a punishing struggle in the Coliseum.

Meanwhile, Southern California's Trojans keep the "home fires burning" in the Coliseum with a Friday night engagement with Oregon.

Another important battle nationally will be the Southern Methodist - Notre Dame go at South Bend.

The week's television game will feature Illinois vs. California at Berkeley. It will be carried by KNXT (Channel 2).

Chisox Keep Faint Hopes Alive by Beating A's, 12-8

KANSAS CITY (UP)—The Chicago White Sox picked up a free run on a bases-full walk in the 10th inning Saturday night and went on to beat the Kansas City Athletics 12-8.

The White Sox filled the bases in the 10th with the score tied 8-all, on a walk, a safe bunt, a sacrifice bunt, and still another walk off Ray Herbert, fourth Kansas City pitcher.

Southpaw Art Ceccarelli came into the game and walked pinch-hitter George Kell, forcing in the winning run. The Sox added two more runs on Bob Kennedy's single and another on an error.

Kentucky Surprised by Hustling LSU, 19-7

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University, showing off a new coach, outhustled, outplayed and outscored favored Kentucky, 19-7, Saturday night in the season's football opener for both squads.

Junior quarterback Matt Burns pitched two scoring tosses to halfback Vince Gonzales, and halfback Joe May raced a kick-off back 95 yards to get Coach Paul Dietzel off to a winning start at LSU.

All-America candidate Bob Hardy was humiliated by the hustling LSU squad, having a key pass intercepted and being thrown for large losses in the fourth quarter.

Dietzel, 31-year-old former Army and Kentucky assistant, displayed a well coached, scrappy team that fought back viciously every time Kentucky threatened.

When Hardy hit his favorite target, end Howie Schnellenberger, for a 16-yard scoring pass in the third quarter, May ripped off his long scoring dash on the next kickoff.

Kentucky	0	0	7	0	—7
LSU	6	0	13	0	—19

Kentucky scoring: touchdowns: Schnellenberger (16 pass from Hardy). Conversion: Hughes.

LSU scoring: touchdowns: Gonzales 2 (13, pass from Burns; 29, pass from Burns); May (95, kickoff return). Conversion: Graham.

NEGRO STARS BOOKED FOR WRIGLEY FIELD

Perhaps the finest major league Negro all-star team ever assembled has been booked for two Wrigley Field appearances against a group of Southland major league stars Nov. 4 and 6, promoter Bill Feistner announced Saturday.

The Negro lineup will feature Don Newcombe and Junior Gilliam of the National League champion Brooklyn Dodgers, the Cubs' flashy double play combo of Ernie Banks and Gene Baker, Willie Mays and Hank Thompson of the Giants, Larry Doby and Al Smith of the Indians and Sam (No-Hit) Jones of the Cubs.

Bill Wilson, Rocky Bridges, Dick Cole and Bud Daley are among local major leaguers who will face the Negro stars.

My Heroine Gains Win at Pomona

(Compiled from AP and UP)

My Heroine, a stablemate of Swaps out of the Rex Ellsworth barn, gave longshot supporters upset happiness Saturday by gaining a wire-to-wire victory in the $10,000-added Governor's Handicap at Pomona.

The winner toured the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:45 3/5 in beating out Royal Puzzler and Diana Zev, and paid $23.60 to win.

Johnny Longden continued his mastery of the Bay Meadows' feature races by booting home Robinar in the Junior Miss Stakes. Robinar ran the mile in 1:37 and paid $2.60 to win. Madam Jet was second and Week-End was third.

Willie Hartack rode the favored Blue Choir to victory in the Foreign Bred Stakes at Atlantic City. Prince Hill galloped to an upset victory in the American Bred half of the twin feature. Social Outcast finished fifth.

Lalun captured the Beldame Handicap at Aqueduct, beating out Clear Dawn and Countess Fleet. The race was marred by a spill which sent jockey Tony Despirito to the hospital. He lost several teeth and suffered a fractured jaw. Jockey Sidney Cole was cut and bruised.

COUGARS WEAKER, SAYS HILL

Secret Out on Success of Trojans' Multiple Offense

By DICK ZEHMS

MEMORIAL COLISEUM, LOS ANGELES—The secret is out on Jess Hill's multiple offense. He's using 233-pound tackles to run punts back for touchdowns!

Frank Sarno, second string Washington State College quarterback, punted from the shadow of his own goal posts late in the third quarter of the SC-WSC Pacific Coast Conference game here Saturday afternoon.

It bounced once . . . right into the hands of George Belotti, a 6-3, 233-pound junior tackle. George grabbed it, whirled around and headed for the goal line 35 yards ahead. He ran over one unfortunate WSC warrior, then sailed down the north sidelines toward the west goal line. A Mack truck was out of control.

Three onrushing Cougars made a desperation tackle as George hit the five-yard line. He dived across the goal line. This was the first touchdown of his entire football lifetime. George served his apprenticeship at Oxnard High before winning a starting job at Troy as a sophomore last year.

"Chuck Leimbach threw a great block, or I'd never have made it," said the jubilant George in the dressing room after the Trojans had posted a 50-12 inaugural triumph. "No, I didn't have any idea there was a fairly clear field ahead. I just grabbed the ball when it bounced at me, whirled, and set sail.

"I knew I was going to make it even though two Cougars were coming at me from an angle. I figured I would dive over if I had to. I did."

George's conspicuous first wasn't alone. Leon Clarke, the timber - topping end, finally scored his first touchdown for Troy in this, his senior year. He took a 16-yard pitch from C. R. Roberts in the waning seconds of the second period.

"Boy, it was great," said Leon afterwards. "There ought to be dancing in the streets tonight. I hope there are more ahead."

Thus Hill is exposed. His multiple offense puts the emphasis on the beef trust. Belotti and Clarke are good examples of what Troy's opponents can expect to oppose this year. Irresistible forces on the loose!

"WASHINGTON STATE was not as tough as last year," offered the Trojan boss in the immediate post-game dressing room huddle. "We had a lot of trouble with them a year ago. We got some good breaks today.

"I can't make a comparison with our showing of a year ago with this one. We played some good football, some bad, but you get that when you use as many boys as we did today.

"We went down to the third and fourth groups. I sent the firsts back into the game late in the last quarter for work. You can't get them ready for the tough ones ahead by letting them play only seven minutes of the last half. They needed it. They need some more.

"I can't tell yet on the quarterback situation between Jim Contratto and Ellsworth Kissinger. They're a standoff on offense, and Kissinger has the defensive edge. But Jim played some mighty fine defensive football today. We'll have to let time work it out.

"Washington State held up our ends today, which didn't do our passing game any good. They did a marvelous job in this respect."

* * * *

"SC'S RIGHT GUARD gave us trouble all day long," said Al Kircher, WSC coach, in the post-mortem session. "What's his name . . . Orlando Ferante?

"I can't compare SC this year and last year. They made some breaks today. There were some cheap touchdowns scored on the field today. They made some breaks and took advantage of them. We gave them too many easy scores.

"Trojan speed impressed me more than anything else. They'll hurt a lot of teams. Those little guys scoot, don't they?"

* * * *

TOM GUNNARI and Vaughan Hitchcock, a couple of battered and bruised Cougar linemen, agreed with their coach on Troy.

"You have to give them credit," observed Gunnari, a senior tackle and bulwark of the front wall. "They made the breaks and then got rich on them. They appear greener than they were last year."

Hitchcock, nursing a few aches and pains after battering away at the walls of Troy all afternoon, was in accord. "They were rustier this time than a year ago," he said.

From then on it was just a matter of how much the Trojans would run their scoring total.

Isaacson's field goal from the 22-yard line at 3:58 of the second quarter launched Troy's 16-point attack in that period.

Arnett took a lateral from Contratto and circled right end for 19 yards and a touchdown at 6:41 after Contratto's interception on the 34 had paved the way.

* * * *

THE TROJANS fumbled away another scoring opportunity moments later on the Washington State 15, but Ernie Merk quickly put them back in point-production by recovering a Cougar fumble in mid-air on the SC 42 and returning to the Cougar 41. Ernie Zampese boomed 25 yards around right end to the 16 from where Roberts, highly touted sophomore fullback, flipped a pass to Clarke for the touchdown just 13 seconds before the first half ended. Kissinger's kick was wide, leaving the score at 29-6.

Incidentally, it was the first touchdown ever scored by the 6-4, 219-pound Clarke, who is a strong candidate for All-American end honors.

The Trojans racked up two more touchdowns in the third period, the first by Belotti at 11:59. Frank Hall's kick made it 36-6. Like Clarke, Belotti also registered the first TD of his career.

* * * *

TWO MINUTES later, Kranz slammed over from the one-yard line after he had set the stage for the score by intercepting a Cougar pass on the SC 46 and returning 27 yards to the Washington 27. Hall again booted the conversion to make it 43-6.

The Cougars had a good rally going in the final period before Hill rushed his regulars back into the fray to put out the fire.

Washington State marched 61 yards in 10 plays for a touchdown at 4:38 of the final period highlighted by Iverson's 31-yard aerial to end Ernie Pelluer on the eight-yard line. Bob Miller finally plowed over from the one for the tally. Gunnari's kick was wide.

An interception on the SC 37 was the signal for another Cougar advance that carried to the nine-yard line before Contratto squelched the threat with his one-handed interception.

Moments later, Washington State took to the airlanes again and Roberts picked off one of Iverson's pitches and rambled 24 yards to pay dirt. Arnett added the extra point at 12:31 to wrap up the scoring.

IN THIS CORNER with DICK ZEHMS

Graybeards in the point of service, Orian M. Landreth and Eddie Wagner began blowing their officials' whistles on the Pacific Coast Conference football traffic again last Friday night. For Orian it was season No. 32. For Eddie it was season No. 11.

They worked the UCLA-Texas Aggie game, in the Coliseum by way of tearing the wrapper off another football season. From now until late November, they'll be hard at it checking the maneuvers of the collegians in the Coliseum and on other coastal battlefields.

These two Long Beachers are walking rule books . . . with stripes. Both have been on the main stem of football officating so long that they are considered higher echelon authorities. They've called 'em in the Rose Bowl on occasion, too.

Time was when Orian was a referee, a job which used to call for fast and constant movement. In the last seven years, however, the Long Beach City College dean of activities has confined himself to the umpiring role—perhaps a little less demanding physically. Eddie, however, still is the "take charge guy" in his role as referee.

They're specialists in the field of officiating. In fact, Eddie continues to serve as instructional chairman for the Southern California Officials Assoc. Of this says Orian:

"Eddie is continuing to do the officials' circles a marvelous job. Nobody knows it better than the football coaches. It's time the public began to appreciate his abilities, too."

Orian is booked to toil in the Stanford-Ohio State, California-Washington State, Stanford-UCLA, California-SC, California-Oregon State, SC-Stanford.

Eddie's schedule calls for refereeing at the SC-Oregon, Stanford-Ohio State, UCLA Oregon State, SC-Wisconsin, UCLA-Iowa, Washington-California and Stanford-California games. He has other minor college games on his agenda, plus a half dozen or so junior college conflicts.

They call 'em they see 'em in their roles as vice presidents in charge of knotty problems. Remember this when you question a call—Orian and Eddie can recite the rule book verbatim.

Frank McCormick of the PCC front office is proudest of his football officials. He has said so many times. Take a bow, Orian and Eddie, then let's be on with the games!

BIG IF DEP'T. In retrospect, Frank Lane of the Chicago White Sox, Bob Bragan of the Hollywood Stars and Bob Scheffing of the Los Angeles Angels have something in common.

Observed Lane, the Chisox G.M., the other day: "If we had been able to land Frankie Baumholtz of the Chicago Cubs we would win the American League pennant by 10 games."

Said Bragan last week: "If big Steve Bilko had been our first baseman this year the Pacific Coast League race would have been no contest."

Quipped Scheffing in rebuttal: "If Red Munger and Bob Garber had been throwing for us we'd have won the flag in a breeze."

Hey, fellas, wait until Casey Stengel and Al Lopez start their motors!

COME, NOW. The several microphone foghorns who opposed the Twink-Angel third place and city championship playoff series last week on the grounds of rank commercialism are realists, believe me.

And I've been thinking all along that pro baseball was nothing more than entertainment designed to collar the dollar. How naive!

49ers TO WATCH. If you become a Long Beach State College football fan this fall as the 49ers embark on the school's first cruise across the gridiron, give a second look at tackle Charles Stackhouse and quarterback Frank Iacono. They border on the unusual.

Stackhouse attended Harbor Jaycee eight years ago. He is the oldest man on the 49er squad at 33. He is married and is the father of two children.

Iacono played quarterback at Compton Jaycees when the Terrible Tartars had Hugh McElhenny and Bill Fell in their backfield—way back when! He is 31.

Fullback John Gasparian is another cloaked in the unusual. He played for East Los Angeles Jaycee in 1954, where he won the team scholarship award.

SMALL TALK. San Diego's Padres didn't repeat in the PCL race for one very simple reason . . . the Pads won only eight and lost 16 to the champion Seattle Rainiers . . . Lefty O'Doul, ex-Padre boss who handled Oakland's Acorns, had a 14-10 edge on his former teammates . . . Since World War II, Notre Dame has played 27 games against Big Ten opponents, winning 21, losing three and knotting three . . . Just thought I'd mention it as possible defense against some of the taunts fired at the PCC in its Rose Bowl relationship with the Big Ten.

No matter what you may read, rumors insist Frank Lane is on the way out of the Chicago White Sox picture—heading for the St. Louis Cardinals . . . Denver and Omaha, new members of the American Association, accounted for 47 per cent of the 1,588,048 total attendance this season, the former with 426,248 and Omaha with 317,637.

Ernie Banks day wasn't held as planned by the Chicago Cubs last week . . . Next year the Cubs will throw a big one for him . . . Bob Davenport's chances of being named All-American fullback this year will be challenged by Don Schaefer of Notre Dame . . . Reports say the Irish will boom Don for the laurels . . . Last year he gained 766 yards in 141 tries.

Saints Gird for Carnival, Apache Tilts

St. Anthony's High opens its 1955 football season Tuesday night in a 20-minute skirmish against Mt. Carmel as part of the annual Catholic League Carnival. The grid festival will be held at East Los Angeles Junior College.

Following the Carnival tilt, the Saints will engage defending SCIF champion Centennial in their first regular season contest Friday night.

The Saint-Mt. Carmel session of the Carnival will get under way about 9 p.m., following 20-minute jousts between Cathedral and Serra; Cantwell and Notre Dame, and Pius X and Loyola.

Coach Leo Haggerty continued to concentrate on defense in the week's final scrimmage, giving his squad the opportunity to become accustomed to the single wing attack used by Centennial.

Haggerty has also spent some time in defensing the split-T as employed by the Mt. Carmel Crusaders who will have three of last year's backfield starters returning.

Stern, Szabo Battle Togos at Auditorium

It all went for naught last week, this terrible tussle between the talented Togos and Ray Stern plus Sandor Szabo, so it will be tried again Thursday night at Municipal Auditorium.

The rematch was nearly essential since the Togos gained a draw with the rising team of Szabo and Stern a week ago. And the two S's want their record cleaned up.

CHANNEL TRY

2 L.B. Girls Eye Swim

Long Beach's top two feminine distance swimmers—Mrs. Amy Hiland and Mrs. Daisy Murchie—will attempt to cross the Catalina Channel this week.

Mrs. Murchie will begin her swim Thursday night from Catalina Island while Mrs. Hiland is set to leave early Saturday night.

Full details can be found on page A-7. In addition, Mrs. Hiland tells her own story of her swimming career in an interesting article in today's Southland Magazine.

Rockets Tangle With L.A. Stars

The Long Beach Rockets return to Recreation Park this afternoon to face the powerful Los Angeles All-Stars, champions of the recent Compton Semipro Tournament. Game time is 2:15 p. m.

Manager Walt Carson expects some additional help for the Rockets from local minor leaguers who have completed their seasons.

Larry Jones is expected to get the starting mound call as the Rockets seek their 14th victory in 23 games. Tim Knorzer or Tom Lloyd will do the catching.

The rest of the lineup finds Ev Pearson at first base, Bob Senske at second, Red Meairs at short, Bob Howard at third and George Selfridge, Bob Carter and Roger Hull in the outfield.

Bev-Tony Duo Wins Pair in L.A. Net

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Beverly Fleitz of Long Beach and national champion Tony Trabert of Cincinnati led the mixed doubles into the semifinals as play began Saturday in the Pacific Southwest tennis championships.

The Fleitz - Trabert tandem mowed down Connie Bowan, Los Angeles, and Atsushi Miyaga, Japan, 6-1, 6-0, and Marlene O'Connor, Los Angeles, and Enrique Morea, 6-2, 6-1.

Mrs. Pat Yeomans, Los Angeles, and Roger Becker, England, pulled a couple of upsets to keep pace. They defeated Nell Hopman, Australia, and Ted Schroeder, La Canada, Calif., 7-9, 6-2, 6-3, and then eliminated Julie Sampson, San Marino, Calif., and Rex Hartwig, Australia, 7-5, 3-6, 7-5.

Other semi-finalists in the mixed doubles will be Darlene Hard, Montebello, Calif., and Ken Rosewall, Australia, and Barbara Breit, North Hollywood, Calif., and Vic Seixas, Philadalphia. They also won two matches apiece Saturday.

Singles play will begin Monday.

Set Lakewood Area Kid Baseball Meeting

Interest in a Babe Ruth baseball league in the Lakewood-Bellflower area for the 1956 season will be discussed Sept. 22 at 7:30 p. m. at Mann-Wilson Cafetorium, 6024 Clark Ave.

Further information on the league for 13-15 year old boys can be obtained by phoning Jack Lemanski at ME 3-8229 or Gene Sampson at TO 7-1969.

PARTICULARS

by JERRY WYNN

The lady professionals will make an overdue Southland appearance this week in the $5,000 Clock CC Ladies Invitational.

The 72-hole event will begin Thursday over the narrow Whittier course and headline such talent as Patty Berg, Louise Suggs, Fay Crocker, Betsy Rawls, Bev Hanson, Betty Jameson, Mickey Wright and Long Beach's Betty Hicks.

Although a number of the ladies played in the L.A. Open this year, their participation was in the nature of a sideshow rather than a main event. This week the course, the cheers, and the rewards will be theirs alone.

Clock owner Forest Smith has gone all-out to make the tourney a success. He spent $10,000 altering the ninth and 18th holes to avoid parallel fairways and, in doing so, made over the 16th and 17th into splendid water holes.

In addition to donating the entire purse — which will include $1,000 in merchandise prizes for the amateurs — Smith has ticketed all receipts to a children's hospital charity.

Notable by their absence from the field will be Babe Didrikson Zaharias, who may never again be able to golf, and Alice Bauer Hagge. Alice and sister Marlene strangely have never returned to Long Beach since their departure many years ago. Marlene has retired from golf but Alice has been playing exceedingly well recently and her decision to pass up the meet is a puzzling one.

The tournament will be televised Saturday and Sunday but a large attendance on the course would not only insure the perpetuation of the event but add dollars to charity. Let's give the ladies a big welcome!

WILLIAM DICKENSON, 75-7, won the Virginia Men's Club Saturday Sweepstakes with a 68.

Tied for second place at 69 were O. M. Slosson, 79-10; T. F. McCarry, 77-8; and Milt Arthur, 79-10. Recording 70s were L. H. Conley, 88-18, and Mel Collins, 80-10.

Blind bogey (75) victors were Harry Bouchier, Henry Robertson, C. G. DeCoudres, Stan Smith, Ralph Irwin, Carl Heymond, John Mead, G. D. Gurley, Fred Burrell and Dr. Malcolm Todd.

Preps Open Play in Milk Bowl Friday

The eighth annual Milk Bowl Carnival, matching Poly, Wilson and Jordan football teams in a round-robin championship, opens the local high school season Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium with the first kick-off scheduled for 7 p.m.

Bee teams from the three Coast League entries play 15-minute games. Jordan vs. Wilson at 7, Poly vs. Jordan at 7:20 and Wilson vs. Poly at 7:40 to start the night's activities.

Varsity teams take the field at 8:20 p.m. to give the expected crowd of 12,000 a preview of the local prep season.

Jordan kicks off to Wilson at 8:20, Poly kicks off to Jordan at 8:45, and Wilson kicks off to Poly at 9:10 p.m.

* * * *

BOB PARKE's Jordan Panthers, on paper at least, appear to be the team to beat. Jordan welcomed back 11 lettermen from a team that won only one game last year, but the Panthers have an edge over both Poly and Wilson in experience.

Poly, with new coach Doc Cure at the helm, can count only three "active" lettermen as Henry Wallace, all-city varsity "player of the year" is still on the shelf recovering from a fractured leg.

Wilson, last year's runner-up to perennial Coast League champion Compton High, welcomed back six lettermen, but all were reserves.

All three varsity teams run from a straight-T with split-T variations.

Last year's Jordan varsity quarterback, Roland Boyd, is still waging a first string battle with Mike Magee, ball-handling magician from the Bees, and Chuck Buckman, ex-junior varsity quarterback.

* * * *

WILSON HIGH can probably boast of the fastest halfbacks in the city should Dick Hollis, an all-city Bee gridder and track man, and Danny McMillen, who has been running wild in practice.

Poly may be the league "sleeper" although definitely a green team. Jim Hanna, last year's 6-5 reserve quarterback, has been shifted to end to pair with letterman Alan Roebuck at the flanks.

Bee "player of the year" Bob Ishii has corraled one guard spot while Jim vonEps and John O'Dowd are power plunging fullbacks. Terry Jagerson at quarter and Terry Barnett at one half look like comers.

PREP DEBUT

Pretty Wilson High drum majorette Jeanne Wood and four Bruin lettermen strut on practice field as they prepare for Friday night's high school football opener in annual Milk Bowl. Left to right: tackle Bill Muse, center Warren Nelson, Miss Wood, guard Frank Lawler and halfback Jerry McMillan, also shown in inset. Wilson, Poly and Jordan varsity and Bee teams will be seen in round-robin carnival.

Oxy 1st Foe for State '11'

The 49ers of Long Beach State College open their first grid season, Friday, against Occidental College on the Oxy home field in Eagle Rock.

Coach Mike DeLotto and his staff, which includes backfield coach Bob Downey and line coach Bob Pestolesi, have been molding the first 49er squad in two practice sessions daily since September 1. An original practice-turnout of 51 hopefuls will be cut to a traveling squad of 33 before the opener.

* * * *

MOST LIKELY to win first-team honors are ends John Miller and Neil Peek, tackles Carleton Corey and Herb Tanner, guards Bill Bruffey and Bill Price, center Ron Albertson, quarterback Bob Smith, halfbacks Gene Ashwill and Ivan Seaton, and fullback Ron Kredell.

Kredell could be tumbled by either Ralph Chalifoux or Johnny Gasparian, who have been in and out of the starting lineup since practice began.

Halfbacks Seaton and Ashwill are being pushed hard by Ed Barksdale, Harlow Richardson and Dick Ballester.

* * * *

QUARTERBACK Smith, ex-Santa Ana Jaycee great, has a tight hold on the starting position, but Frank Iacono and John Pembrook are not out of the running.

The firmest grips on first-string honors are held by guards Bruffey and Price. Bob Ashcraft, recently shifted from halfback, may develop starting talent later in the season, and Myron Hitch and Jim Mays are likely to see action.

Tanner, recently nosed out of a starting tackle position by James Alexander, regained his post with a gleaming performance in scrimmage Friday.

Fishin' Around

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

The slowdown in ocean fishing, always a source of worry to boat operators after Labor Day, has hit hard this year despite the fact that the fish have been cooperating extraordinarily well. All except the albacore, that is! The longfins just pulled a disappearing act.

Bluefin tuna, however, still remain around Catalina Island, and the kelp bass—big ones—are showing their usual September voracity for bait—most any kind of bait.

As we pointed out recently, September and October are ideal months for local fishermen to try their hand at ocean fishing. The passenger lists are small and there's good opportunity to use light tackle and have a lot of fun.

There have been few changes in schedules, but with the crowds dropping off, undoubtedly some skippers will start to curtail operations soon. One change was announced Friday. The Neleh (Seal Beach Pier) is canceling its half-day runs and changing to an all-day rock-fishing trip, effective Monday. The boat will leave the pier at 8 a. m.

I fished aboard a private boat last Sunday, caught a dozen kelp bass of fair size and had a picnic catching mackerel on a light spinning outfit. There's no fish—in salt or fresh water—that can fight like the mackerel, size for size. I, like many others, do not have any use for mackerel, but the fish can be released, usually without harm, and it's a lot of fun to take them on light outfits. Try a fly rod sometime and if the mackerel doesn't put more bend in that rod than any trout of equal size ever did, I'll donate a fly outfit to anyone who can prove otherwise.

There will be no boat trips to San Clemente Island, Monday through Friday, inasmuch as the Navy is firing a few shells in that direction. All skippers have been warned to keep away from the area.

TROUT PLANTINGS declined again last week, with the Department of Fish and Game taking Deep Cat Lake (Ventura County) and Little Rock Creek (Los Angeles) off the list because of unsuitable water conditions.

Streams and lakes stocked were the following: Crystal Lake and the East and West Forks of the San Gabriel River (Los Angeles); Lake Arrowhead, Green Valley and Gregory; creeks, Deep, Hook, Little Bear, both forks of Lytle, Mill, Mountain Home Creek and South and Main Forks of the Santa Ana River (San Bernardino); Matilija Reservoir and Santa Paula Creek (Ventura).

COASTAL DEER season ends today and the inland period begins next Saturday. The inland season will continue through Oct. 30, except in Inyo and Mono Counties where it closes Oct. 23. Wardens report that deer are plentiful in the higher country and this year should see a record kill. The hunters will have to work hard for their game, however, unless a storm sends the animals to lower elevations.

Some hunters feel that the coastal deer season, with the total kill down 25 per cent from last year's figures, has been a flop because of the heat and fire conditions. They have been pushing, as usual, for a winter season, but there's no indication that any of Sacramento's brass will order such a special shoot.

So, if you want meat, you'd better take off for the inland season.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — Jasper Nutter, one of those I-am-a-camera boys about town, took his family northward to Klamath for a vacation and came home with a beaming smile. He took three limits of steelhead on Terwar Riffle, between the Highway 101 bridge and Klamath Glen. His fish ranged from 3 to 5 pounds. Jasper saw one 9-pounder caught on the same riffle.

Merle Stockton, co-operator of Seal Beach's sportfishing pier, has left on an antelope-hunting trip to Wyoming. Bet we hear of other ocean-fishing operators leaving for vacations soon; they have earned a rest.

Sherwood Bailey and family of the Long Beach Outboard Boating Club tried the Upper Trinity country this year, camping at Del Loma, a resort inland from Eureka, where Sherwood got a 16-pound salmon. They reported a wonderful trip, but it was HOT! And they got back here just in time for the finish of our own heat wave.

If you are interested in Dumbo, the 42-foot cruiser that eight Long Beach men built from an old LSVP, you may read about it in the September issue of Motorboating. Your columnist is the author. Dumbo now rides the waves at Mead Lake and its owners are getting ready for some fall, winter and spring fishing excursions aboard her.

THE CENTURY is what Denison-Johnson Corp. calls its new-type spinning reel, which can be used by righthanders or southpaws, and on spinning, plug and fly rods—and for salt or fresh water.

That's quite a claim, but Joe Brooks, widely known light-tackle angler, tried it and said that he clobbered a bulls-eye at 100 paces.

In the Century, Johnson has changed the line opening to the front instead of the side as in other models and has added a electo-drag, which takes all the guesswork out of that operation. The drag can be set from 0 to 6 and the braking is smooth at all tensions. The reel holds 125 yards of 6-pound test monofilament and extra spools with smaller-test line are available.

TI Navy Takes on Compton Saturday

The Terminal Island Islanders, 1954 champions of the 11th Naval District League, move into their final week of practice sessions Monday before opening their season Saturday night against Compton College at Ramsaur Stadium.

Coach Frank Kirkland of the Islanders is working with a 57-man squad. Four returnees from last year's titleholders are currently holding down first team berths.

Back from last year's team, which had a 7-3 record, are ends Homer Bledsoe and George Hitchens, guard James Grace and quarterback Jim Bivens.

Bivens, 23-year-old W. Va. athlete, has six years of service football experience and has played for several area champions. He is a righthanded passer and had a high accuracy rating last year. Teaming with Bivens in the starting backfield in the opening game will be halfbacks James Fennell and Bill Richardson and fullback Wayne Boyd.

Slated to open in the line are ends Bledsoe and Hitchens, tackles James Wright and Wendell Scott, guards James Barth and Crace and center James Baker. The line averages 195 pounds with Scott topping the list at 225.

Kirkland's assistants include line coach Russ Faulkinberry of Vanderbilt, Veryl Lillywhite of SC, Pat Patterson of LSU and Sam White of LSU.

Area entries are Don Cameron, South Gate; Ed Edmen, Anaheim, and Termite Jones and Jim Hayes from Long Beach.

An intermission race between 5-14 year-olds of the Quarter-Midget Racing Association will highlight the added attractions, according to promoters Bill Cantrell and Norm Hall.

The First Major Contribution to your Driving Safety

Ford Lifeguard Design

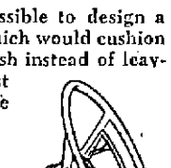

FOR MORE THAN TWO YEARS, Ford engineers, in cooperation with universities, medical associations and safety experts, have been working to determine the principal causes of accident injuries. They established that most serious injuries occur in three major areas.

These are: when the driver is thrown against the steering column; when passengers are thrown forward against hard surfaces inside the car; or when they are thrown completely out of the car.

With this vital information in hand, the challenge was to find really effective safeguards to reduce these hazards.

Dr. R. Arnold Griswold, Chairman of the Committee on Trauma, American College of Surgeons, has asked:

"Why isn't it possible to design a steering wheel which would cushion the effect of a crash instead of leaving only a post which damages the driver's chest?"

Ford's answer to the problem is this new Lifeguard steering wheel, mounted on a shorter steering post, and with three uniformly spaced spokes connecting the rim to the hub.

The deep-center construction acts as a cushion under impact . . . to decelerate the driver and give him extra protection against striking the steering column.

But how about the other crash danger factors? How about those hard interior surfaces which have practically no "give."

Here's what Dr. Frank H. Mayfield of the Sub-committee on Traffic Injury Prevention, of the Committee on Trauma, American College of Surgeons, has to say:

"... If there were some practical way to cover the instrument panel with adequate energy-absorbing material, there is not the slightest doubt that head injuries would be lessened or, in many cases prevented."

Ford engineers not only found a practical way to pad the panel, but, after hundreds of tests, selected a special expanded plastic material that is unique in its ability to absorb shock. It is so effective that an egg dropped from a roof top onto a one-inch thick pad of this material did not break.

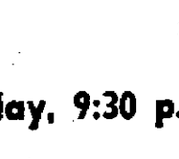

This new Ford Lifeguard padding is available, as an option, for the control panel and sun visors of all 1956 Ford models.

Now, what about the dangers outside—when doors spring open under impact and occupants are thrown from the car? Tabulations of over 1000 accident reports at Cornell University Medical College show that 20.1% of accident injuries are caused this way. Further, the chance of injury is twice as great if a person is thrown from the car.

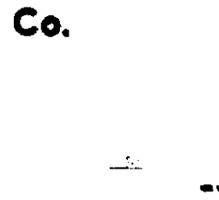

Mr. John O. Moore, Director, Crash Injury Research at Cornell Medical College, makes clear what he thinks:

"We have found that passenger ejection from open doors more than doubles chances of serious injury. For double protection against being thrown from a car, safety door locks, in addition to safety belts, are a most significant step forward in passenger protection."

Let's take the door latches first. It is possible for conventional, single-grip door latches, strong as they are, to disengage when the door and door-post are temporarily spread apart by a severe jolt. The illustration of hands, above, demonstrates conventional "single" grip. Ford's new Lifeguard double-grip door latch, standard in all '56 Fords, works something like the hand clasp shown here. The "fingers" engage and overlap for a double grip. This gives added protection against doors springing open under impact—to help keep you safer within the car.

As for seat belts, most authorities agree that seat belts, properly made, properly installed and conscientiously worn, could substantially reduce the annual highway death toll!

That's why Ford engineers set out to develop the most effective seat belts ever offered in a car. To keep you from being thrown from your seat in a sudden stop, Ford seat belts are one-third stronger than those required by CAA for commercial aircraft and they're anchored to a double-reinforced area of the floor structure. They're available for both front and back seats on all '56 Fords at modest extra cost.

Lifeguard design is not the only thing new in the '56 Ford.

You'll be delighted with the entire new Ford trend for '56. It's Thunderbird through and through. For not only does the new '56 Ford offer Thunderbird styling . . . but Thunderbird power, too!

Of course, we're anxious to have you see the new 1956 Ford . . . and to Test Drive it, too. So, won't you please accept our cordial invitation to visit your Ford Dealer on Friday, September 23rd? Make your plans . . . today!

See and drive the '56 FORD Friday, September 23rd

Defense Official Cites Arms Gain Under Ike Rule

ROANOKE, Va. (U.P.)—A Defense Department official said Saturday night that America's military strength has grown "immensely" under the Eisenhower administration, while military manpower and spending have been slashed.

Assistant Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess said the nation has built a "flexible but steel-sinewed" defense which puts maximum emphasis on technology and minimizes numbers of men.

He spoke at a time when military men are restive over the possibility of further defense cuts although administration officials have asserted that no major changes are in prospect.

UAW Reaches Agreement With Int. Harvester

CHICAGO (U.P.) — United Auto Workers and International Harvester Co. reached agreement Saturday on a new three-year contract providing for a guaranteed annual wage and a 10-cent hourly wage boost to end a 26-day strike against the farm equipment firm.

The contract, covering 40,000 workers at 18 Harvester plants in six states, also provided for additional increases of 5 to 10 cents an hour for employes in the five top labor grades, a full union shop and a cost-of-living adjustment.

It also assured employes against a reduction in piecework rates.

The contract is subject to membership ratification and approval is expected.

Test Scrambled Video; Opponent Dubs It Flop

CINCINNATI (AP)—Three pay-as-you-see television systems were demonstrated Saturday on a free television program, and an opponent of the plan promptly dubbed them "the three most colossal engineering blunders ever conceived in the electronic laboratories of America."

Zenith Corp., Skiatron Electronics and Television, and International Telemeter Corp. showed their methods of scrambling and receiving TV signals.

MILTON SHAPP, president of Jerrold Electronics Corp. of Philadelphia, who want television by wire rather than decoding devices, said:

"I can state emphatically that none of the proposed systems for scrambled broadcasting are practical for bringing the great box-office events into your home."

Representatives of the three concerns hotly disputed Shapp's statements.

IF THE WIRE system is cheaper, then the whole concept of broadcasting is a blunder, and the nation should have radio by wire instead of wireless sets, said Ted Lietzell of Zenith.

A Jerrold representative said the series of WCPO panels over a three-day period marked the first time the Philadelphia firm has been permitted on the same public platform with representatives of the pay-as-you-see systems.

No Guns for U.S. MPs in Britain

LONDON (AP) — U. S. Army traffic police in Britain have been ordered to leave their guns behind when they go on duty.

The command was issued by U. S. Army headquarters here after motorists in Norfolk complained they had been held at rifle point by an American soldier while an Army convoy passed.

In announcing the new rule, American officials said U. S. troops had "strict instructions not to point a rifle or any other weapon at civilians."

Dancing Ruby Settles in Balboa

By BOB THOMAS

BALBOA ISLAND (AP)—The famous legs of Ruby Keeler today get more exercise on the golf course than on a dance floor.

Miss Keeler, who tapped her way from Broadway hits to stardom in early talkie musicals, is content to be a housewife and mother, with an occasional fling at show business.

The dancer is now Mrs. John Lowe, mother of four grammar school-age children. Since the youngest just entered school, she has more time to devote to her longtime hobby, golf. She's an 8-handicap player at nearby Irvine Coast Golf Club.

"WE USED TO LIVE in Van Nuys," said said, "and we had a summer house here on Balboa Bay. This year we decided to stay here all the time. It's a rather small house, but it will do until we find a bigger one.

"I play golf and swim. Sure, I'm in a rut, but it's a good rut. And the recreation is wonderful for the children."

Miss Keeler manages to escape her so-called rut in this sunny resort community for an occasional appearance on TV.

SHE SAID that she doesn't keep up her tap practice. "I always think maybe I'll get started, but I never do."

Her active life here, though, keeps her in good trim. Tanned, slim and attractive, she looks much less than her 45 years.

Born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Miss Keller became famed as a star for Florenz Ziegfeld. She married Al Jolson in 1928 and retired as a performer. She returned to her greatest success as co-star with Dick Powell in Warner Bros. musicals. She dropped out of the movies in the late '30s.

After divorcing Jolson, she married John Lowe, who handles investments. Their children are Teresa, 11, Christine, 10, Johnny, 9, and Kathleen, 7.

(of the Independent-Press-Telegram Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—GOP National Committee chairman, G. Leonard Hall, is credited with creating the latest wise-crack to circulate around Washington. Speaking of Democratic attacks on President Eisenhower, Hall quipped: "That's the first time I ever heard of people hitting a man when he's up."

Speaking of Hall, the affable former judge and congressman is keeping a wary eye on the GOP's latest slogan: "Everything's booming but the guns." He thinks it's pretty good if it remains true, but admits the possibility that it could backfire thunderously.

That the presidential hopes of Gov. Averell Harriman of New York are rising and being taken more seriously can be measured by the fact that anecdotes about him are increasing. Harriman is admittedly not the easiest person to get to know. At a recent Washington cocktail party, one lady was divesting herself of some forthright opinions, none of them favorable, about the New York governor. "What have you got against Harriman?", plaintively asked her husband. "Obviously," said a bystander, "she knows him."

There's a lot of sound and fury around labor union headquarters here that doesn't have anytihng to do with the guaranteed annual wage or other industrial matters. The boys are arguing about the authorship of an innocent-sounding three - word phrase.

John L. Lewis started it all by criticizing the forthcoming AFL-CIO merger as a "rope of sand." The AFL promptly took out after the miners' chief, accusing him of having cribbed the phrase from a blast at the American labor movement leveled by Lenin more than 30 years ago.

Lewis' staff then recalled that one chapter of the autobiography of Sam Gompers, first president of the AFL, is entitled "Rope of Sand" and describes how nothing stronger is needed to maintain American workers' voluntary organization.

The mine union people went even farther and helped reporters trace origin of the phrase all the way back to Thucydides, B. C. Greek historian.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. was paying recent testimony to the wisdom of John Marshall, fourth and most renowned of our chief justices. "In Marshall's day," Brownell recounted, "the judges of the Supreme Court dined together. It was their custom to have wine only when it was raining. Occasionally on a sunshiny day, he would say: 'Brother Story (one of his colleagues), will you step up to the window and see if there are signs of rain?' Reluctantly Story would be obliged to report there was none. Thereupon the Chief Justice would reply cheerfully: 'Well, this is a very large territory over which we have jurisdiction and I feel sure it is raining in some part of it.'".

Daylight Saving Time Adding Grief to TV and Trains

NEW YORK (AP)—One of old Ben Franklin's ideas is winning new popularity with a lot of folks—and causing extra grief for a lot of others.

It's daylight saving time.

Several states and some of the big cities have decided they want even more of it than before. In general, they've continued it from the last Sunday in September to the last Sunday in October.

Now there are growing howls of anguish from some quarters where the hour hand of the clock is king, notably railroads and television networks.

"It's causing us one helluva lot of trouble," moaned harassed TV officials.

"What a headache!" wailed a railroad industry spokesman.

At first glance it wouldn't seem that such a relatively small change in the existing situation would make much difference.

Not so, though, for the television networks, railroads and possibly a few other industries.

* * * *

SOURCES in the two major fields say the daylight saving extension, even though in a proportionately small geographic section, is creating a hodgepodge time situation with endless difficulties and confusion for them.

The trouble appears to stem from the fact that a very small dog will be wagging a gigantic tail.

In this case, the little dog is the northeastern section where the added daylight has found most of its favor. The rest of the country is the tail.

Last fall, most of New England extended the daylight time period.

This year that area will be joined by New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Vermont, along with a number of Pennsylvania cities including Philadelphia and several cities in Illinois including Chicago. Numerous Ohio cities are following suit.

This puts about 40 million people, or about one-fourth of the nation's population, in the extra daylight area.

* * * *

NORMALLY there is a three-hour time spread between the east and west coasts. This remains the case in daylight saving months as far as New York and California are concerned, because both set their clocks forward an hour.

This year for the first time, though, New York sticks with the fast time until Oct. 30, while California quits Sept. 24. During the period between those dates the two coasts will be four hours apart.

Thus it is plain to see what is causing TV network officials to lose their sunny disposition.

Programs timed for the largest audiences on the east coast at night will hit the western seaboard while folks are still out in the yard relaxing from work.

And west coast programs at the best hours there will find New Yorkers catching their 40 winks.

* * * *

AS FOR RAILROADS, there is just enough of a checkerboard pattern on the forthcoming time situation to make things tough.

Railroads usually run on standard time, but generally their operations are geared to peak requirements in areas served. Local time is a big factor in this.

Many railroads also publish their time tables with local times, which will mean two publishing jobs this fall instead of one. Too, there is the matter of train connections between daylight and non-daylight areas.

"We're in a quandary," said the railroad spokesman, who declined use of his name. "It's an unusual kind of a headache for us because it's the first time this sort of thing has come up. It's creating great confusion."

Demand for Homes Keeps Pace With Construction

All signs indicate that our home production is traveling a well charted course — a course meeting demand, but without over-building.

This is the view of E. T. Moore, president of the Long Beach Board of Realtors.

Moore declared that a series of current government reports demonstrate that home construction is closely geared in practice to the nation's housing needs. He cited these items:

1. Home production is now at the annual, seasonally-adjusted rate of 1.2 million home units a year, a slight drop from the seasonally-adjusted rate the month before of 1.3 million units.
2. During the past five years, the annual increase in the numbers of non-farm households averaged about 1 million a year, according to a recent Census Bureau sample survey.
3. Removal of housing from our inventory, through demolition, condemnation, or other withdrawal, is estimated to be at the rate of 250,000 to 300,000 units yearly, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

"These figures," the board president said, "demonstrate that production is roughly meeting the year-by-year demand. In other words, the annual production of 1.2 million approximates the sum of family formations (1 million) and the removal from the inventory of 250,000 units annually.

* * * *

"BUT THESE figures don't tell the whole story. In addition, there is still left over some of the immediate post-war demand for housing. This must be supplied in addition to the year-by-year needs.

"And the evidence is that there is the desire, as well as the need, for good housing. A current survey of the Federal Reserve System reports that in early 1955, the proportion of those planning to buy homes within two years was larger than the proportion in three earlier annual surveys.

"Moreover, reports of personal income indicates individuals are in position to make good their plans. Government reports show that personal income is running over $300 billion annually.

* * * *

"IMPORTANT IN THE housing supply and demand estimates has been the figure of withdrawals from 'housekeeping' of the unfit, or condemned, units. The estimate of 250,000 to 300,000 units is well above the previous estimate of 40,000 to 50,000. Certainly, a good part of the stepped up demolition of unit dwellings has resulted from the Build America Better program of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"This program is designed to spark neighborhood conservation in our cities by eliminating dilapidated homes, improving others, and encouraging community planning to prevent slum recurrence.

"Realtors—members of the national association — have been active in leading this work in many communities."

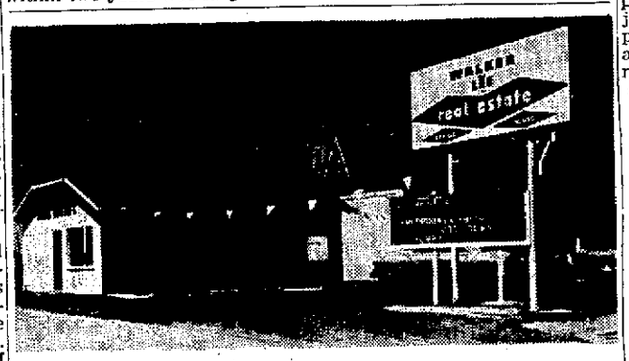

Home Builder Opens Office

The Mission Model Homes Inc., who have been specializing in building low-cost quality homes and income units for the past three years, are opening an office in Long Beach at 5600 Paramount Blvd., according to William S. Martin Sr., vice president.

"This new office, which will be managed by Marc A. Frederick Sr. and assisted by James Hodges, is being opened to enable us to better serve the people in the Harbor area," said Martin.

"Only the finest quality of materials go into Mission Model Homes such as genuine lath and plaster, No. 2 or better lumber, aluminum screens, Holly wall furnaces, etc."

The Mission Model Homes maintain other offices at 8763 East Mission Drive, Rosemead and Ontario, El Monte and Chino.

OPENS NEW OFFICE

Because of the unprecedented record of resales in the area, Walker & Lee, Inc., has opened a new office at 5545 Woodruff Ave., in the "Dutch Village" shopping center, to handle the greatly increased volume of business, it was disclosed by Art Hancock, manager of the resale department.

FIRESIDE HOME
Shown above is one of a wide variety of architectural stylings offered in Fullerton at W. E. Robertson Co.'s Fireside Homes, new development of three and four-bedroom residences on Chapman Ave., just east of Raymond Ave.

Robertson Opening Two New Fullerton Tracts

Adding luster to the continued observance of National Home Week this week-end in Fullerton will be the grand opening of the final units in two new home communities developed by W. E. Robertson Co.

Openings will take place at Fireside Homes, located on Chapman Ave., just east of Raymond Ave., and at Orangewood Estates, on the south side of W. Orangethorpe Ave., just east of Brookhurst Rd., where more Sterling Series homes will become available.

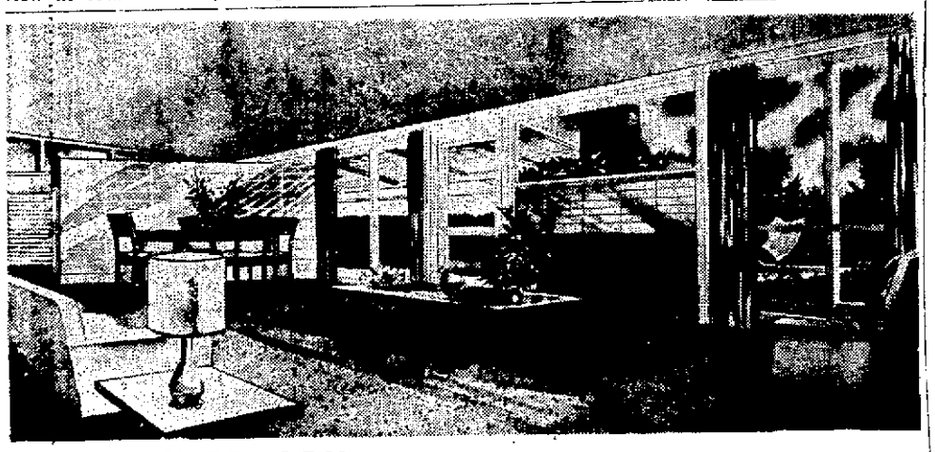

Attractive model homes, all completely furnished, will be on view at both locations, exemplifying 70 new three and four-bedroom, two-bath residences designed by Architect Max Maltzman. All have color schemes by Margaret Hargrove.

Pleasant surprise offered veterans at both developments, the spokesman promised, are terms which still feature no down payment, except for nominal costs and impounds. Monthly payments at Orangewood Estates for vets are from $73.65 and, at Fireside Homes, from $74.68, it was noted.

Homes are priced at Orangewood from $14,300 to $15,540 and at Fireside from $14,660 to $16,125.

"In both developments, buyers will find such features as thermostat-controlled, forced air heating, large wood-burning fireplaces of slumpstone or brick, rugged built-in barbecues in paved patios, sliding glass doors joining indoor and outdoor living areas, built-in breakfast bars with concealed storage space, built-in ranges and eye level ovens and many other outstanding quality features," the spokesman said.

Earlier buyers, he reported, have shown great interest in the two units, largely because of their choice locations, off the Santa Ana Freeway, in the fully established city of Fullerton with its wealth of pleasant living conveniences.

ABUNDANCE OF ROOM
The spaciousness and airiness of the homes at Jupiter House and Gardens in Garden Grove is pictured in this architect's rendering. Complete landscaping, as well as custom details inside the house are included with the four-bedroom, two-bath homes.

Jupiter House-Gardens Homes Stress Outdoor-Indoor Living

Outdoor living, an important part of the Southern California scheme of things, is exemplified at Jupiter House and Gardens in Garden Grove. Cognizant of this, Tobin Companies, builders of the homes, have included a complete "outdoor-indoor" package for prospective buyers.

The outdoor living features include seeded and fertilized level lots, seasonal flowers, shrubbery, 6-foot high redwood fences and an all-inclusive sprinkler system for the front and back lawns. A patio in the back lawn, complete with overhead trellis and planter, adds to to the charm and livability of the Tobin homes.

The outdoor feeling is carried inside the house where gable end windows set above huge picture windows admit an abundance of light and sunshine to give spaciousness and airiness within the house.

The homes are priced at $12,700 to $12,900 for 4-bedrooms 2 baths and a 2-car garage. A partial wall divider between the living room and the kitchen makes it possible to look outside through the gable end windows in the kitchen while sitting in the living room.

Custom details and features for convenient and comfortable family living are found inside. Families with children will welcome the fact that there are two separate eating areas, one in the spacious kitchen and one in the living-dining area.

There is ample closet space, too, as each bedroom boasts a huge wardrobe with sliding doors. A natural brick fireplace, with a window over it, adds warmth and charm to the living room.

The kitchen is equipped with softly colored steel cabinets and the top cabinets have sliding frosted glass doors. Other advantages in the kitchen are a dishmaster, garbage disposal and vent fans.

The homes are designed with a central floor plan. Children can walk from the kitchen to their bedrooms without going through the living room.

Another important advantage of Jupiter House and Gardens is its proximity to schools and shopping centers.

Jupiter House and Gardens, located off the Santa Ana Freeway, can be reached via the freeway, turning south on Stanton to Highway 39. Follow signs, 3 miles south of the freeway, turning east on Katella to the homes.

Retail Sales on Increase

NEW YORK (AP)—Shoppers, lured by stepped-up promotions of fall and winter merchandise, increased their spending in the nation's retail stores last week, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

Total spending ranged from 5 to 9 per cent higher than in the comparable week of 1954, Dun & Bradstreet said. Merchants reported a noticeable gain in sales of men's fall clothing; women increased their purchases of sweaters, blouses and skirts.

Sales of home furnishings mounted, with the more popular items including modern bedroom furniture and dining room sets, blankets, linens, draperies and carpeting. There was an upsurge in buying of "do-it-yourself" paints and hardware.

All major areas reported gains for the week ended Sept. 14. Percentage increases from the like year-ago week were as follows: New England up 6 to 10, east and southwest up 7 to 11, south and Pacific Coast unchanged to up 4, midwest up 5 to 9 and northwest up 3 to 7.

Sun Estates Still $40 Down for Vets

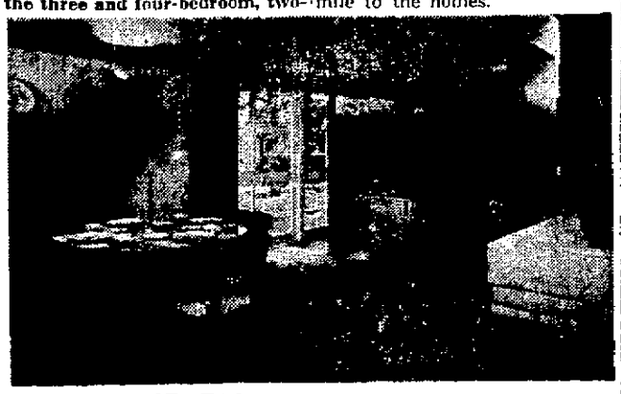

The new regulations governing veteran financing will alter the $40 down payment to vets now in effect at Sun Estates in Anaheim, it was announced by a spokesman for sales agents Walker and Lee.

Due to the restrictions, the $40 down which covers all costs and impounds, will be revoked in a few weeks it was stated, in urging prospective buyers to act quickly.

The firm also pointed out that the three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes are available for immediate occupancy.

Fireplace, forced air heat, natural finish kitchen cabinets, interior planters, breakfast bar, and draperies with drapery hardware throughout for the full floor-to-ceiling windows were among the features cited by the sales agents.

To see the contemporary ranch style homes, visitors from Long Beach may drive out Lincoln Blvd. (Carson) to Center St. in Anaheim. Through Anaheim on Center St. to Placentia Ave. then right for approximately one-half mile to the homes.

IN SUN ESTATES

Spacious living and dining areas are among the features of the three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes at Sun Estates in Anaheim. It was announced that the $40 down payment to vets would be altered within a few weeks due to the new veteran financing regulations.

OPEN TO VISITORS TODAY

Cameo Park, new Santa Ana fine-home center, will be open for inspection today for the first time. This is one of the contemporary homes offered, which were designed by Architect Hugh Gibbs of Long Beach and developed and built by J. W. Lenney. Five exhibition homes were furnished by W. & J. Sloane of Beverly Hills. The homes adjoin the freeway at Marbury and Fruit Sts., at the eastern border of Santa Ana.

Much Appeal in La Mar Terrace

Opening of La Mar Terrace last Sunday resulted in great buyer enthusiasm, reports the sales agency. Especially strong was the enthusiasm shown for the kitchens.

The visitors saw for the first time the complete all-electric kitchens installed by Frigidaire, which features stove burner units which actually disappear into the wall when not in use.

Kitchen planning was by Pamela Masters and the design was made to save 510 steps per meal for the housewife.

Other distinctive features include 20 by 20 foot living room, ceiling to floor brick fireplace, large mirror-wardrobe-drawer built-ins in bedroom.

Over 1,300 square feet in each La Mar Terrace has 3 and 4-bedroom homes available in 29 different designs.

Vets may buy with no money down.

From Long Beach La Mar Terrace homes may be reached by driving east on Carson (Lincoln Blvd.) to Gilbert Ave. Turn north three-fourths of a mile.

From Los Angeles the homes are reached by driving the Santa Ana Freeway. Turn right on La Palma, then a block west to La Mar Terrace.

Delhi Gardens Kitchens Prove Big Selling Point

"Convenience-zoned" kitchens by Mary Olsten and massive, floor-to-ceiling fireplaces of Texas sandstone are two major drawing-cards at Delhi Gardens in suburban Santa Ana.

Visitors and prospective home buyers in record numbers visited the new home community during the past week, it was reported by Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents.

It is within half an hour drive from both Los Angeles and Long Beach via the Santa Ana Freeway or Garden Grove Blvd. From Long Beach take Seventh St. (which becomes Garden Grove) to Bristol St. in Santa Ana, south on Bristol to Delhi and left on Delhi to the furnished model homes.

Three national awards of merit have been presented to the builders for the outstanding efficient arrangement of work areas in the kitchen with its many step and labor-saving devices.

Crammed with luxury features, the California Contemporary homes are in 4 bedrooms or 3 bedrooms and a den.

Prices start at $12,999 and veterans still may buy for nothing down except closing costs and impounds, Chandler said.

All homes have 2 baths and a choice of either attached or detached two-car garage.

NEAR LONG BEACH
Hazelwood Freedom Homes, located three miles east of Long Beach on 7th St., offer four-bedroom, two-bath homes for $10,750. This is one of the models which is slightly higher because it includes a fireplace.

$10,750 Full Price of Big Hazelwood Home

Four-bedroom, 2-bath homes for a total price of $10,750 are selling rapidly at the Hazelwood Freedom Homes development just east of Long Beach on Garden Grove Blvd., (7th St.)

Ivan P. Andes & Associates, the sales agency, also revealed that veterans may buy the homes for nothing down except closing costs and monthly terms are $54.94 per month, principal and interest.

The homes, containing 1510 square feet under the roof, have 4 bedrooms, colored American Standard plumbing fixtures, 2 bathrooms, tile stall shower, big outside storage room, electric heater in bath, Youngstown Steel kitchen cabinets, flush slab doors, gas furnace, Rockwool insulation, steel window sash and there is a large carport.

Quality hardware is used throughout and an abundance of cabinets has been provided. A large attractive carport blends into the designing of the home.

Wood burning fireplaces are available in some models.

"When the developer launched Hazelwood Freedom Homes and said he would sell 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes for under $11,000 everyone said it couldn't be done," declared Andes.

"But he has done it and the homes are selling rapidly."

The homes are approximately 3 miles east of the Long Beach city limits and may be reached by driving east on 7th St. to the model homes located midway between Los Alamitos Blvd. and Huntington Beach Blvd.

The model homes have been furnished by Aaron Schultz of Long Beach.

Floor Affects Room Comfort

The extended heat wave which has roasted Southern California focuses attention on insulation values in home construction. One of the most important structural members affecting room comfort is the floor, according to the Hardwood Flooring Council of Southern California.

The Council points out that the floor is the only surface of the room that people come in direct contact with in the ordinary course of home activities. Hardwood flooring is resistant to the passage of heat and moisture. It gives protection against floor drafts and dampness and does not become excessively hot or cold, regardless of the temperature of the room, the Council declared.

Lucky Strike Attracting Buyers

Four model homes are drawing prospective buyers to the Lucky Strike Homes, new development in rapidly growing La Mirada, building executives announced yesterday.

The stylings are furnished by the Four Star Furniture Co. of Long Beach, and decors range from traditional to the modern. The models illustrate the possibilities of the 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes.

Qualified veterans can arrange for a home without down payment except cost and impounds.

Full prices are as low as $14,250. Excellent financing is assured non-vets with FHA loans, it was reported.

Features at Lucky Strike Homes are custom-styled step-down living rooms, massive estate-type fireplaces with Vermont slate hearth, thermostatically controlled forced air heat, built-in oven and range, and natural wood beamed ceiling.

Kitchens have dishwashers, disposals, natural ash cabinets, Formica sink tops, and breakfast nooks.

IN LA MIRADA
Lucky Strike Homes are available to veterans without down payment in La Mirada. The three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes boast such luxurious features as step-down living rooms and built-in oven and range. Four model homes are on view daily.

Ruby Eveland, Broker, Has Had Varied Life

A woman who gave up school teaching for family life, then after becoming a mother five times, served in the Coast Guard Reserve during the war, is the Realtor of the Week honored by the Long Beach Board.

"My life is rather uninteresting," said the petite broker, Ruby Eveland, as she was approached for an interview.

"You see I was born and educated near Waterloo, Iowa. After graduation I taught a short time in country school and then married Emery Eveland.

"We moved to Long Beach from Denver years ago and reside at 1701 E. Ocean. We have five children, two married daughters and three sons, Ed, who teaches at Wilson High, Bill in construction work and Robert who sails for the Pacific Far East Lines. Oh, yes, we have 15 grandchildren."

Ruby served during World War II in the Coast Guard Reserves and has been a real estate broker 14 years.

She is president of the Women In Real Estate club and is a member of the White Shrine and Eastern Star. Her office is at 21 39th Pl., where Irene Anderson is an associate.

Build your home on a SOUND FOUNDATION with BAXCO PRESSURE TREATED LUMBER!

Safeguard these foundation "WEAK SPOTS" against
TERMITES · WOOD-ROT · EARTHQUAKE DAMAGE

WHY PRESSURE TREATING?
Only pressure treating, which drives and deposits the chemical preservatives deep into the wood cells, results in maximum protection. Over 100 years experience in pressure treating railroad ties, telegraph poles, bridge timbers and dock piling has proven its effectiveness. Building Codes stipulate "pressure treating" for approvals.

Every year thousands of home owners are faced with huge, sudden repair bills, caused by termites or decay. Working unseen these wood destroyers often go undetected for years . . . then damage repairs can run into hundreds of dollars.

BE SAFE—and insist on Baxco Pressure Treated "Chemically Preserved" Foundation Lumber up to and including the first floor joists—it will add less than one half of 1% to your total building cost.

BE SURE—if your home is built on a concrete slab, laid on the ground, that all sills are pressure treated—it will save you money in the long run.

Custom-Type Homes in Braeburn Forest

National Home Week visitors' response to the grand opening of Braeburn Forest, new custom-styled community of 125 landscaped 3- and 4-bedroom, 2-bath dwellings in the close-in Anaheim area, has resulted in a 30 per cent sellout of the property, it was reported at the George D. Buccola development.

Preparations have been made to welcome additional thousands of viewers this weekend, during the close of National Home Week, to the attractive model homes, furnished and decorated by Elsie Feindell.

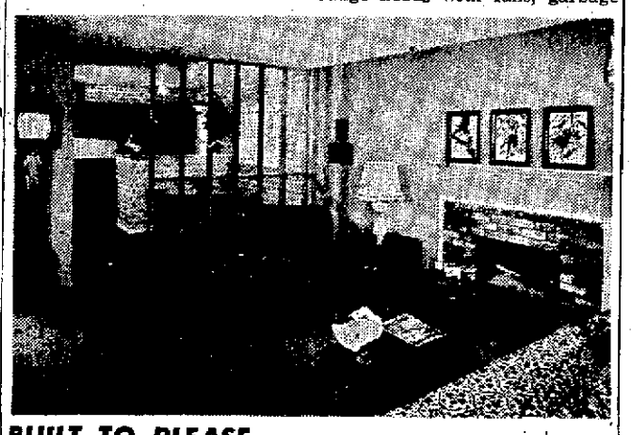

"Home Week visitors responded with enthusiasm to the beauty and luxuriousness of Braeburn Forest," a spokesman reported. "Especially popular with buyers is the convenient Anaheim location, just north of the Santa Ana Freeway at the Magnolia Ave. turnoff on Houston St."

Fashioned upon spacious sites, with attractive orange trees and developed lawns, the Braeburn Forest homes are available on equally attractive terms, it was noted, because financing arranged well in advance of recent government credit restrictions enable vets to buy on terms of nothing down but costs and impounds, with low monthly payments. Non-vets are offered FHA terms.

"Individuality is the word for homes in Braeburn Forest," an official explained. "From exterior design, floor plan and color scheme, to structural detail and placement on the site, these homes are custom-quality in planning and execution."

He particularly noted the large number of built-in conveniences, such as dressing tables in baths, oversize stall showers with glass doors, writing desks, range hoods with fans, garbage disposers and breakfast room off the kitchen.

The homes boast shake roofs, big master bedrooms with large double-door closets, brick fireplaces with log lighters, picture windows with walls of glass, flush birch kitchen cabinets, oversize two-car garages, forced-air unit heat with summer cooling fan and exterior brick planters.

PRINCESS ESTATES OFFERS

Heavy cedar shake roofs mark the provincial styling of the executive homes at Princess Estates being previewed today in Garden Grove.

Princess Estates Holding Preview Showing Today

Preview showing of the 1956 Princess Estates, Garden Grove, is slated for this week-end according to the sales agents, The Don Coleman Co.

This is the first showing of this select group of only 20 executive homes, Coleman said, stressing that buyers should see the homes this week-end for the best choice of floor-plan, color scheme and model.

Priced from $15,885 to $15,975, they bring the buyer a choice of provincial styling with heavy cedar shake roofs or contemporary design with sturdy rock roofs. All of the large homes have massive fireplaces, louvered wardrobe doors, large pullman baths, service porch and all homes feature a convenient circulating floor plan.

Built by Dale Properties, Inc., President Paul Bonzer stressed that the Princess Estates' kitchens, were designed for the "Princess of Today," with built-in range and oven in color, beautiful cabinet work, ceramic tile, large breakfast area and hood over range. Other quality features include hardwood floors, large sliding glass doors and musical inter-com with radio and four speaker outlets to various parts of the house.

DRAWING BUYERS

Furnished models of California contemporary homes are attracting buyers in record numbers to Chapman-Magnolia Park in Garden Grove. Above is one of the typical furnished models open for inspection.

Chapman-Magnolia Park Setting Record in Sales

Record-breaking sales were reported again last week at Chapman-Magnolia Park in nearby Garden Grove, a spokesman for Ajax Construction Co., said.

Furnished models of the California Contemporary and modern 4-bedroom, 3-bedroom-and-den and 3-bedroom homes with 1, 2 or 3 baths are open for inspection daily.

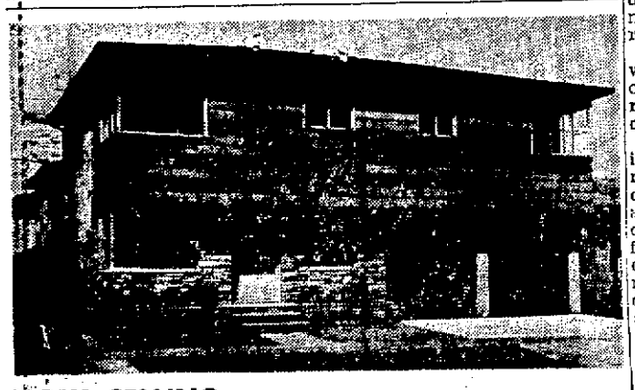

They are reached from Long Beach by driving east on 7th St., past the Veterans Hospital to Highway 39, north one-half mile to Chapman Ave. and east to Chapman-Magnolia Park.

Of special importance to GI home-seekers is the fact that these homes are still available for no down payment, no closing costs and no impounds. Monthly payments on homes ranging in price from $11,600 to $13,900 run from $61.41 to $73.39 for principal and interest.

Country life features of residences in this final unit, themed as "distinctive rustic," are interiors where wall space, windows and use of floor space make effective and restful decoration.

Imaginative use of modern wall textures, finishings and color stylings spur individual decorating talents, it was pointed out.

Appointments and conveniences are built-in gas ovens and ranges in a virtual rainbow of colors and hues, complete with automatic timing devices and controls, spacious built-in breakfast nook; large picture windows especially engineered for maximum light and controlled draft-free ventilation.

NOW SELLING

Built by Paul McKenzie Jr., well known developer and builder of apartments and luxury homes, "Bixby Manor," an 11-unit own-your-own apartment, is now open for sales, Realtor Marion Davisson announced. It is located at 1825 E. 3rd St., within walking distance of the beach, Bixby Park and shopping. The apartments are singles and one or two bedrooms. Miss Davisson will maintain her office in the manor until it is sold.

Brookhurst Plaza Quality Construction Is Stressed

"Brookhurst Plaza Unit 2 is a real investment in quality construction and a future of good living," said Frank R. Hart, sales manager for Walker & Lee, Inc., agents for the Anaheim development. "Brookhurst Plaze incorporates all the excellent features home buyers are seeking today," Hart said, in noting the outstanding qualities of these homes, built by R. & W. Construction Co., "and one of the added attractions at Brookhurst Plaza is the completely enclosed rear yard for privacy and hours of relaxation or entertaining in the patio area."

The 3 and 4 bedroom, 2 bath homes are priced from $12,900 with payments from $66.44, Hart said, and veterans may purchase them for no down payment. Non-veterans can get new FHA 30-year terms for a down payment as low as $1,900.

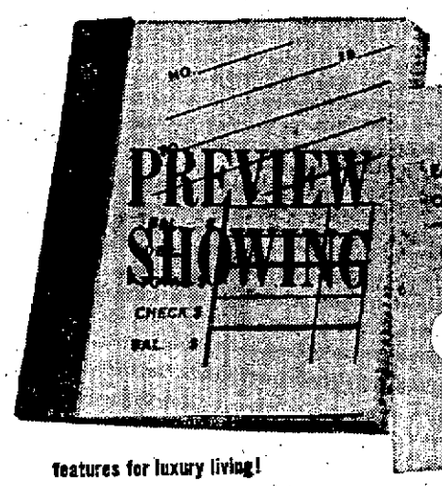

Brookhurst Plaza is on Brookhurst Ave., just north of La Palma and is reached from Los Angeles by driving out the Santa Ana Freeway to La Palma, then east to Brookhurst and north to the model homes. From Long Beach, drive out Carson (Lincoln Highway) to Euclid, turn north, cross the Freeway to La Palma, west to Brookhurst and north to the model homes.

IN RANCHO SANTIAGO

The ultimate in custom home design is being offered at Rancho Santiago in Santa Ana with the grand opening slated for today. Built by the firm of Norwood and DeLonge, 4 models located at Bristol Ave. and Memory Lane, are now on display.

Rancho Santiago Custom Homes in Grand Opening

The official grand opening of Rancho Santiago will take place today when 4 beautiful models of the select group of custom homes go on display in Santa Ana.

Built by the firm of Norwood and DeLonge, the "Coronado," the "Monterey," the "LaJolla," will join the "Santiago House" in showing the newest trends in building, landscaping and "friendly contemporary" furnishings, according to the sales agents Hoffman and Pilant.

"The spacious family room, separated from the kitchen by a large serving bar and situated just off the patio area is one of the many innovations by the builder in designing a luxurious but completely livable home," a spokesman for the sales firm said.

Other quality features listed were large double fireplace, built-in range and oven, dishwasher and offered as optional equipment in the new Dustronic air cleaner. Designed to eliminate most causes of hay fever and allergies, the Dustronic air cleaners acts as a filter keeping out dust and other impurities.

Easy financing arrangements may be made, the builder stated, and the Rancho Santiago homes may be custom designed to the desires of the buyers.

Located at Bristol and Memory Lane (Garden Grove Blvd.), visitors may see the models by driving straight out Garden Grove Blvd. to Memory Lane.

IN HOME FAIR

Near the Long Beach area, the Anaheim Village Home Fair is offering 16 different exterior designs in provincial and contemporary styling to buyers. Qualified vets may buy for nothing down, except costs and impounds, and low FHA terms are available.

Wide Selection Offered Anaheim Village Buyers

Sixteen different exterior designs in both contemporary and provincial styling are being offered at the Anaheim Village Homes Fair, with a wide variety of floor plans and features, according to a spokesman for the sales agents, Walker and Lee. Prices suit every budget, it was added.

The "Blue Ribbon" kitchen with the built-in range and oven, dishwasher, washer-dryer in color to blend with the embossed floor covering and large wallpapered dinette, is the ultimate in kitchen beauty and convenience, according to the sales agents, along with the disposal and copper-tone hood over the range area.

Rich paneling, a choice of fireplace styles, glass walls to patio and conveniently arranged floor plans in the three and four-bedroom homes were other advantages cited by the firm.

Available to qualified vets for no down payment except costs and impounds, the homes may be purchased on easy FHA arrangements, it was stated.

Within a few miles of the Long Beach area, the homes may be reached by driving out Lincoln (Carson) to Euclid Ave. Turn south on Euclid to the furnished models.

Says Walnut Manor Price Low on Present Market

Buyers of the first unit at Walnut Manor are really going to get a bargain, explains the builder. This tract was late in getting started, and sales prices were based upon VA appraisals made last March. Since then, costs have risen at least 10 per cent, he added. So those fortunate buyers who purchase homes in the first unit will save $1500.

"Don't take our word for it. Just come down and see for yourselves," stated Louis Herson, the builder.

Walnut Manor is ideally located between Disneyland and the new Broadway Department Store, just one block south of the Santa Ana Freeway, in the fine residential area of Anahcim.

Vets may still purchase for no money down and 30 years to pay while non-vets may yet avail themselves of low FHA terms.

Three and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes are priced from $12,450 with payments from $63 monthly.

Some of the luxury features to be found in these customized homes are choice of 4 kitchen appliances with no money down; raised oak floors; wood burning fireplaces; natural birch kitchen cabinets; 75,000 BTU forced air heat with switch for summer ventilation; steel sliding windows; genuine lath and plaster; 2 large dining areas; living room wall mahagony paneled; center hall plans; sliding glass doors or walls of glass; front yard landscaped.

From Long Beach and vicinity, drive east on Carson (Highway 91-Lincoln Ave. in Anaheim) to Santa Ana Freeway; right 3 blocks to Walnut, then right on Walnut, to models.

Skylark Terrace Offers California Living

A new home model which features a built-in barbecue in the kitchen has been introduced to Skylark Terrace Town and Country unit, according to Bill Tietz, of the Tietz Construction Co.

"This plan also includes the family room, its large, sandstone fireplace with raised hearth in addition to the regular three bedrooms and two baths," Tietz explained.

"We incorporated this design," Tietz continued, "because it fits so pleasantly into the Southern California style of living, especially in an area such as Skylark Terrace, where all the lots are spacious and suitable to the indoor-outdoor tempo of living and entertaining."

Besides the family room plan, there are still many Skylark Terrace homes available with 4 bedrooms and 2 baths, Tietz said.

Located in a preferred section of smog-free Garden Grove, Skylark Terrace homes include such luxury features as sliding glass "lanai" walls in the living rooms, extra large closets and cabinets, 80,000 B.T.U. furnaces, genuine lath and plaster throughout, golden hardwood floors and efficiently designed circular floor plans.

In the Hotpoint all-electric kitchens there is ceramic tile, Zolatone wall finish, electric exhaust fans and built-in ranges and ovens, dishwashers and garbage disposals. The two ceramic tile baths also have Zolatone wall finish and etched glass shower doors.

Exteriors have brick trim, shingle and dolomite rock roofs and 3-foot eave overhangs. Front yards are landscaped.

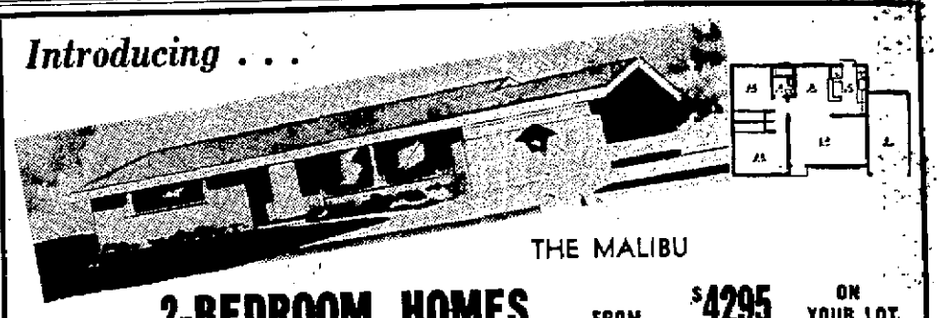

To reach the models furnished by Lloyd's of Long Beach, from Los Angeles take the Santa Ana Freeway, turn south on La Palma, which becomes Brookhurst, to Skylark Terrace Town & Country unit at Brookhurst and Chapman. From Long Beach take 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and turn north on Brookhurst.

ROOMY AND CHEERFUL

There's plenty of space, both indoors and outdoors, at Skylark Terrace Town & Country unit for gracious Southern California living. These homes have spacious living rooms with sliding "lanai" walls of glass that overlook large back yard areas planned for relaxation and entertaining.

SIGNATURE HOME
Shown is one of many three and four-bedroom, two-bath Signature Homes with built-in electric ranges and ovens, now exemplified by a display of five model homes at Hansen and Crescent Aves., Buena Park.

Signature Homes Expected to Sell Fast

National Home Week showing continues today for Midwood Construction Co.'s new three and four-bedroom, two-bath Signature Homes now rising in Buena Park at Hansen and Crescent Aves.

Priced at approximately $14,000, the new homes, it was stated, are the first in their price range to feature color-matched all-electric kitchens.

Terms for the new homes, it was stated by Midwood officials, will be nothing down for vets, except nominal costs and impounds, on long-term VA-guaranteed loans.

Included in the price and terms are color-matched built-in General Electric ranges, ovens, combination automatic clothes washer-dryers, automatic pre-rinsing dishwashers and garbage disposals. The built-in range, it was noted, has push button controls, while the eye-level oven is clock-controlled.

"The appliances are all built in as part of the house and make this offering of 169 three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes not only one of the last 'no down payment' opportunities for vets, but the best in our opinion," it was stated by Jerome Snyder and Max Levine, who head the Midwood Construction Co.

"These homes will sell fast because of their superior Buena Park location near Knott's Berry Farm, their quality construction, their all-electric color-matched kitchens and their no down payment terms," the builders stated, pointing out that 220 Signature Homes offered recently in North Long Beach were sold in one week end.

Other kitchen features which will be displayed in five model homes furnished by Lloyd's of Long Beach—include natural finish birch cabinets, ceramic tile counters, electric fan over range and Forentine pattern linoleum.

The homes have wood-burning fireplaces, forced air heating, Pre-View aluminum sliding windows and Panaview sliding glass doors.

May Co. Sales, Earnings Show Big Mid-Year Gain

ST. LOUIS—Net sales of The May Department Stores Co. were $208,918,000 in the first half of 1955, or 8.9 per cent greater than sales of $191,792,000 in the same period of last year, Morton D. May, president, announced in a report to stockholders on the six months ended July 31.

Net earnings totaled $4,331,000, as compared with $3,202,000. Earnings, after deduction of preferred dividends, were equal to 64 cents per common share in the first half of 1955, as compared with 45 cents a share in the corresponding period of 1954.

May reported that new branch stores had been opened in St. Louis and Los Angeles, that a 13-floor addition to Kaufmann's department store in downtown Pittsburgh had been completed, and that a new branch store in Denver was nearing completion.

* * * *

THE ST. LOUIS STORE, the third branch of Famous-Barr Co., opened Aug. 19. It is the major unit in the new Northland Shopping Center, which, May said, is designed to serve 500,000 persons living in suburban areas north of St. Louis and across the Mississippi River in Illinois.

The fourth branch unit of the May Co. in Los Angeles opened Sept. 12 in North Hollywood. This store, built to serve the suburban San Fernando Valley area north of Los Angeles, is the May Department Stores Company's largest branch store. It has four upper floors and a basement, with a total area of 452,500 square feet, and parking space for 3,000 cars.

* * * *

A BRANCH OF THE MAY Co. in Denver, located in the University Hills Shopping Center, will open within two weeks.

He reported that a second Denver branch, to be located in a shopping center, will be erected on a recently-acquired 44-acre site seven miles west of the downtown district.

The 13-floor addition to Kaufman's in downtown Pittsburgh is complete and in full operation, May said.

Homes in Glen Dell Park Still Sell at Old Price

At today's market buyers would have to pay at least $1,000 more than just a few months ago for a quality home but the builders of Glen Dell Park in Garden Grove have not raised prices.

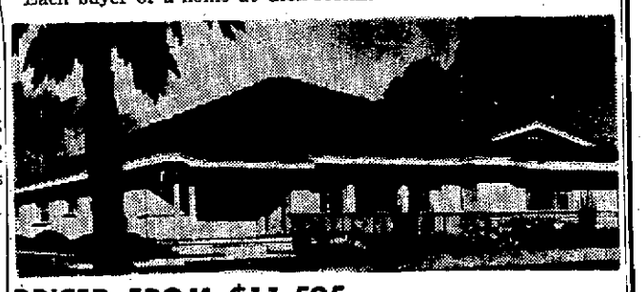

That was the announcement of Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents for the third and final unit, where several first-choice residences are back on the market due to the failure of a few veteran-buyers to qualify.

With homes starting at $11,595, the $4,100,000 planned-home community is easily reached via the Santa Ana Freeway to Harbor Blvd.; right on Harbor to Chapman Ave.; right on Chapman to West St., then right again on West to the model homes.

Each buyer of a home at Glen Dell Park is given free a mortgage payment insurance policy with premiums paid for one year. The policy provides enough money to pay monthly installments in the event the buyer is unable to work because of an insured disability.

There is a wide choice of three-bedroom or two-bedroom-and-a-den homes, all with covered concrete terraces; separate service porches and natural finish wood kitchen cabinets.

Other luxury appointments include genuine hardwood floors laid over diagonal sub-floors; waste disposers in double sinks with ceramic tile drainboards; genuine lath and plaster walls; copperized range hoods with exhaust fans; inlaid "spatter" linoleum in kitchens and bathrooms and coralite tile in the bathrooms.

PRICED FROM $11,595

Despite the rising costs of labor and materials, the price of homes at Glen Dell Park have not been raised and a three-bedroom home such as shown above still may be bought for as little as $11,595, the developer announced.

Driver Is Nabbed As He Nears Goal

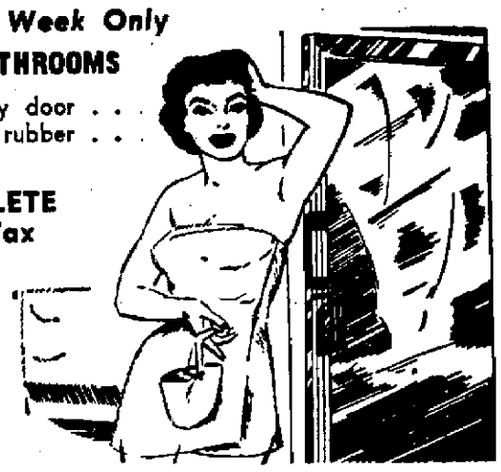

WEST WARWICK, R. I. (AP)—Medford E.Johnson, 22, of Bogota, Ill., bought a car in his home town and started to drive to Quonset, R. I., where he is stationed with the U. S. Navy.

When he was only 12 miles from his base, police noticed for the first time that the car had no registration plates.

He was arrested by patrolman Thomas Valliere, a former Marine sergeant, on a charge of driving an unregistered car.

Oil Firms Mum on Cut in Imports

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—Eighteen major oil importing companies grimly kept their silence Saturday on whether they will voluntarily reduce their imports or risk government-imposed curbs.

A cut-or-else ultimatum was delivered to them Sept. 13 by Defense Mobilization Director Arthur S. Flemming. He gave them until next Wednesday, Sept. 21, to submit recommendations on what should be done but added bluntly that unless excessive imports were reduced to protect domestic producers, the government would have to act.

The 18 companies named by Flemming were Asiatic Petroleum, New York; Atlantic Refining, Philadelphia; Cities Service, New York; Eastern States Petroleum, Houston; Gulf, Pittsburg; Phillips Petroleum, Bartlesville, Okla.; Shell Oil, New York; Shell Caribbean, New York; Sinclair Refining, New York; Socony Mobil, New York; Southwestern Petroleum, Fort Worth; Standard Oil of California; Standard (of Indiana); Standard (of New Jersey); Sun Oil, Philadelphia; Texas Company, New York; Tidewater Associated, San Francisco, and McBride Oil, LaBlanca, Texas.

Award Homes Still No Down to Veteran

Emphasizing that all their homes will be available to veterans with no down payment, Award Homes are showing their newest development now at Golden West and Garden Grove Blvd., between Long Beach and Garden Grove.

Seven model homes, completely furnished, and all different styling, have been arranged in a courtyard for convenient inspection and comparison and will be open daily until 9 p.m.

These famous Award Homes are being made available to veterans for the first time by the builders, a Volk-McLain Co., who have built more than 3,200 homes throughout Southern California.

All of the dwellings have 4 bedrooms, or 3 bedrooms and a den, and 2 bath and 2-car garages. Monthly payments are set at sixty-one dollars.

The Award Homes are reached from Long Beach by taking 7th St. (which becomes Garden Grove Blvd.) to Golden West St., then south to the site.

With their central location, Award Homes are close to markets and shopping centers in adjoining Garden Grove, and within 15 minutes drive from Long Beach, Los Angeles, Lakewood Village, recreation centers and beaches.

Many features, usually found only in luxury type dwellings, are included in Award Homes. A combination radio and intercommunication system from a master panel in the kitchen enable conversation to be carried on in different areas, and also pipes music to different rooms.

The extra large, ranch type kitchens are a homemaker's dream. Included are full-formed plastic sink tops with back splash in newest colors and patterns, custom designed food bar, and natural birch kitchen cabinets. Also featured are garbage disposers and a forced air exhaust fan.

Large wall-of-glass picture windows face the patio to bring into relief the architect's design of outdoor-indoor living. Bermuda roofs with generous overhang are topped with white, red, green, or pink crushed rock. Added to the outdoor motif are oversized covered and trellised porches and terraces.

NEW CONCEPT IN HOME

One of 14 new 1956 Award Homes being offered to veterans on no down payment terms at Golden West St. and Garden Grove Blvd. is shown here. This home is a totally new concept in modern living. Basic idea is a big ranch kitchen and an adjacent family room, all with an expensive, "open" feeling. Family room is a dual purpose room, a play area for children or grown-ups during the day, a recreation room at night; or, a dining room during the day, a tap room at night. It is separate from the living room and sleeping wing.

There's Big Business In Little Ponies

PONCA CITY, Okla. (U.P.) — Raising ponies is big business. E. P. Gonterman and his brother, Ray, paid a record $8,500 for a four-year-old blue roan mare and a copper sorrel colt at the annual Perry, Okla., Shetland pony sale this summer.

E. P. started raising the Shetlands as a hobby 10 years ago. The hobby developed into the Beau Cheval Shetland pony farm at the green gables farm west of here.

Back-Seat Driver

CHASKA, Minn. (U.P.)—A tipsy motorist slipped into the back seat of his car, fumbled around for a moment in alarm, then telephoned Sheriff Lester Melchert: "They stripped it clean, sheriff, even the steering wheel and foot pedals are gone."

To Wed Realtor

HOLLYWOOD (U.P.) — Actress Mary Castle, who bears a striking resemblance to actress Rita Hayworth, announced her engagement to Wallace Asbury, local realtor. The couple will be married New Year's Eve.

A DEVELOPMENT OF GEORGE M. HOLSTEIN & SONS

ONE OF THE NEW MODELS

Added power and new cab comforts, plus a wide selection of two-tone color combinations, are features of the new International truck S line introduced by the motor truck division of International Harvester Company. The International S-165 truck-tractor with gross vehicle weight rating of 16,000 pounds and gross combination weight rating of 29,000 pounds, is one of scores of models in this new line.

International Has New Line of Trucks

A colorful, attractive new line, designated the S line, has been introduced by the motor truck division of International Harvester Company, it was announced by J. B. Speers, branch manager, 537 W. Anaheim, Long Beach, International sales headquarters for the Long Beach territory.

New models from the line, combining style-setting design with new, rugged power and durability, will go on display at the International Harvester showroom Monday night.

Speers said the S line offers a range of 4 and 6-wheel gasoline and LPG-powered motor trucks with gross vehicle weight ratings from 4,200 to 33,000 pounds.

"New appearance and cab comfort, a wide selection of eye-catching two-tone color combinations, and the solid all-truck power and performance that has always characterized Internationals are leading features of the new line," he said. "Light and medium-duty truck specializations are offered in the S line to a degree never before achieved in the new-line introduction."

S-line models, Speers explained, range from the light-duty S-100 series through the heavy-duty S-180 series. The line includes a wide range of pickup, panel, stake, and multi-stop delivery models with factory-mounted, added-capacity bodies; farm trucks, Roadliner truck-tractors, and other conventional chassis models for medium and heavy-duty hauling requirements in general or specialized fields; five cab-forward models; fire truck, school bus, and 4 and 6-wheel Loadstar dump-truck chassis; and three 4-wheel-drive models including a new light-duty S-120 (4x4) rated at 7,000 pounds GVW.

Larger International engines with increased horsepower have been made standard equipment in many S-line models, providing maximum usable horsepower for normal truck-driving requirements.

Here's Proof Advertising Pays

MANILA (AP) — Someone stole two air conditioning units from the shop of Victorino Sablan. The shopkeeper advertised in the newspapers next day that he wanted to buy a couple of air conditioning units and got a prompt offer.

Sablan went to buy them, taking a policeman with him.

The policeman arrested a suspect who tried to sell Sablan his two missing units.

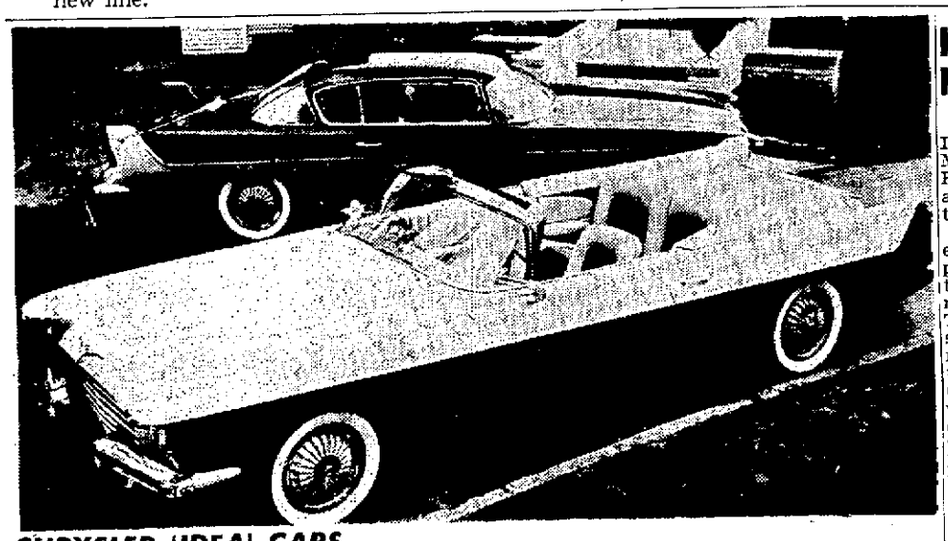

Auto Hits "Boat"

TRENTON, Neb. (LE)—A little Council Bluffs, Ia., boy received only bruises when his "boat" was hit by an auto here. The "boat" was a log Sidney Porter, 2, was floating on in Swanson Lake. The log was hit by a runaway car that ran into the lake.

Fire reports show that 90% of all our forest fires are caused by well-meaning folks like yourself who were careless for a fatal moment with cigarettes, matches, campfires, etc. Such carelessness caused 500 forest fires a day last year! So please—won't you be extra careful when you're outdoors this summer? Remember—only you can prevent forest fires!

CHRYSLER 'IDEA' CARS

Here are Flight Sweep I and Flight Sweep II, new "idea" cars from the styling studios of Chrysler Corporation's engineering division. Flight Sweep I is the four-passenger sports convertible and Flight Sweep II the sports hardtop. Identical with the exception of interior and exterior colors and roof treatment, the companion cars were built to compare hardtop and convertible styling on the same basic body form. Although these cars will not be manufactured for sale to the public, some of the new ideas may be employed in the production cars of the future. A prime purpose in designing and building the new "idea" cars was to sample public acceptance of new automotive styling concepts. Although the cars are of a sports type, they were designed to suit American tastes and have no European influence whatever.

Vets Need No Down in Shamrock Park

One of the most appealing factors in the popularity of Shamrock Park after its grand opening last week is the terms available to veterans, according to Frank Hart, sales manager for Walker & Lee, Inc., exclusive agents for this new Garden Grove development.

"For a limited time only veterans may purchase these 3 and 4-bedroom, 1 and 2-bath homes at Shamrock Park for absolutely no down payment," Hart said. The homes are priced from $11,575 with monthly payments as low as $58.66, including principal and interest. Non-veterans may purchase the sleek, modern-designed Shamrock Park homes for as little as $750 down, on FHA terms.

Refrigerators, stoves, washing machines and such appliances may be purchased and the cost included in veterans' monthly payments, Hart stated.

Shamrock Park homes are designed for contemporary living. They are available in a variety of floor plans and attractive elevations, and one of the most important features in keeping with the trend for indoor-outdoor living are the large living rooms with walls of glass and real fireplaces, adjoined by barbecues in the spacious patio areas.

Other luxury features include: efficiently designed kitchens with ceramic tile and garbage disposals, family-size bathrooms with colored plumbing fixtures, large bedrooms with Woodall sliding wardrobe doors, forced air heating, cork and asphalt tile flooring, walls of genuine lath and plaster, steel sash windows, and large two-car garages with storage space and work areas.

Shamrock Park is reached from Los Angeles by taking the Santa Ana Freeway to Harbor and turning south. From Long Beach take 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and turn south at Harbor to Shamrock Park model homes.

OFFERED VETS FOR NO DOWN

Shamrock Park is offering homes such as this to veterans for a limited time with no down payment while non-vets need but $750.

Gas Price War in Colorado

DENVER (UP)—A full-fledged gasoline price is raging in Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo. The last of the larger oil companies—Standard Oil has entered the scrap.

About 1,000 service stations in the three cities are involved. There is talk that the price cutting may spread all along the east side of the rockies.

the Petroleum Retailers Assn. of Colorado, said the war could be "a long, drawn-out thing."

Indications were that prices might not go much below present levels. Independents offered regular gasoline at 23.9 cents a gallon and most larger firms at 25.5. Independents were selling premium gasoline at 26.9 and larger companies at 28.5.

James A. Coffman, director of

E. M. Stringer, president of Oriental Refining Co., said prices at the company's outlets "might go lower" and added: "It's up to the other fellow if the war ends. We try to sell what little we can and they can do what they want."

Oriental cut its gas price to 23.9 cents two months ago, Stringer said, as part of a long range marketing program.

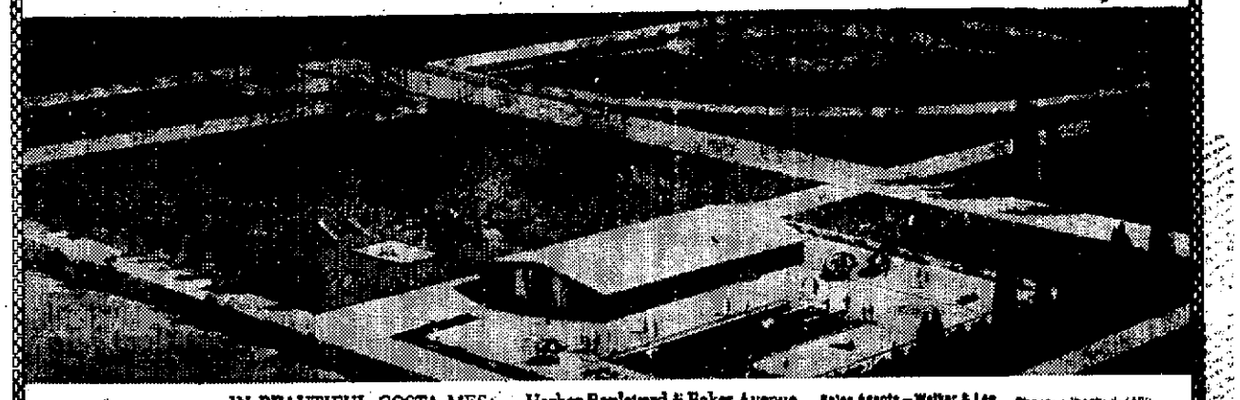

Sales Set Record

DETROIT (UP)—General Motors reported its retail sales of passenger cars from Jan. 1 through Sept. 10 this year reached a record total of 2,701,040.

Used car sales for the same period totaled 3,478,415, also a new high mark.

Aldon Buena Park Homes Attract Record Throngs

Buena Plaza's new 1956 "Triumph Series" exhibit of eight furnished model homes has established a new record of attendance by visitors during National Home Week, it was reported by the Aldon Construction Co., developers of the new $50,000,000 2,100-home planned community in Buena Park.

Opening of the Home Week observance last weekend brought to the furnished display dwellings the largest crowds in the history of the fast-selling development, and plans were set for additional thousands this weekend, during the close of the observance.

"We are proud that national attention has been focused upon Buena Plaza as part of this important Home Week show," an Aldon spokesman commented. "Our visitors have included, not only thousands of home-seekers from over the Southland, but also builders, architects and industry representatives from a number of adjoining states."

The Buena Plaza "Greatest Home Show on Earth" consists of eight "Triumph Series" 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes, furnished by Aaron Schultz of Long Beach and Anaheim. It is located, just off the Santa Ana Freeway, on La Palma Ave., east of Miller St., in fast-growing Buena Park, close to Knott's Berry Farm and Disneyland.

E. (Billy) Hamburg, general sales agent for the property, said vets' terms of nothing down but costs and impounds, approved prior to the latest government credit restrictions on GI building, still are available, with monthly terms from $66.67 principal and interest.

Home Week at Buena Plaza underscores such Aldon "Luxurized" features as four different floor-to-ceiling fireplace treatments in brick or slumpstone and solid hardwood paneling.

The 3 and 4-bedroom homes have built-in Western-Holly gas range and oven with copperized range hood.

Other features include sliding glass walls, rich oak block floors, natural finish kitchen cabinets, Waste-King garbage pulverators, Dish-Whiz semi-automatic dishwashers and folding partitions to separate kitchens from service areas.

The Aldon Construction Co., developers of many planned communities with a total of more than 25,000 "luxurized" homes in recent years, announced that Buena Plaza is to have its own $7,000,000 super shopping center and schools.

IN BUENA PLAZA

Aldon's newest "luxurized" homes, typified above, are three and four-bedroom, two-bath dwellings in the "Triumph Series" in Buena Plaza's new unit located conveniently in Buena Park at Miller St. and La Palma Ave.

Car Dealers Urged to Seek Highway Aid

WASHINGTON — America's new car and truck dealers were admonished to stand solidly behind Federal road legislation in 1956, or face a slowly contracting market for their products.

National Automobile Dealers Association, warned auto dealers that the condition of streets and highways has reached emergency proportions. Harlow H. Curtice, president of General Motors Corp., said he could think of no group of citizens "who have a greater capacity or a more compelling reason" to take positive action in the highway field than the nation's automobile retailers.

Although everyone knows we need more roads, Curtice pointed out, "there is a very real need to stimulate public demand and support for the kind of action that will really meet our highway needs—fully and quickly."

To illustrate the pressing need for more highways now, Curtice said he anticipated that motor vehicle registrations will rise in just 10 years from today's 58 million to 81 million—an increase of 40 per cent. All dealers were called on to lead and support local, state and national movements to solve our road shortage in 1956.

The present highway shortage is costing the nation far more than delays, irritation and money, the association said. It is also costing lives. An adequate Federal aid highway program would save 3,500 lives a year in the next decade.

IN EXCELSIOR VILLAGE

The fourth bedroom of the family-sized homes at Excelsior Village in Garden Grove, with an entry to the patio area, may serve as playroom, den or it is ideal for a child's room. The no-down terms available to vets may expire very soon, it was announced this week.

Urges Vets to Act While No-Down Terms Prevail

The "not one penny down" terms at Excelsior Village may expire very soon it was announced by a spokesman of the Don Coleman Co., sales agents. The present finance arrangements allow a qualified vet to move in for nothing down and with monthly payments as low as $65.48, including principal and interest. According to Coleman, however, the new restrictions placed on veteran financing will increase the down payment shortly.

The large 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes are part of a planned community that will include a large shopping center and school.

On large pool-size lots, the homes include the new Fire-Belle alarm system, built-in range and oven, washer-d yer, [illegible] Bel-Air kitchen cabinets and built-in forced air heat with summer cooling switch. The fourth bedroom, with its own entry to the patio area serves a multi-purpose as den, playroom or ideally suited for a child's room.

Buyers were urged by Coleman to see the homes this week in order to take advantage of the no down terms to veterans.

Visitors from Long Beach may see the furnished models by driving straight out Westminster Blvd. to Wright St. in Garden Grove.

POPULAR MODEL

The Georgetown (above), four-bedroom, two-bath home, is one of the most popular models at Beverly Gardens, whose builder, George J. Heltzer, is celebrating his 30th anniversary in the building industry.

Beverly Gardens Builder Holds Outstanding Record

Imagine a skyscraper 869 times higher than the Los Angeles City Hall occupying a site equal in area to that of 2,271 football fields!

That, in effect, is the achievement of George J. Heltzer, veteran Los Angeles builder, who has constructed more than $219,000,000 worth of buildings.

Observing his 30th anniversary in the building industry this week, Heltzer was informed of the dramatic "skyscraper" as computed by a firm of statisticians and confirmed by Univac.

Since breaking ground in 1925 for his first structure, the president of George J. Heltzer and Associates has completed 21,738 buildings covering a total ground area of 108,690,000 square feet.

Each floor of the mythical tower represents a single Heltzer-built unit. Currently his firm is selling the second unit of Beverly Gardens, residential community in nearby Garden Grove, where sales now total $1,400,000.

Construction schedules have been advanced to meet the mounting demands, it was reported by Seymour R. Berman, a Heltzer executive.

"Qualified veterans still can buy a home in Beverly Gardens for nothing down but costs and impounds," Berman said.

Here in the "Beverly Hills of Orange County" families of young executives and others of discerning taste will find homes with 3 and 4 gedrooms or three bedrooms and a den, with two spacious baths. Two-car garages are either attached or detached.

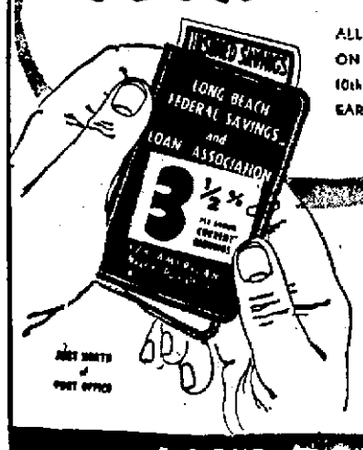

Fourteen model homes on a landscaped street are open for inspection. From Long Beach, drive out 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) and turn left on either 9th or West St. to Chapman Ave. and sales office. From Harbor Blvd. turn west on Chapman Ave. to West St.

Homestead Gardens Sales Soar; No Down to Veteran

Large crowds and stepped up sales were reported last week at Homestead Gardens following the opening of newly furnished model homes on Trask Ave., between Wright and Cypress Sts., south of the Santa Ana Freeway via its La Palma St. turnoff and Brookhurst St.

Spokesman for Walker & Lee, sales agents, said favorable terms for both vets and non-vets are stimulating sales of the 81 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes in the first unit.

Terms for vets, it was emphasized, still feature no down payment except costs and impounds, and monthly payments from $58.49, including both principal and interest.

FHA terms for non-vets also feature low monthly payments with down payments as low as $950, plus costs and impounds, the spokesman said.

Spacious lots containing a minimum of 7,200 square feet, he said, are a popular feature.

The model homes, with furnishings by Aaron Schultz of Long Beach, exemplify the many features which are being built into the new residences, including thermostat-controlled heating, 8-foot wide sliding glass walls, Modernfold doors in many models, sliding door wardrobe closets and a snack bar in addition to a spacious dining room.

Also featured are mahogany kitchen cabinets, Waste King garbage pulverators, steel casement windows; fibre glass insulation, acoustic ceilings, lath and plaster walls, extra-large garage with storage space, wide driveways, weatherstripped doors, king-size glass-doored shower stalls, heavy multi-colored rock roofs; and attractive redwood exterior trim.

MODELS ON DISPLAY

Shown is one of 81 new three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes now rising at Homestead Gardens on Trask Ave., between Wright and Cypress Sts., south of the Santa Ana Freeway and Garden Grove Ave. via Brookhurst St. Two newly furnished models are on display.

Report from Austin

EFFECT ON FAMILY-LIFE

Air conditioning of homes appears to give occupants more rest, enables housewives to work faster, and contributes generally to better family life and health, according to a report from the NAHB Research Institute.

Air Conditioned Village at Austin

Studies of families in the Village and families nearby in non-air conditioned homes resulted in the following findings:

Adults in air conditioned homes averaged 8.1 hours of sleep a night during summer months as compared to 6.9 for adults in non-air conditioned houses. Children averaged 9.5 in air conditioned houses as against 8.9. In air conditioned houses children napped 1.5 hours per day against 5 for non-air conditioned houses.

95% of the adults in conditioned houses and 100% of the children indicated they woke rested, as compared with 60% of adults in non-conditioned houses and 40% of children.

Air conditioned families did far more entertaining than non-conditioned families. The former averaged 14 hours a week for adults as against 5, and 27 hours for children as against 7.

In conditioned homes 1.5 hours per week were required to do laundry in summer months as against 2 hours. For general cleaning, housewives averaged 4 hours per week in air conditioned homes as against 6 for the other.

An interesting sidelight was the fact that 14 wives in the non-air conditioned group took down drapes, installed seat covers, and otherwise "decorated" for the summer. None of the wives in the air conditioned group decorated, although 16 of them said they used to in previous non-air conditioned homes.

Families spent more of their waking hours together, took more meals together and children spent more time indoors in air conditioned houses. Meals served in air conditioned homes contained 40% more calories although an analysis showed no appreciable difference in weight gain between air conditioned and non-air conditioned families.

Wives spent far more time on hobbies after air-conditioning and husbands brought far more office work home.

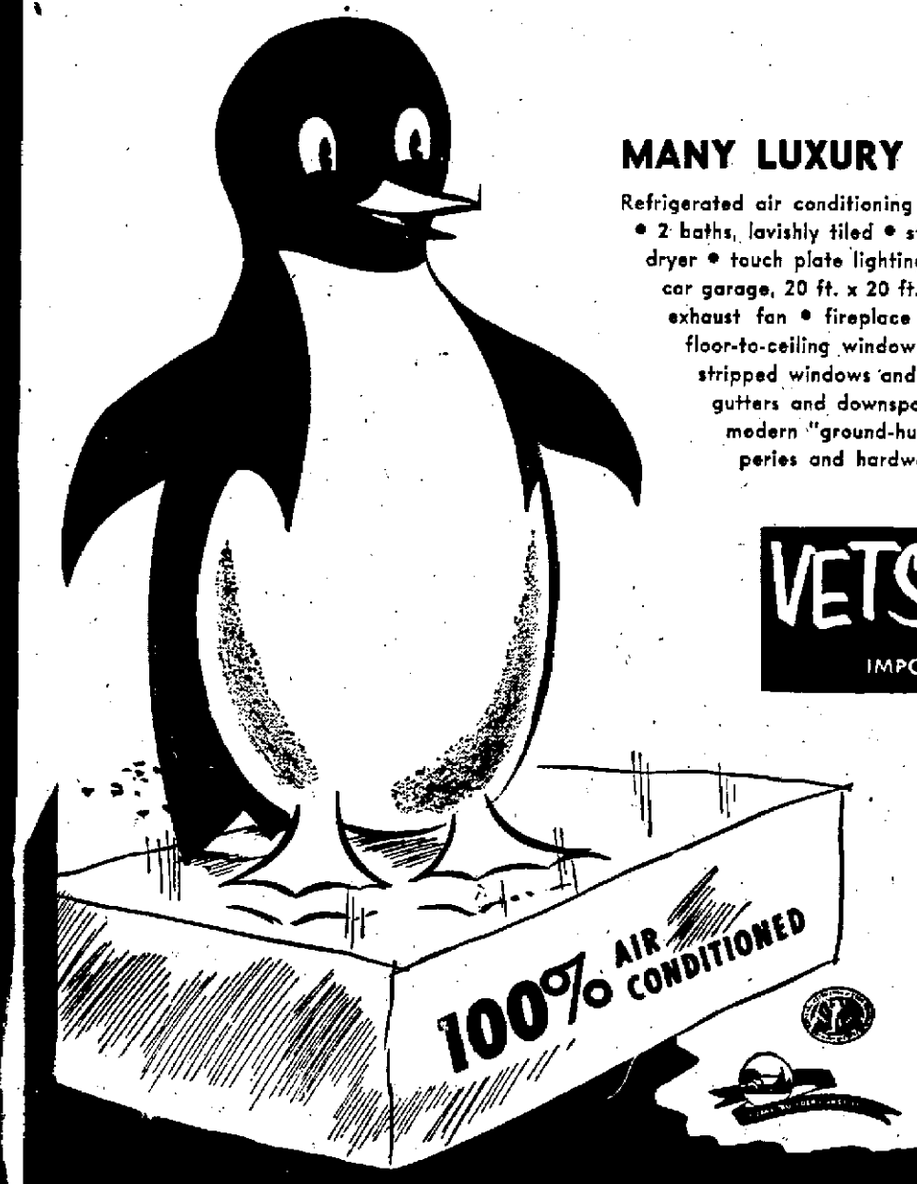

90% of children under 2 years in non-air conditioned homes suffered in some degree from heat rash during the summer. None was affected in the air conditioned homes.

Fairview Rancho Homes Provide Complete Colorful Landscaping

Every home at Fairview Ranchos in suburban Santa Ana these days is a veritable individual "Fall Flower Show," Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents, said yesterday.

As word of the colorful floral displays spreads the number of visitors and prospective home buyers has zoomed, he added.

Complete landscaping with lawns, trees, shrubs, plants and ground cover, planned by registered landscape architects, is included in the purchase price starting at $12,850.

Three bedroom or 2 bedroom-and-a-den homes are still to be had by qualified veterans for nothing down except costs and impounds on 30-year maturity loans payable from $65.11 monthly for principal and interest.

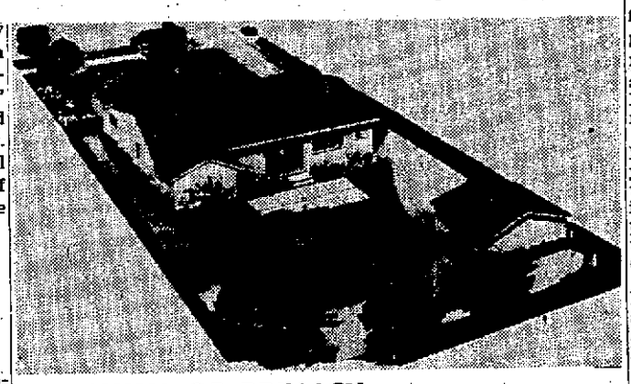

Fairview Ranchos can be reached from Los Angeles via the Santa Ana Freeway to Harbor Blvd.; south on Harbor to Edinger; left on Edinger to Bristol; left on Bristol to Fairview.

Centered in the rear garden area is a 120-square foot concrete patio with decorative redwood dividers plus an attractive redwood planter box and seat that faces the patio. A bug-repellent light increases night enjoyment of the entire garden and the rear area is floodlighted by two lights.

Surrounding the entire garden is a redwood 5-foot-high fence in smart basket-weave.

Lots have a minimum of 6,000 square feet and big two car garages with built-in storage rack, are available either attached or detached.

Three basic floor plans with front or rear living rooms are available with a choice of 23 distinguished conventional exteriors accented by brick planters, flower pot shelves, redwood trims and ornamental window shutters.

MAXIMUM OF PRIVACY

Orange trees and complete sprinklered landscaping surround the attractive three-bedroom homes at Fairview Ranchos in Santa Ana. Note the five-foot redwood fence which assures maximum privacy in this typical home.

Champion Park Is Approaching Sellout

Champion Park, new Arnold Construction Co. residential community of 148 3- and 4-bedroom, 2-bath quality-built homes in Anaheim at the intersection of North and East Sts., is nearing a sellout, it was reported yesterday by the builders.

Success of highly individualized homes was attributed to such features as fully-draped walls of glass with sliding glass doors, built-in intercom systems taking music to all rooms, built-in Western-Holly gas ranges and ovens, built-in barbecues and a choice of brick or slumpstone fireplaces.

Also contributing to rapid sales is the opportunity for early buyers to choose color schemes, as well as to make a choice of draperies, all included in the low price of the homes.

"Buying picked up noticeably following the July 31 order boosting terms on many new homes," it was stated by a spokesman for the sales agents, Hoffman and Pliant Co.

"Terms remain the same at Champion Park, at least temporarily, and this is boosting sales," he said.

Qualified vets still can buy for nothing down, except costs and impounds with monthly payments from $66.70, principal and interest. Non-vets can still buy on low FHA terms.

Other features include 70,000 to 75,000 BTU thermostat-controlled heating, natural beech kitchen cabinets, Waste King garbage disposers, redwood fencing, front and side lawns and shrubs, and two-car garages with extra space for storage.

ANAHEIM HOMES

Custom-built appearance is stressed at Champion Park where 18 home stylings in three and four-bedroom, two-bath residences are being shown, as exemplified above. Built by Arnold Construction Co., the homes are located at East and North Sts., Anaheim.

Kitchens Are Highlight in Imperial Estates Home

Kitchens with natural wood finish cabinets, hammered copperized hardware and copperized range hood with exhaust fans are high lights of all homes in Imperial Estates Unit 9, now almost sold out.

So reported Frank Chandler of Pioneer Land Co., sales agents, yesterday, adding that qualified veterans still may buy for nothing down except costs and impounds at prices from $12,050 with monthly payments of $61.08 covering principal and interest.

Inspection is invited of 3 model homes at Unit 6, which immediately adjoins Unit 9. From Los Angeles take the Santa Ana Freeway to Pioneer Boulevard; turn right on Pioneer to Imperial Boulevard; turn right on Imperial to Curtis and King Road.

From Long Beach, take Lakewood Blvd. to Imperial, right on Imperial to Curtis and King Rd.

Construction features include genuine hardwood floors over raised subfloors; genuine lath and plaster ceilings and walls; sliding glass doors; garbage disposers; double sinks with colored ceramic tile worktops and splashes; service porches; colorful coralite tile around tub areas in bathrooms; 40-gallon gas water heaters; 65,000 BTU forced-air heating systems and semi-automatic dishwashers.

With a choice of 3 bedrooms or 2 bedrooms and a den, each of these high-quality homes has a larger-than-average 2-car garage.

NO DOWN FOR VETS

Three-bedroom homes, such as this, still may be purchased by veterans at Imperial Estates for nothing down but costs and impounds.

Three Schools Open Pools to Public Use

Public use of the city's three high school swimming pools will continue through the fall and winter as a feature of the Long Beach plan of co-ordinated school and municipal recreation, according to Walter L. Scott, director of municipal recreation.

The Jordan and Poly plunges will operate on identical evening schedules. All three pools will maintain the same Saturday schedules. There will be lifeguards on duty at each of the pools and an expert swimming instructor will give free lessons to beginners.

Pacific Law School to Reopen in October

Everyone is familiar with this area's educational system, ranging from kindergarten through post-graduate courses at State College, but few people know of Long Beach's own factory for potential Jerry Geislers.

It's the Pacific Coast University Law School, which will resume its classes on Oct. 3. The school, previously conducted at Poly High School, now will be held at Wilson High School.

The school boasts a courtroom full of successful graduates.

Dr. Carl H. Manson, school dean, will register beginning students Wednesday at 236 Newport Ave., while returning students will register there Sept. 29 and 30. The dean is a veteran of 25 years of teaching law here, at Loyola University and his alma mater, the University of Michigan.

* * * *

NEARLY 75 practicing attorneys in Long Beach were graduated from the local law school, Dr. Manson explains.

"Before the war, classes were conducted in Los Angeles," he says, "but after the war the demand was such that we established the Long Beach school."

Dr. Manson makes no pretense that the law course is easy.

"It requires work and study," he explains, "but approximately 75 per cent of the students who continue past the first two weeks actually complete the entire four-year course."

Freshmen start off with courses in contracts, torts, civil negligence cases, criminal law and legal methods. Then they move into more involved legal studies.

Among those who obtained their legal training at the local law school are Mark Corcoran and Al Williams, formerly of the City Attorney's office, and Dan Barnes of the Public Defender's Office.

Gov. Goodwin J. Knight served on the law school's advisory board while a Superior Court judge in Los Angeles.

THE CLASSES, conducted Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, attract a wide range of pupils. Each pays an average of $38 a month for tuition and books.

"The youngest in our classes last year was 24 years old," Dr. Manson notes, "while pupils range to retired people."

The students include court bailiffs, police officers, mechanics, city employes, insurance adjusters and clerks. Many enroll in the school to gain knowledge which will help them in their work.

About half of the school's graduates eventually enter law practice, Dr. Manson explains, after receiving the school's bachelor of laws degree. About six students a year study for master of law degrees.

Appointed Dean

BOSTON (U.P.)—Winslow R. Hatch of the State College of Washington has been appointed dean of Boston University's College of General Education. Hatch, a native of Lexington, Mass., will assume his new duties here Oct. 15.

TV Tele-Vues

by TERRY VERNON

To all intents and purposes the feud between Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin that flared last winter and carried through the summer is over—at least so far as making movies and doing TV shows together is concerned.

Martin and Lewis will be back at 8 p.m. (4) to headline the "Variety Hour" with the same type of comedy that skyrocketed them to the top. The exact nature of the bedlam hasn't been divulged but it'll be typical, and Tracy Morgan will make her debut as the feminine interest.

Over (2) at 8p.m. Ed Sullivan has winners of the U. S. Navy's annual talent contest along with Julius LaRosa, the Marquis Chimpanzees and Capt. Richard McCutchen who cracked the $64,000 question. Sullivan learned last year that his show couldn't beat Martin and Lewis in the ratings so he hasn't wasted money on trying tonight.

NEW TO MANY—Last season a show called "It's A Great Life" debuted at a 10:30 p.m. time, so many viewers have failed to see it. Program is a situation comedy show starring Michael O'Shea, James Dunn and William Bishop and is really very good. Starting today, it gets a 7 p.m. slot (4) (which will be in opposition to "Private Secretary" and the "Jack Benny Show"). But it should jump up in the national ratings (on the live network it bucks only "Lassie").

DIAL-LITES—Eleanor Powell returns with her award-winning "Faith of Our Children" (4) at 1:30 p.m. aided by husband Glenn Ford and son Peter. This program is a supplement to Sunday School and not designed to replace it. On this first fall program she'll give a general introduction to the study outline for the season. . . . The UCLA wallloping of Texas A&M will be seen on film at 7 p.m. (13). . . . ABC comes in at 7:30 to the Sullivan-Colgate 8 p.m. domination with a movie series microwaved from New York. First of the "Famous Film Festival" movies is "Old Man Out" starring James Mason, Kathleen Ryan and Robert Newton to elude the police.

DRAMA—Barbara Stanwyck is hostess to the "Loretta Young Show" at 10 p.m. (4) and presents Teresa Wright and Scott Forbes in "My Uncles O'More." Miss Wright plays a new schoolteacher who is romantically involved by two of her pupils with their uncle in an effort by the whole family to marry off its eligible bachelors. . . . Macdonald Carey, Phyllis Thaxter and Dick Foran star on "Stage 7" at 9:30 p.m. (2) in a comedy about an advertising executive who tries to run a farm on weekends. Play is based on the famed "Mr. Blandings" novels. . . . Eli Wallach heads the cast of the "Television Playhouse" (4) at 9 p.m. in a tale of hatred and rebellion in a small, explosive South American country. . . . A young American in Italy, heavily in debt, wins a lottery but is afraid to collect it. He asks a little native boy to collect the prize and agreement is reached only if the American will marry the boy's sister. "Appointment with Adventure" is (2) at 10 p.m. . . . The surrender of General Cornwallis at Yorktown is the "You Are There" subject at 6 p.m. (2)

TRACY MORGAN
With Dean and Jerry

TELE-TIPS—An actual Nike, the Army's supersonic guided missile, will be shown on a special hour-long presentation of "The Dan Lundberg Show" (13) at 6 p.m. Lundberg will also talk with the men who operate the various Nike installations that ring the Los Angeles area. . . . The Los Angeles Angels and the Hollywood Stars play their final game in the special series to decide the third place spot in the PCL and the winner of the cross-town series (9) at 2:25 p.m. . . . Dave Willock and Cliff Arquette cast an eye at approach cold weather and show how to make a practical storm sash during "Do It Yourself" (4) at 7:30 p.m. . . . "The Adventures of Kit Carson" come to an end after four years when the show is seen (11) at 5:30 p.m. Story tells of the hijacking of a new repeater rifle by some outlaws. . . . Ahamed Bokhari of Pakistan, Peter Freuchen, Danish newspaper reporter and famed explorer, and a man who washes the windows at the United Nations building will be among those interviewed by Morgan Beatty on "People" at 5 p.m. (4). . . . Experts will discuss school problems during the "American Forum" (4) at 12:30 p.m. . . . Films of the controversial "POW Survival Course" being taught at Stead Air Force Base near Reno will be seen on "Sunday News Special" at 11 p.m. . . . "You Asked For It" journeys to a buffalo ranch and Death Valley Scotty's castle during the show (7) at 7 p.m.

STORY LINES—Susie MacNamara teaches her boss how to "throw a slow curve" when an effort is made to sign up Whizzer Wade, a baseball star, during "Private Secretary" starring Ann Sothern (2) at 7 p.m. (Next Sunday Jack Benny returns). . . . When Lassie is attacked by an unusually vicious bull terrier it leads Gramps to believe that illegal pit bull fights are being staged near the farm during "Lassie" (2) at 6:30 p.m. This starts an investigation in which the famous dog plays an important part. . . . "Dr. Hudson's Secret Journal" unfolds "The Foundling Story" (11) at 9 p.m. A baby is left on the doctor's doorstep and this leads to a new children's wing for the hospital.

Words and Music

By JOHN B. CALLAGHAN

CBS-TV program chieftain Hubbell Robinson says situation comedies aren't dead on TV . . . only the bad ones. He claims CBS has a couple of good new ones, "Joe and Mabel" and the Phil Silvers show. And in these shows, Robinson says, "(1) There are no jokes; the fun comes from characters and situations; (2) They are not typical American families; (3) The stories are not located in that typical American town." Well, they must be different, anyway!

More than 65 television editors from the U. S. and Canada flew to England recently for a visit to Sherwood Forest at Nottingham . . . and a preview look at the filming of the new CBS "Robin Hood" series. It stars Richard Greene as the man who robbed the rich to feed the poor.

CBS-TV throws another big dramatic gun at the rival networks this season on Sunday night with the new "Alfred Hitchcock Theatre" half-hour series. The famed movie director will bring his specialty, the suspense story, to the TV screens.

Look for Dunninger, the mentalist, who did summer replacement duty on NBC-TV this past hot spell, to remain on with a regular winter show. Guess they figure he's got his audience hypnotized.

Hero's Carved Leg in Museum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battered, hand-carved wooden leg once the property of a former GI hero of a Japanese prisoner of war camp in Manila, now lies in the Armed Forces Medical Museum.

The wooden leg belonged to the former Pfc. Jose Sanchez, whose present whereabouts are unknown. He once lived in Los Angeles.

Joseph L. Adeski, former medical service officer, turned the leg over to the museum. He explained that the soldier gave the leg to him in a Utah hospital after World War II in exchange for a good one.

The leg is the first wooden anatomical specimen in the museum.

International Flavor to GOP Fashion Show

TAKING THE SPOTLIGHT, temporarily, is Susie, a French poodle, with Mrs. Earl B. Milton, as she poses, also, with Mrs. Leslie H. Smith, Mrs. Minerva Anderson and Logan H. Goodknight, from left, prior to the annual fashion show Thursday at Lakewood Country Club by Long Beach Council of Republican Women, Federated. Susie wants you to know that Mrs. Milton is wearing an original DeDe Johnson dress, one of the many door awards. John Hersey of Buffums' will present the show, theme of which is "Fashion Is a Linguist." Special guest will be Dennis Morgan, stage and screen star.—(Staff photo.)

Styles Star Thursday at GOP Review

It is only four days before the Long Beach Council of Republican Women's big fashion event of the year. All roads will lead to the Lakewood Country Club Thursday where smartly clad, style-conscious women of the community will gather on the spacious lawn to view the exciting and glamorous fashions for fall and winter presented by Buffums'. Highlight of the day will be the talk by Dennis Morgan, stage and screen star.

A coffee hour at 11 a. m., will precede the fashion showing and program at 12:30 p.m. "Fashion is a Linguist" will be the theme for the extravaganza of fashions and accessories to be paraded. John Hersey, Buffums' fashion coordinator, will act as commentator.

In presenting the international theme, Hersey will divide the show into well-defined groups of completely accessorized fashions, each group to be prefaced by the costumes from which they were adapted. Many noted designers will be represented in the collection.

Favors will be presented to every guest at the fashion review and there will be special door awards including choice of any hat in Buffums' noted designer collection; a DeDe Johnson original, a generous bottle of fine imported perfume, and many others.

A special feature of the show will be a 14-skin full let-out natural Starlite ranch mink stole.

Background music will be played by Phil Horton and his group.

Mrs. Cartwright Hunter, president, will welcome guests and the program will be directed by Mrs. Betty Maude Benwell, general chairman.

Arrangements for the coffee hour are being made by Mrs. J. L. Routh, hospitality chairman, and Mrs. Doris Burgess, co-chairman. Honored guests, who will pour at the silver coffee services, include Mmes. Willis W. Bradley, W. Ward Johnson, C. Craig Hosmer, William S. Grant, Herbert Klockseim, George Vermillion, Burton W. Chace, R. G. Kenyon, McIntyre Faries, Vernon W. Janney, Lewis T. Gardiner, and Frances Larsen.

Also pouring will be past council presidents Mmes. Lewis W. O'Bryon, J. Lloyd O'Donnell, Edith Van de Water, B. B. Braden, H. T. Gilstrap, A. W. Vasey, William H. Gillis, R. G. Grobaty, Logan H. Goodnight and Mesdames Donald Spring and William Nesbitt, past chairmen GOP Jrs., Mrs. Myrl Cypher and Miss Lucylle Kuecks, past chairmen Evening Division. Also assisting will be Mrs. Arnold Romeyn, Chairman GOP Jrs., and Mrs. Minerva

Fall Study Stressed in League

Gathering for their first membership meeting of the fall, the League of Women Voters of Long Beach will have a garden party at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Long Beach Art Center.

In line with the league's current study of Juvenile Hall, the program for the day, to be given under the direction of Mrs. T. E. Roseen, will feature as speaker Joseph Kennick, superintendent of the Long Beach Juvenile Bureau. His topic will concern the Long Beach bureau which he represents.

Mrs. Roseen emphasizes the fact that league meetings are public meetings and that any person interested in the administration and functioning of Juvenile Hall will find the current meetings very worth while. Beginning this month, study and discussion of the hall will be the concern of the six local units.

The Downtown Unit will have its first meeting Sept. 26 at 1:30 p.m. at 1013 Locust Ave. and on the second and fourth Mondays thereafter. Mrs. Evangeline Moise is chairman, and Mrs. George W. Schweitzer, hostess.

Bay Shore Unit meets at 1:30 p.m. on the second and fourth Wednesdays at 5589 Riviera Walks with Mrs. Donald W. Smith, chairman, and Mrs. G. F. L. Gardner, hostess. The first meeting will be Sept. 28.

Bixby Knolls Unit meets at 10 a.m. on the second and fourth Thursdays at 3738 Lewis Ave. with its first meeting scheduled for Sept. 22. Mrs. Walter H. Byron is chairman and Mrs. W. D. Morris, hostess.

Plaza Unit meets at 9:30 a.m. at 6411 East Los Arcos St. on the first and third Tuesdays. The first meeting for this unit will be Sept. 20 with Mrs. Sidney J. Klein, chairman, and Mrs. Thomas A. Comiskey, hostess.

Lakewood Unit meets at 10 a.m. on the first and third Wednesdays at 5311 Harvey Way with the first meeting Sept. 21. Mrs. Clayton M. Hall is chairman and hostess.

The Night Unit meets the second and fourth Tuesday beginning Sept. 27 at Brewitt Library, 4036 E. Anaheim at 8 p.m. with Miss Janet Stone chairman and Mrs. C. H. Van Marter, hostess.

CLOTHES WILL BE ARRIVING from all parts of the globe for milady's wardrobe for fall and winter, as evidenced by these members of Long Beach Council of Republican Women, Federated, as they pose at International Airport to publicize their annual fashion show Thursday at Lakewood Country Club. Carrying out the international theme are, from left, Mrs. Raymond Chace, wearing a French designer's creation; Mrs. Louis W. O'Bryan, in an Italian costume, accompanied by Mrs. J. L. Routh, hospitality chairman for the show, and Mrs. Betty Maude Benwell, general chairman. Many noted European designers will be featured during the two-hour show by Buffums'.—(United Airlines photo.)

Hawaii Sets Mood for Third Nighters' Evening

The melodic strains of soft Hawaiian music and gaily colored lanterns festooned between graceful trees greeted Third Nighters, local dance group, as they gathered for a pre-dance punch bowl party Saturday at the home of the president, Dr. Claire E. Pike, and Mrs. Pike, 3833 Pine Ave.

Hosts and hostesses for the event, which preceded the group's first dance of the new season at Recreation Park Clubhouse, were new officers, their husbands and wives.

"An Evening in Hawaii" was the romantic theme for the night's festivities, with island decor and music used unsparingly at both gala occasions. More than 80 club members and guests, in gay South Sea attire, were greeted at the Pike home by a lovely hula maiden and were directed down a lighted path to a punch bowl table centered with a miniature tropical isle complete with waving palms and dancing girls.

Co-hosts and hostesses with Dr. and Mrs. Pike were Messrs. and Mmes. A. L. Fisher, E. N. Bailey and O. B. Curtis.

Highlighting the clubhouse dance, which kept merry-makers in proper island mood with more sweet tropical music, was an exhibition dance by Philip Albanese and partner. Members in charge of the later event were Messrs. and Mmes. Eugene Morath and Don Hedley as the social committee, assisted by Messrs. and Mmes. Otho Slaton and Elmer Sorensen.

Presidents Club

Officers of Presidents Club will be hostesses when the group meets Saturday for a noon luncheon and meeting at Brower's Restaurant. Reservations may be made before Wednesday with Mrs. Wallace Askew or Mrs. Hallie Bridges.

AAUW Plans to Be Topic

"Some New Points of Emphasis in the American Association of University Women's Program," will be the topic of a talk by Mrs. Ray W. Townsend, AAUW regional vice president, at a meeting of University Women's Club in the Whittier Women's Club House, Monday evening.

Mrs. Townsend is past president of Long Beach Univesity Women's Club, and past state president of AAUW. Since election of officers at the national convention in June, she is regional vice president of South Pacific Region which includes California, Nevada and Arizona State Divisions, as well as branches in Guam and the Hawaiian Islands. Whittier branch has a membership of 540 while Long Beach branch has 600 members.

To Convention

Mrs. Theron Slaughter, president of Auxiliary to Children's Memorial Hospital, left by plane Tuesday for Atlantic City to attend the American Medical Association convention. She will take part in the sessions being conducted for the benefit of auxiliaries to the hospitals throughout the country.

Dramatic Nightingale Ball to Headline Fall Season

Myriads of white French balloons striped in black—at the entry way, centering each dining table and billowing from the chandeliers—will transform the Cavalier Room of Lafayette Hotel into a striking and exciting scene for the Oct. 1 Nightingale Ball.

The Nightingales, junior organization of the Auxiliary to Children's Memorial Hospital, is hostessing the dinner-dance as a fund-raising project to assist needy children at the hospital.

Baskets of white flowers will adorn each dinner table, with jeweled perfume bottles for ladies and bottle openers for men as table favors. At the entrance, a large French balloon will center a revolving table on which will be placed baskets filled with gay boutonnieres for male guests. Billows of festive balloons, released from their ties at each chandelier, will float toward the outstretched arms of eager dancers.

With reservations limited to 300, the ball will be open to members and guests. Festivities will begin with pre-dinner cocktail parties at the homes of various members. Dancing will be to the delightful music of Jack Collins and orchestra.

For the past three months, Mrs. Kenneth Henry, ways and means chairman, and her committee have been hard at work to make this affair one of the most enjoyable and exciting social events of the year. Mrs. Loether Buck is in charge of decorations.

In Northwest

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Keats are home from a three-week trip to the Pacific northwest. Among points of interest visited were Banff, Lake Louise, British Columbia and Alberta. They were entertained by friends in Calgary and Vernon.

St. Matthew's Council Sets Fashion Show

"Fall Carnival of Fashions" is the theme chosen by St. Matthew's Parish Council for its annual luncheon and fashion show at noon Thursday in the school cafeteria, 2840 E. Seventh St.

Penneys will show both women's and children's apparel with Wilma Hastings as commentator and Miss Eloise Ferguson lending background music.

Mrs. Albert Gracio, style show chairman, is being assisted by Mrs. Robert Wieland, tickets; Mmes. Francis Eifert, George Silva and Georgie Haggorth; decorations; Mmes. Lawrence Sauter and Francis Mandis, kitchen; Raymond Murray, serving; Frank Funck, door prizes; and Donald M. Jones, publicity.

Mrs. Robert Loefler, president, and members of the executive board, will be hostesses. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the parish council, and also will be available at the door. The public is welcome.

Court St. Ann Anniversary

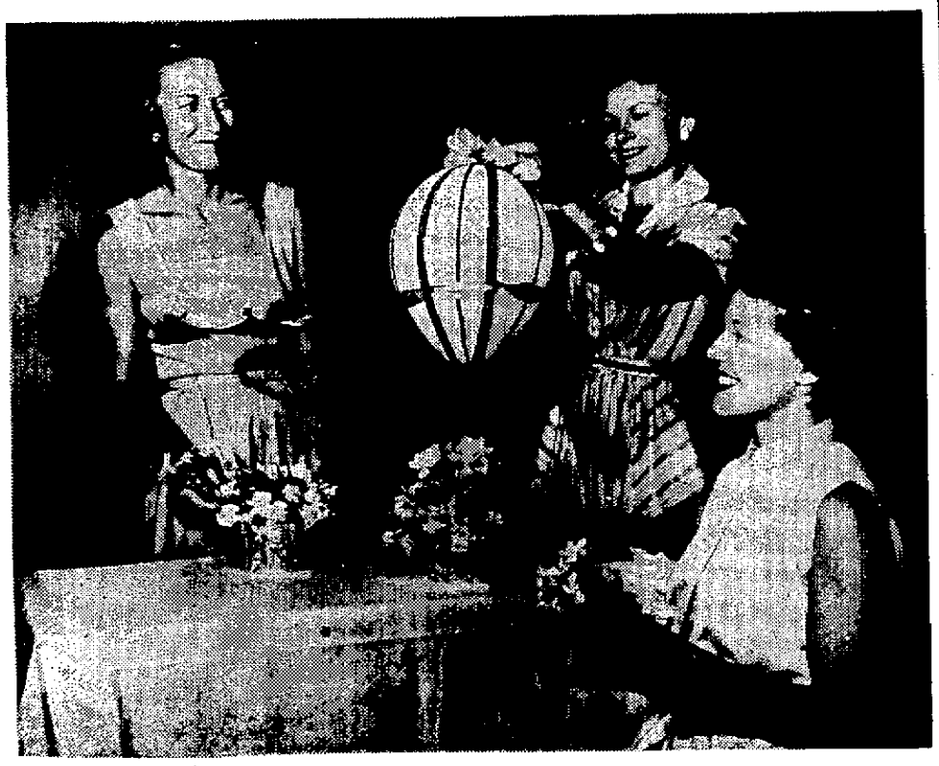

An anniversary party will be given Thursday by Court St. Ann 763, Catholic Daughters of America in St. Matthew's Parish Cafeteria. Miss Mary Greisen will be chairman of the covered dinner at 6 p.m. Seven members who have been members 25 years will be honored.

Noted Poet to Be Guest

Don Blanding, noted author, writer and poet, returns to the mainland from Hawaii upon the invitation of the county president of the Los Angeles County Federation of Women's Clubs to be guest speaker at the Oct. 3 council meeting to be given in Huntington-Sheraton Hotel, Pasadena. The dance, open to the public, is for the purpose of raising funds to assist needy children at the hospital. Mrs. Buck is chairman of decorations.

PARTY PLANNERS

Wild Waves Say

By IOLA MASTERSON

An occasional butterfly drifted lazily through the air, it's brilliance lost on an audience already enthralled with beauty more enduring. This was Thursday afternoon when Assistance League was hostess at an exclusive fashion show of fall and winter modes, given poolside in the gardens of the Lester Lawson Jr. home, 3903 Pacific Ave.

Those poor butterflies. They didn't stand a chance being noticed as creation after shining creation brought murmurs of delight.

A happy wedding of summer styles and fall fashions was visible everywhere one looked, with some women in the audience taking their cue from the weather and wearing summer shades while others paid heed to the date and wore transitional tones (light weight, however) topped with autumn chapeaux.

Tawny-haired hostess Elva Lawson wore a black cotton with white. Others noted were Ann Settle, Dorothy Dunlap, Hart Davis, Winifred Morris and Sara Savoie.

Elizabeth Jones wore pink while slim Helene Drown, cool in her vantage point under an elm tree, wore sheer navy. Others choosing navy were Dorothy and Laddie Macrate while Dottie Munholland was in a black and toast transitional.

President Grace Rowe began the afternoon with words of welcome, soon turning the microphone over to Sally Nesmith who, with typical "Sallesque" verve and fun lead the guided tour through fashion land as commentator.

Chlora Hall was present and so were Mildred Mead, Etta Arthur, Martha Gould and Bettye Mitchell, Marie Kiseau, Clare Hossom and Madeleine Roberts. Eyes that swept the viewing crowd also noted Dorothy Goodnight, Flo Newton, Jane Hosmer, Rosemary Wilson and Marge Davis.

Show co-chairmen were Tess Heusel, Mildred Brayton and Ann Yunker and for their committee members they had nothing but praise. Women like Ponnie Ridder who accomplishes the impossible in a twinkling; Polly Chace whose decorations on the refreshment buffet tables were fabulous; Stella Kellogg, Flossie Rene, Mildred Wing, Nell Taylor, Ann Noble, Elva Pritchard and Margaret Davis all did yeoman duty! Now let the fall begin.

And speaking of fashion shows, there weren't any "clearance sale" signs, not by any stretch of the imagination, on the lovely things viewed by Downtown Kiwanis wives and their husbands when the gals were invited for one of their extra special ladies days last Tuesday at the Lafayette Hotel. Walt Jordan, naturally, was chairman of the day and not only that but served as one of the most "fetching" models on the ramp showing the latest in men's threads.

Chic Wilma Hastings was commentator and viewing with approval were such Kiwanians and Kiwaniannes as prexy Hal and Helen Moore (Hal was named "Mr. America of 1955" by Wilma who claimed his title was won in a secret poll of women's opinions). The guffaws that followed the announcement left some people wondering!), Flo and Dr. Ward DeWitt, Dixie and Hal Reece, Mary and Wendell Wilson, Helen and Clare Hamman, Claire and "Phil" Phillips, Estelle and Dr. Ken Mooney and Virginia and Tom Russell.

Others glimpsed whilst they were glimpsing were Catherine and Larry Smith, Barbara and Ted Corcoran, Beryl and Howell Honeywell, Blanch and Earl Drown, Betty and Bill Bennett, Fae and Harvey McCafferty, Donna and Bud Ridings, Irene and Dr. Dwight Sigworth Kay and "Smitty" Smith and Elizabeth and Harold Judson.

"September 17 is a day to be free for that's when St. Mary's Hospital Guild will go on a spree." That's a reasonable facsimile of the informal invitations which caused well over 100 St. Mary's Guild members and their husbands to converge on Nancy and Joe Bogdanovich's home at 31 Saddleback Rd. in Rolling Hills last night for a friendly and completely successful get-better-acquainted party.

Assisting Nancy and Joe were Nadyne and Ralph Caneer, Peg and Bill Kirk, Beverly and Jackson Mense, the Drs. Cliff and Orville Cole with their wives, Janice and Florence, Dr. Leo and Maxine Bach, Lin and Johnny Arkush, Ina and Jay Reed, Joan and John Twitchell, Dolores and Herman Weissker, Millie and Dr. John McGill and Laura and Ed Killingsworth. And, of course, president Barbara Davis and husband, Donnell, were indispensable.

Swimming in the Bogdanovich's big pool was followed by the most welcome of picnic suppers served atop good, old red and white tablecloth to keep every one in a saucy mood.

The "kids" and the "graduates" got together last weekend for another of Dames Club's always splendiferous annual reunions at which members from the days when the club was known as Debs and current ones renew the embers of acquaintance.

Given at the Mounted Police Clubhouse, the gals planned a charcoal broiled steak dinner, preceded by cocktails and followed by dancing. Among the gang who frolicked the evening away were Marge and Ralph Peterson, Texas, and "Babe" Fraser, Betty and Crosby Hoyt, Lois and Max Boyer, Lucille and Tom Crosby, Noel and David Hodges, Doris and Jack Warnock, Marilyn and Jack Marquette, Dorothy and Ross Wattelet and Peggy and Paul Teschke.

Others who perambulated to the rhythms of the juke box "orchestra" were Corinne and "Skip" McMahon, June and Stan Cooper, Thelma and Gene Dreckman, Harriet and Pat Dixon, Janet and Joe Scott, Flo and Mike Brooks, Betty and Milton Cantor, Louise and "Cub" Callis and the president herself, Barbara Powell, and husband, George.

Iryss McDonnel was party chairman assisted by husband Bob while James LaGregs and Tom Wall were the able broiler of steaks—rare, medium and ruined.

Glamor, adventure and beauty were brought to arm-chair travelers by Patti Ezell when she entertained a group of friends at a patio dinner and then showed fistfuls of elegant colored slides taken during her recently completed two-year assignment to Burma with the Foreign Service. Patti showed film exposed in Mandalay, Penang, Hong Kong and Bangkok to name but a few places. In keeping with the evening she served a native dinner—as different and delightful as anything ever eaten in this fair city. Assisting with party duties were Patti's sister and husband, Jackie and Dan Welty plus the two little Weltys, Dana and Shauna. Guests included Greta and Bob Wilkerson, Pat and Brooks Van Houten, Margaret and Stan Challis, the Delmar Johnsons, the Walter Paukens, Mrs. Orville Adams and daughter, Barbara, and Denny Fox.

Six people made Balboa Bay Club gayer than it would have been if they hadn't been there last night all because Marguerite and Tom Welch said a gracious, "Be our guests" to Bethuel and Doris Moore and Beth and Kelly Williams. They dined, danced, chatted and laughed the evening away.

A porpoise mood—can you think of anything jollier (or wetter)?—settled over Pat and "Van" Van de Water's Pacific Ave. home last Sunday when they entertained 14 couples at a relaxed summertime pool and brunch party. After cavorting in the green, cool depths everyone dried off long enough to dine sumptuously on steaming platters of rich Canadian bacon, omelets cuddled in mushrooms and—. Care to eat a little something before we continue?

Claiming she was working too hard getting their new home ship-shape, Bob Reid insisted taking wife, Mollie, off for a couple days rest. So, in San Jacinto last weekend they played 36 holes of golf. By comparison now, even if Mollie were called upon to move the piano, it would seem a simple task! Ah, that Bob, crafty as B'rer Fox.

Features of Designers' Show

WHEN NINE OF THE top-flight California designers commentate their latest fall and winter fashions as guests of the Independent, Press-Telegram Sept. 27 in Municipal Auditorium, at the California Fashion Designers' Show, two represented will be Young Set of California and Addie Masters. This gay young coat, left, by Young Set, is made of Stroock's "El Misti," a short-pile wool with a velvety surface. For comfort over suits, the shoulders are a shallow dolman cut. Addie Masters designed this delightful dress of wool jersey in a light tone of aqua and a slightly deeper tone in the tissue wool tweed skirt. It is a one-piece dress. The slim-line skirt has ample width through unpressed pleats in front.

Exciting Stage Fare for Designers' Show Sept. 27

By MARY LOU ZEHMS
Independent, Press-Telegram Women's Editor

There is more exciting news in store for those of you who plan to attend the California Fashion Designers' Show Sept. 27 in Municipal Auditorium as guests of the Independent, Press-Telegram. Many wonderful sights are in store for that evening, according to Wilma Hastings, outstanding Southland fashion authority, who is the co-ordinator for the show.

In addition to the nine top California designers, invited by this newspaper, to be here in person to commentate their latest designs of hats, coats, suits, daytime and evening wear, will be Jimmy Whitmore's 15-piece orchestra and talented Harvey Wagner, our own Long Beach baritone, as guest soloist. An element of surprise is apparent, too, as plans go forth for a real fashion-wise eye-opener!

The nine designers coming to Long Beach for this unprecedented event, are Roth LeCover, Georgia Bullock, Peggy Hunt, Marjorie Montgomery, Alex Coleman, Addie Masters, Louis Tabak, Young Set of California and Lester Masters of Leslie James Hats. A special dramatic stage setting, "Fashion Is Fine Art," will carry out the theme of the two-hour extravaganza.

The requests for tickets has been overwhelming. Only those who returned the coupons, and were received first by this office, will be able to attend. We are sorry that limited seating makes it impossible for the many thousands of fashion-conscious women in the area to be with us. Doors of Convention Hall will open at 7 p. m. and the show will begin promptly at 8 p. m. No one will be admitted without a ticket.

Lady Lions Install Execs at Festive Dinner-Dance

Mrs. Hayden Bolander, newly-elected president of West Long Beach Lady Lions, accepted the gavel symbolic of her office at that group's seventh annual dinner dance Saturday in the Roof Garden of Lafayette Hotel. Installing officer was Mrs. Verne Hedden.

A lovely pin, yearbook and personal gift were presented outgoing president Mrs. Jim Hanson in recognition of her successful and busy club year.

Seated with Mrs. Bolander at the banquet tables, which were effectively decorated with gilded and glittering fall leaves, gift gavels and sequins, were her co-officers, also newly installed, Mrs. Wilfred Slater, vice president; Mrs. Jim Shea, recording secretary; Mrs. Richard Dilday, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Allen Clinkscales, treasurer.

After dinner and installation ceremonies, club members and guests danced to music provided by the Merrymakers.

Dr. and Mrs. Virgil L. Fisher

Virgil L. Fishers Celebrate 50th Wedding Anniversary

More than 300 friends and guests from various cities and towns of the Southland assembled Sept. 11 to felicitate Dr. and Mrs. Virgil L. Fisher, on the occasion of their golden wedding.

The reception was given by their two sons and daughters-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Gaylord L. Fisher and Dr. and Mrs. Russell V. Fisher, and took place at the home of their elder son in Park Estates.

The guests gathered in the spacious living room and in the patio; while in the picturesque swimming pool there floated the "SS Fisher," symbolic of their ship of matrimony that has sailed peacefully for over a half century.

The bride of fifty summers cut the beautiful five-tier wedding cake. Delicious refreshments were served, while the guests strolled about and exchanged pleasant reminiscenses of other years.

The music was furnished by Mrs. Harriet Wood, harpist, and Professor Alfred Walters, violin instructor at La Sierra College. When asked concerning the requisites of a successful wedded life, Dr. Fisher replied: "Choose a bride who has the same ideals in life; then keep love growing." Similarly, Mrs. Fisher replied: "Having a devoted husband, loving children and grandchildren to keep you young and active."

The Fishers are natives of the Buckeye State and for 18 years operated a private hospital in Mount Vernon, Ohio. For a number of years Dr. Fisher served as medical director of the New England Sanitarium, located at Melrose, Mass., while for the past 25 years they have resided in Long Beach, where at the corner of First and Atlantic they established the Fisher Clinic. Dr. Virgil is now retired and the work of the clinic is carried forward by his two sons who have followed in the professional footsteps of their father.

Mrs. Gordon S. McGowan Jr.

Caribbean Trip Follows McGowan-Ryan Nuptials

Leaving today for a lengthy honeymoon in Nassau, Jamaica, Haiti and New Orleans are newly wedded Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. McGowan Jr., (Helen K. Ryan, 26 10th Pl.) who were married Saturday in afternoon services at St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Ryan, Owosso, Mich., wore a lovely Priscilla of Boston gown fashioned of rose patterned Chantilly lace with Italian Guipura lace trim. The long torso bodice extended to a smooth, flaring skirt, and a pure silk bridal illusion veil, fingertip length, cascaded gently from a lace crown trimmed with dainty seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids, lilies-of-the-valley and stephanotis.

Mrs. L. H. Glaser, matron of honor, carried cascades of Virginia pink carnations centered with clusters of roselfies, while bridesmaids Miss Millicent Percy, Mrs. A. M. McMahon, Miss Barbara Furse and Miss Louella Sandstrom held cascade bouquets of pink carnations alone. They wore identical gowns of Wedgwood blue taffeta, styled with long torso bodices and bouffant skirts. The off-the-shoulder necklines were trimmed with blue velvet which continued in panels down the back.

As his best man, the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. McGowan Sr., 2173 Pine Ave., chose A. M. McMahon. Seating the 350 wedding guests were Robert Ryan, the bride's brother, Lewis Hopkins, Dr. Edwin Squire and L. A. Brown.

The newlyweds greeted their well-wishers at a reception in the Pacific Coast Club. Assisting were Mmes. J. S. Moore Sr., E. J. Squire and Jessie Barnard.

A member of Beta Sigma Phi, Eta Tau Chapter, the bride attended Marygrove College in Detroit, Mich., graduated from St. Lawrence School of Nursing and did post-graduate work at Marquette University. Her husband, a graduate of Wilson High School, attended Univeristy of Oregon and received his degree from the University of Southern California. He is an affiliate of Phi Delta Theta.

Repeat Lines in Nevada

The Little Church of the West in Las Vegas, Nev., was the setting for the recent marriage of John B. Sargeant, son of Mrs. Sydney R. Smith of 45 54th Pl. and Mary MacDonald McCuish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander McCuish of Glasgow, Scotland.

Altrusa Year Brimful; Other Business Club Women Ready for Festive Events

By ANNE GILCHRIST

A year brimful of interesting meetings and project activities was outlined to Altrusa Club members by program coordinator Myrtle Poultney when the fast-growing women's service club met at the Lafayette Hotel Monday for first meeting after summer vacation.

Each chairman of the four divisions—Dr. Ethel West, Altrusa Information; Helen Mayfield, public affairs; Joyce Jacoubowsky, international relations; and Mary Lou Zehms, vocational information—will be responsible for three meetings throughout the year with the exception of the October meeting which will be planned by Leah Sekorah, Grants-in-Aid chairman.

Miss Poultney introduced as speaker of the evening Altrusan Joyce Jacoubowski who, since 1947 has contributed of her time and talents to the American Association of the United Nations.

This dynamic woman told of her experiences last June at UN sessions in San Francisco which she attended as an accredited observer for Altrusa International. The common theme, she said, was the respect won by UN for what it was and what it had done: It's stand in Korea; negotiations on disarmament; peaceful use of atomic energy; economic aid for underdeveloped countries; helping people toward self-government.

Cooperation and co-existence were major subjects covered as well as security, and how it could be achieved, with regional agreements the only possible answer at the present time.

Quota Club

One of the best parts of vacation is coming home and realizing that, after all, it's a pretty good place to be. So it was when Quota reconvened at Miller's restaurant for its first fall business meeting following a lessening of activities during the summer.

Principal matter of business was discussion of plans for Quota's 25th district conference at the Lafayette Oct. 14, 15, 16. Though Marguerite Wood, general chairman of the occasion, was unable to be present following a recent sojourn at Seaside Hospital, the report she sent showed many hours of thoughtful planning for the conference, theme for which will be "Service With Understanding."

Another action of particular importance to the club was the postponement of its annual silver tea from September to November for this year only.

Connie Brown's streamlining of lengthy business and much correspondence is always a marvel to Quota's members, but she was aided materially by frequent inquiries as to the time. These were levelled at Rada Metcalf, recently returned from a three-month tour of Europe, who wore an exquisite finger ring purchased in Switzerland. When the tiny lid is lifted on the ring a watch about half the size of a dime is disclosed, and its accurate time closed the meeting at an early hour.

Dental Assistants

Great plans are shaping up for the annual "Doctor's Night" party which Dental Assistants of the Harbor District chapter give in honor of their bosses each year. With President Viola Engel spearheading the various committees hard at work on elaborate party ideas, the assistants hope to make this the most enjoyable dinner affair ever.

Scheduled for Sept. 26 in the Supper Room of the Lafayette Hotel, program chairman Harriet Beadle has announced that program theme will be, "A Night at the Moulin Rouge." Table decorations as well as program will follow the sophisticated theme. Eva Miner is general chairman and many are the secrets which she and her subcommittee chairmen will not divulge until the doctors, their wives, members and guests are gathered for the affair.

It is known, however, that many secretive rehearsals have been in progress for some time and that group members and several doctors, too, are cast in important roles.

Medical Lab. Technicians

The Harbor chapter of the California Association of Medical Laboratory Technicians had first meeting of the new club year at the home of Virginia Sowers and Jean Fitzhugh recently. A cooling swim was followed by an informal hotdog bake. The 30 members and their guests in attendance were grateful to Sally Ames and her committee for a particularly pleasant evening.

ANE Meeting

California Association for Nursery Education, Southern Section, had an executive board meeting and patio luncheon Sept. 10 at the Emerald Bay home of Mrs. Evelyn Bell, of Laguna. Attending from Long Beach were Harbor area chapter president. Josephine Burgess; Wilma Dahlquist, president-elect; and Barbara Shirley, Kathryn Mitchell, Betty Inman and Elizabeth Robertson.

Members discussed the recent merger of section associations into a California Assoc. for Nursery Education as well as future plans for the year-old Consulting Service of the Southern Section.

Vacations

Neva Blust (U.S. Naval Station) has just returned from a two-weeks vacation jaunt spent with her family. It was a rough 'n ready camping trip with stops in such state parks as Morro Bay, Big Sur and Pismo Beach. Ardent campers, Neva claims nothing this side of heaven smells quite so good as coffee brewing and bacon sizzling outdoors in clear, morning air.

Another member of National Secretaries Assoc. back on the job after vacation days is Luella Darnell who motored to Reno, Lake Tahoe, San Francisco and Carmel.

Equal portions of sightseeing and fishing filled holiday time-out to perfection for Geraldine Hortsman and her family when they motored to Eugene, Ore.

Among the most welcome of summertime visitors to Long Beach has been Mrs. Frank L. Hamilton of Enid, Okla., who visited her daughter, Dean Stuart, for several weeks.

Ozark, Ala., Panama City, Fla. and New Orleans were among the deep South stops made by Alma Reimauk on her recent vacation journeys.

Child Care

Child Needs Outlet for His Energy

By MILTON I. LEVINE, M.D. and JEAN H. SELIGMANN

(Q) "My little boy is now 16 months old and he is still in the 'get into everything' stage. I do a lot of spanking and have gotten some results. I laugh and enjoy my son's antics (as suggested by the letter quoted in your article)—but I am interested in other ways of disciplining a child 1 to 2 years of age. Your quoted letter says, '. . . there are certainly other ways (of disciplining) than spanking especially for a 1-year-old.' I would appreciate your elaborating on this point, as I could use some good suggestions."—Mrs. O. S.

(A) If one thinks of discipline as guiding and directing rather than as punishment, it is somewhat easier to figure out how to handle one's offspring at a given moment. For example, if your youngster starts to tear the pages out of your good books, take him away and give him some old magazines or newspapers which he can tear to his heart's content. Even if he cries, the crying usually will not last too long if a new interest can be substituted. After all, a child of 16 months does not know the value of books or ornaments, or any other objects which may be important to you. He is only trying to find out about the world.

Many times, when a child does something which you do not want him to do, you can let him know by your tone of voice and by your attitude that you disapprove. Also, a firm "no" once in a while can be very effective. If he hits or bites another child, or continues at some activity which you want him to stop, you can simply pick him up and bring him somewhere else for the time being.

Remember that little children have a tremendous amount of energy and must find adequate outlet for it. They must be allowed to make noise sometimes, to run around and explore, to get themselves dirty. If you cannot follow your youngster around all the time—and who can?—be sure that he has plenty of play material to interest him.

Spankings should be reserved for those very special situations where the child might be endangering himself or someone else.

Episcopal Service Unites Pair

St. Thomas Episcopal Church was setting last Saturday afternoon for the beautiful nuptial service which united Carol Louise Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilkins Sheppard, 4201 Gaviota Ave., and Howard Elmer Dienger of Selma.

Rev. Hiram Crosby read the double-ring vows before 150 wedding guests.

Illuminated by candlelight, the lovely altar was banked with arrangements of white gladioli, asters and stock. White satin ribbon caught to the pews with clusters of the same blossoms marked the bridal aisle.

Given in marriage by her father, the attractive bride wore a gown of white Chantilly lace and nylon tulle over satin, fashioned with a lace bodice and portrait neckline. Insets of the lace adorned the bouffant tulle skirt. A pearl edged headpiece held her fingertip-length veil, and she wore the pearls and lace handkerchief used by her mother in her own wedding. A white orchid with stephanotis and lilies of the valley completed her bridal attire.

—Curl Ray Studio

Mrs. Howard Elmer Dienger

Beverly Joe Simpson was maid of honor and Marjorie Davis and Jesslyn Pesante attended as bridesmaids. All were gowned identically in fall shade dresses of lemon yellow nylon chiffon, enhanced by sashes of vivid orange chiffon and matching gloves and slippers. Their headpieces and bouquets were of talisman roses.

Richard Fuendeling served the bridegroom as best man, and ushering duties were performed by Carl Walter and Ronald Baker.

A reception followed in the church parish hall where the happy pair was assisted in receiving guests by their mothers. Mrs. Sheppard chose a gown of mauve lace and nylon tulle for the occasion and wore matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in dusty rose nylon tulle with matching accessories. Both wore green cymbidium corsages.

The delicate fall shades of the gowns worn by attendants were echoed in reception decor. The tiered cake was iced in pale yellow and nestled in a wreath of maiden hair fern and gardenias. Miss Linda Leybe presided at the guest book, and reception hostesses were Mmes. Matthew Simpson, Robert Leybe, Leroy Shaw and Lucile Peck. A dinner party for the wedding attendants followed at Brower's.

The newlyweds planned a honeymoon trip to the Beverly Hills Hotel and Palm Springs, and later will motor to Grand Canyon, Bryce Canyon and Zion Park. They will be at home after Oct. 1 at 1020 Amarillo in Palo Alto while both further their educations at Stanford University. The newlyweds are active in music circles at Stanford, both belonging to the University Chorus and participating in the operas and music festivals given annually at the school. The bride was graduated from Polytechnic High School. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dienger of Selma, was graduated from Selma High School and Stanford.

Canadian Trip Pleases Pair

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bickel have penned glowing remarks in highest compliment to their vacation terraine around Victoria and Vancouver, B. C., Canada. Particularly impressed with the parks, lakes and gardens of the area, Mrs. Bickel wistfully wishes for something akin in Long Beach.

Not all sightseeing, the vacationing pair is spending ample time fishing to take their share of such desired northern fish as cohoe and grilse although they were unable to land the big ones known as tyee.

Mrs. Robert H. Nicholson Jr.

Nicholson-Nerrie Lines Spoken in Nuptial Mass

Two hundred guests witnessed the exchange of rings and nuptial vows during a morning mass Sept. 10 which united in marriage Barbara Ann Nerrie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Nerrie, 1025 Raymond Ave., and Robert H. Nicholson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Nicholson Cr., Westminster.

A colonial bouquet of stephanotis and carnations centered with a single white orchid was carried by the youthful bride as she was escorted down the aisle by her father. Her floor length gown was of tulle and lace over satin fashioned with scoop neckline, long sleeves and bouffant tulle skirt over lace illusion. Her filmy fingertip length veil cascaded from a crown of satin edged in pearls.

Jeanette Marcus, as maid of honor, carried a basket of pale pink carnations with aqua ribbons. Her street length dress, styled like the bride's gown, was of pale pink crystalene. In aqua crystalene and holding baskets of pale pink carnations and pink streamers were bridesmaids Virginia Reynolds, Pat Carey and Carole Amend. A velvet band with dainty blossoms adorned each attendant's hair. Linda Munch, cousin of the bride, was the little flower girl.

Performing the duties of best man was James Johnson, while seating guests were Harvey Jones, Don Nicholson and Jed Nerrie.

Assistance League Clubhouse was the setting for the reception following the nuptial service. Miss Sally Moody was in charge of the guest book. Hostesses were Misses Margie Mattocks, Jennie Miller, Dorla Tilley, Joy Bybee, Maureen Poehlein and Helen Snell.

A graduate of Wilson High School, the bride attended the University of Redlands. Her husband, also a Wilson graduate, is serving with the U.S. Air Force and was graduated from Electronic School at Scott Air Force Base, Ill.

The newlyweds are en route to Savannah, Ga., where the bridegroom is stationed at Hunter Air Force Base.

Home from East Coast

A delightfully refreshing vacation has ended for Mrs. Grace J. Ewart who returned to her home at 118 Pomona Ave. after spending much of the summer on the Jersey coast at Spring Lake where she was a guest at the Monmouth Hotel, and at Lake George, N. Y., snuggled in the foothills of the Adirondack Mts.

In addition, the vacationer was in New York City where she attended a dancing teachers' convention as well as enjoying the usual traveler's delights in the big city. While in New Jersey Mrs. Ewart was witness to the hurricane known as Connie. In the area where she was staying no serious damage was done although many trees were blown down. Another travel highlight was her trek across country, both ways, made by DC-7. Having made the trip across the United States 16 times by air, Mrs. Ewart found this to be the most pleasant trip ever.

Ready Plans for Year

Discussion of the year's coming events ran at a high pitch when board members of Symphony Juniors gathered for luncheon recently at the home of Mrs. Ray Parker, 3916 Lewis Ave. Mrs. William Nesbitt assisted.

Taking precedence was the planning for the Harvest Moon Ball, scheduled for Nov. 5 at Meadow Lark Country Club. The ball, which was reported on by Mrs. Orville T. Evans, chairman of the Continuance Fund Committee, is the group's annual fund-raising project to help support the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra.

The Juniors' first meeting of the season will be a luncheon on Sept. 29 at Towne Club with Harvey Wagner, Baritone, featured on the program. New members to be honored at that time are Mmes. John Fylpaa, Ernest Lockwood, Harold Marcum, Randolf Poole and Dimitri Tatistcheff.

The 104th anniversary of Rebekah Degree will be celebrated during Tuesday's evening meeting of Del Mar Rebekah Lodge No. 275 in Machinists Hall, 728 Elm. Laura Collins will preside.

UWC to Seek New Members at Tea

With the aim of increasing membership rolls, University Women's Club has issued approximately 1,200 invitations to a Friendship Tea scheduled between 2 and 5 p. m., Sunday, Sept. 25, in the lovely home of Mrs. Lon Peek, 703 E. Roosevelt Rd.

Greeting guests will be the club's officers and directors in formal gowns, with Miss Hazel Collins, president, at the head of the receiving line. Assisting her will be Mmes. Vaughn Abrams, Arthur J. Plourde, Richard R. Loynes, Lon Peek, R. L. Davidson, Ray Townsend, Glen Michel, E. L. Reynard, Sherman Mix, Arthur T. Barrie, George R. Lake, Eldor Sagehorn, Oliver Johnson; Misses Isabel Long, Shirley Welch, Doris Rumsey and Marian Tripeny.

Mrs. Peek is planning flowers and decorations for the two charming tea tables—the one in the dining room in soft autumn colors with traditional lace cloth, candles and silver service; and in the patio with its gaily striped umbrellas, a second table covered with rich blue burlap, decorated with two wicker-bird cages, each having a Bird of Paradise blossom and trailing green and white ivy. Chinese woven trays will hold the refreshments, sandwiches, cakes and small tuna puffs.

General arrangements for the tea are being made by Mrs. Arthur S. Huey and her social committee. Hostesses at the tables will be Mrs. Clare Becheraz and Mrs. R. L. Davidson; at the coffee and tea urns, Mmes. Francis B. McCall, Ray Townsend, Cyril Evan Farrand, Arthur L. Arnold, Cloyce H. Bogle, Franz Buerger, Harvey A. Barr, Forrest E. Clark, George R. Lake, Glen Michel; Misses Elva Richards, Evelyn Lofland and Isabel Long.

Mrs. G. W. Hollingsworth is door chairman, in charge of guest book and name tags. Hospitality chairman is Mrs. Beach Vasey, while the general information booth will be presided over by Misses Lucille Webb and Elizabeth McNeal and Mrs. Charles R. Park.

Others on various committees include Mmes. William Woelflin, Russell Sprong, Theodore Reddlick and Miss Adda Anderson.

La Media Club to Meet Thursday

New members will be welcomed into La Media Club at the group's meeting Thursday evening in the 5722 Mezzanine Way home of Mrs. Ben Sloan.

The many charity projects of the group will benefit from a summer dance which took place Saturday evening at Bank of Belmont Shore. Games, dancing and refreshments were enjoyed.

Numbered among the group's charities are layettes for distribution by the Salvation Army, and aid to needy families at Christmas. The La Media Club also will sponsor a queen for the Sertoma Club Fair and Festival in late October, with proceeds again going to charity.

Zeva Ward Newly Returned From Five Months Abroad

Newly returned to her Long Beach home, 1631 E. Second St. after five months abroad is Mrs. Zeva M. Ward, widow of the late Eugene R. Ward. She returned on the World Cruise liner Orcades on its initial trip to Southern California.

She chose the liner for transportation because of its visits through the Caribbean Sea via Trinidad and the Panama Canal, in preference to following the departing route which took her via airlines to New York, and to England aboard the Queen Elizabeth.

Mrs. Ward traveled through most of the European countries, including the British Isles and all of Scandinavia and the islands of the Mediterranean. A part of the trip was made in the company of 14 other American citizens, several of them from Long Beach, who traveled throughout the continent by bus, steamship and rail. Arriving in England in the early spring, she found the countryside ablaze with blossoms and the weather the finest it had been in years.

Remembered especially was her visit to Jungfraujoch in Switzerland, and the lovely trip from Vienna, along the base of the towering Tyrolian Alps, to Bad Gastein. Mrs. Ward also reminisces fondly of visits in Italy, the French Riviera, France and Belgium.

One of the interesting and prized posessions of Mrs. Ward is the story of the Walpole Brothers, Ltd., given to her by its present owner. Originally founded in Dublin in 1766, its London location on Sloane St. features that city's only hydraulic elevator, or "lift" as it is known in that country.

State College Staff Picnic

An all-college staff picnic will be given Sept. 24 from 3 to 5 p. m. in Houghton Park by the Long Beach State College Faculty Wives. More than 400 guests are expected for the annual affair, the initial event of the school year.

Mrs. Karl A. Russell and Mrs. Earl C. Kidd are co-chairmen of the picnic. Committee members are Mmes. Carl E. Gregory, Ernest L. Miner, Charles H. Tilden, James N. Wilson and Robert L. Hoffman.

Give Friendship Tea

The beautiful home of Mrs. Lon E. Peek, 703 E. Roosevelt Rd., was setting for the lovely Friendship Tea given by Ebell Juniors Friday.

This tea honors new and prospective members of the club and serves as a grand opening for the club year. Approximately 450 members and guests enjoyed Mrs. Peek's hospitality and were served from the beautifully decorated tea tables.

A strikingly handsome centerpiece of shades of pink carnations and antherium graced the table in Mrs. Peek's rose and blue dining room. The tea tables in the patio were adorned with yellow chrysanthemums and Peruvian lilies. Sparkling butterflies and umbrella poles gaily wound with yellow satin ribbon and bows further added to the attractive decor.

Those pouring were Mrs. Will H. Winston, president of Senior Ebell, Mmes. Jessie M. Armstrong and Arthur F. Bonzer, advisors from the senior club, Mrs. Charles Brantingham, junior past president of Ebell Juniors, and Mmes. Joseph Striegel, Arthur Knoll, Wilbur Sells, John Lower, Robert Ludlum, Walter Yaisli, W. A. Nesbitt, Daniel Hughes, and Orville Evans.

Mmes. E. J. Quinn, Henry Logan, and John C. Dixon were in charge of the tea.

The Long Beach Academy of Art, which for 10 years has been a potent force in Long Beach cultural life, will move to Europe for a few years.

Karl Seethaler, founder and director, and his family will leave here in April, sailing in the early part of May from New York. He will teach American and European students abroad. Some of his local pupils will join the Seethalers in Europe. Germany or Austria will be chosen as a suitable location. Seethaler says that in 10 years, about 2,000 students have attended the Academy here.

The final semester of the Academy in Brittany Gardens, 1st St. and Atlantic Ave., will start Oct. 1 and end next March 31. Registrations must be for the whole semester of six months. No more students (new or old) will be accepted after Oct. 1.

Arthur Adair, Palos Verdes College instructor in art, will give an illustrated program on the Baroque Era at the Long Beach Art Association meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in the Municipal Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Theme for the 1955-56 season is "Catching Up With Our Times." The Baroque lecture is the first of the coordinated, consecutive series tracing the causative relationship of art and the era. Through assistance of the Long Beach public library, documentary films will be shown.

The program is open to Art Association members and guests.

Mrs. Florence Gendron will have charge of a crafts exhibit. Mrs. Lee Ison and her committee will serve refreshments.

Today is the final day to see the Long Beach and vicinity non-juried show and drawings by 20th Century masters, borrowed from the Guggenheim Museum, at the Municipal Art Center. The Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., is open Tuesdays through Fridays, 9-5, and Sundays, 1-6.

Two new shows will open Sept. 25 and run through Oct. 23. They will be a collection of modern portraits by leading contemporary artists, many posed by nationally known figures, from the Museum of Modern Art, New York, and an "idea" show called "Signs and Symbols." This second show will include Japanese brushwork writing and modern paintings and sculpture showing the trend toward abstract signs.

Municipal Art Director Sam Heavenrich is home after five weeks in San Francisco, Boston, New York and Vermont, combining a vacation with lining up new shows for the Art Center. Mrs. Heavenrich will remain for a couple of weeks at Wellington, Vt., where the Heavenriches own an 18th Century home which they are remodeling. "We have six carpenters, two painters and two gardeners all over the place," says the art director.

New shows obtained for the Art Center include textiles and decorative arts of India, now at the Museum of Modern Art in New York; "Art in Antiquity," at the Metropolitan Museum; photographs of Venetian palaces and fabrics of the Renaissance; European glassware; "Space and Structure" architecture; rugs; Old Master paintings and objects, and contemporary paintings from the Neuberger collection.

Twenty paintings by William Dudley and his son, Jack Dudley, both members of the Spectrum Club, were hung Saturday in the Lafayette Hotel where they will remain through Oct. 14.

"Pink Star," a Christmas card designed by Bud Overholtzer of Long Beach, took an award in the Famous Artists Magazine and Hallmark Cards competition. From 1,300 entries, 30 designs were chosen for $50 awards.

Vacations, Parties Take Social Spotlight Center

By BERNICE AHRENDES

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Lyle of Lakewood with their children David and Karen have returned from an exciting vacation spent in the scenic wonderland of Southern Utah and Arizona.

They camped out among the high mountains at Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon and the Grand Canyon. At the Indian ruins of Wapatki and Walnut Canyon they saw cliff dwellings and pueblos still in good preservation, and brought home with them arrow heads and pieces of pottery they found while there.

Simeon Davis of 5913 Graywood was pleasantly surprised on his birthday, Sept. 8. His lovely wife Lucille planned a celebration though confined to a wheel-chair. Birthday greeters were Mr. and Mrs. Don V. Richardson and their children Vici and Robin.

A watermelon scooped out in the center and carved like a bassinet made an interesting centerpiece at a stork shower given Tuesday to honor Mrs. Robert Maxwell of Long Beach. Iced lemonade was served from the bassinet by the clever hostess Mrs. Jay Luster.

A buffet luncheon was served to Mmes. Helen Werner, June Swenson, Doris Brundle, Violet Kniesel, Audry Brown, Marie Stanley, Verne Lesher, Bonnie Eubank, Joan McInnis and Harriet Swenson. Lemon yellow and mint green were used to carry out color decor.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Coons with their son Mike are now settling back after a busy vacation during which they enjoyed seeing spots of interest here at home. Fartherest spot away was at San Diego where they spent two days, but they took in all the tourist attractions nearer to home.

Monday evening a surprise birthday party was given honoring Katie Cook. Bud, her husband, planned the affair on the spur of the moment and it turned out all the guests had more fun than if they would have known about it for weeks. Delicious refreshments of home made pie, birthday cake, ice cream and sherbet punch were served to Dick and Delore McClure, Jim and Leui Bray, Carl and Evelyn Dreyer, Mae and Pat Buettner, Joan McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Baxter Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gerald, Herbie and Lois Butcher, Dick and Darlene Helvern, r. and Mrs. T. A. Baxter Sr., Jack and Bernice Ahrendes, Hazel Hoeft and Phyllis Gakle.

A round of showers has kept Judy Ann Conk busy before her wedding day on Sept. 20. She will wed Clifford Jones in the Westminster Community Presbyterian Church in Long Beach. Rev. Wendell Greenlee will perform the ceremony.

On Friday, Sept. 9, Mrs. Earl DuVall of 6044 Bonfair entertained. The theme of the party was carried out in pink and white and a large pink and white umbrella was suspended from the ceiling. From the handle pink and white streamers extended to a decorated card table. Here gifts were placed by Mmes. Russell Conk, Roland Barron, David Adams, Earl Brumwell, Ray Pearson, William Riely, Bill Harlan and the grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Agnes Conk of Long Beach.

On Friday, Sept. 16, members of the family were invited to a shower at the Russell Conks' home at 6045 Blackthorne.

Half-Way Mark for League Provisionals

In festive celebration of the half-way mark in a busy year's work, Junior League Provisional Training Committee women and husbands will host an informal cocktail-buffet dinner party Saturday evening in honor of present provisional members. The patio and poolside at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Prichard, 5361 El Parque, will be the site for the gala occasion.

Special guests for the evening include Mrs. George Paul Heppes Jr., acting president of Junior League, and her husband, and Messrs. and Mmes. Carroll Alpers, Bernard Bailey, Charles Black, Frank Christensen, James H. Crooker, E. O. Gould Jr., Gordon Hayter, Robert D. Hesley, James Hoagland, Arthur Hooker Jr., Wilbur Ingram, Jack London Jr., Norman Meager, Bruce Mitchell, William G. Paul Jr., Wilbur Robertson and William Seal.

Members of the committee and their husbands planning to attend are Messrs. and Mmes. Robert Sully, Walter Landis Jr., Earl Fast, Roderick Sherwood Jr., Harry D. Baker Jr., Paul Bauer, James G. Craig Jr., Jack Drown, Clifton Lowen, Oliver P. Roemer, John B. A. Johnson, William H. Wallace, Paul R. Wheeler, Manley Natland; Drs. and Mmes. Meckoll during a party for relatives and friends given by parents of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Fox, 731 Lime Ave. No wedding date has been set. Wrong Bid Hurts Hand

The play of today's hand was short and sweet. West opened the six of diamonds, and East took the first two tricks with the queen and ace. South mournfully claimed the rest of the tricks, and the opponents were happy to surrender them. They were pleased to score a profit of 100 points on a hand that might well have produced a loss of more than 1400 points.

What went wrong in the bidding? Who made a mistake, and what should the correct bid have been?

There was nothing wrong with South's bidding. He was a bit conservative at his second turn with a bid of only two clubs, but he wasn't particularly encouraged by a response in his void suit.

North made the fatal error when he accepted the invitation. He should have bid five no trump instead of six hearts. He knew that South had a tremendous two-suiter in hearts and clubs. North had a queen for each of his partner's suits, and he had a king and an ace in the two other suits.

Obviously, both of South's long suits were ready to run. The only problem was to avoid the loss of two tricks at the very outset. South would have accepted the invitation by raising to six no-trump, and no opening lead (nor anything else) would have defeated this slam.

The point is that some slam contracts must be played from a particular side of the table to avoid a lead through a king. This hand should have been spotted as belonging to this category.

Doing Things for Others Makes for a Happy Life

By ANGELO PATRI

Boys and girls, you want to be liked. Everybody does but some people seem not to know how to go about it. Some think that having a lot of money and showing it, by spending it on treats for all and everyone, is the way. Some try to make the grade by saying "Yes," to anything that is asked. Naturally, they soon learn this doesn't work.

The truth is that you cannot buy your way with money or gifts or subservience. But there is an unfailing way and a simple one. Give your best in service without asking or expecting a return. That does it.

So you begin by taking a pencil and a notebook and setting down the things you can do to be of service to other people. Begin at home. What can you do to make your mother's and your father's work lighter? Not just what you would like to do, remember, but what you CAN do—putting your bedroom in order, leaving the bathroom shipshape, helping entertain the friend of the family you least admire.

Then go outside the family. There is the teacher. A smile and a cordial good morning? A flower? A helping hand with the room equipment? Holding the door open for him? Having your notebook in on time and neatly done? He may faint but he will enjoy the experience.

Schoolmates? Stand back to let a girl pass. Give someone else a chance to have first choice at the cafeteria and smile while you do so. Congratulate a fellow pupil on a good mark or a good recitation. Send a get-well card to one who is ill or a note to one in trouble. Do your share of the unpleasant jobs, like being ticket chairman. Offer help when there is a mean job to be done or, if you're stuck with it, grin and carry it through as if it were a mission to Shangri La. Have fun spending your sunny self.

People, all people, and that includes everybody from grandfather to the new baby, are lonely. When a boy or girl stops on his way to lend a hand, if it is only to open a door or hand a newspaper, smile at a baby or escort an old person across the street, he makes the day brighter for all he meets and what is more, he adds to his own stature.

Come right down to it, the most profitable investment in life is what one gives of himself, his time, his thought, to others. Unselfishness becomes the highest form of selfishness because it unfolds love and love is, as you know, the greatest force in the world of men. Try it. You'll be liked.

To say "don't" does not teach a child in obedience, but proper training will. Dr. Patri tells how to train a child in obedience in his booklet No. 301. To obtain a copy send 25 cents in coin to him, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y.

Rear Adm. William J. Marshall

Chef of the Week

Commander Imports Food Intrigue From Far East

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

He's "at sea" vocationwise . . . but not avocationwise, you may be sure! Rear Adm. William J. Marshall, who serves our Navy as commander of Destroyer Flotilla 1, makes his debut today as Chef of the Week with a backlog of recipes which run the gamut of cakes 'n pies to Oriental dishes. Aboard his flagship the USS Hamul, he alternates his "at home" quarters between our shores and Japan.

Born in the "saaouth," Henderson, Ky., he attended that State's Center College, before entering the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. He was a member of both the track and swimming teams, and pledged Phi Delta Theta.

His first assignment was the old battleship Texas, the only battleship that ever returned home. She's now "enmothballed" in cement for posterity to see.

World War II supplied him the backdrop for many scenes. He saw action as the leader of destroyer groups in the South American waters, in the Normandy invasion, and in both the Okinawa and the Philippines battles. Convoy duty occupied him, too. He received the Croix de Guerre for his activity in the Normandy invasion on D-Day, and is also possessor of the Silver Star and Bronze Star among many other awards.

Following two years in Washington, D.C., as senior aide and executive assistant to Rear Adm. Robert C. Carney, chief of Naval operations, he was sent to Rome as Naval Attache. From there he went to Japan.

As a cook, he has an international reputation. An avid hunter and fisherman, he has shot, and cooked, everything from wild boar in Italy, wild turkey in Virginia, to quail, partridge and duck. Whatever he does, he does well, and has, according to our sleuth, never been known to fail on a menu or a meal. His wonderful palate for herbs, wines and condiments stands him well; and if ever you're invited to his home to dinner . . . be real sure to leave your imagination at home.

Fact is, not only could our "chef" write a cookbook, but one about his actual experiences, as well. For instance, about the time he ordered a 4-minute, soft boiled egg in Italy. No one ever heard of a boiled egg in Italy, you know. He could tell about the time he prepared an iguana (big land lizard) from the Galapagos Islands. Even their cook thought it was possessed of evil spirits.

Though he is a past master at Sukiyaki, a dish he perfected while attending a cooking class in Japan (he was the only man in a class of 10 women), today he's giving us his recipe for Braised Mushrooms and Bamboo Shoots.

Braised mushrooms and bamboo shoots—serves four.

- 1 cup bamboo shoots
- 1 cup mushrooms
- 1 tbs. fresh green peas, for color
- 2½ tbs. soya sauce, 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 cup chicken broth, stock or consomme
- 2½ tbs. cooking oil

Slice bamboo and mushrooms in long thin strips before measuring. Use either canned or fresh variety. Heat oil in pan to medium heat and add bamboo and mushrooms, cook for 3 minutes stirring constantly. Add chicken broth and turn up heat. Add soya sauce and boil for 3 min. Add sugar, turn down heat and simmer until almost dry. Mix ½ tsp. corn starch with a little water and add. Add peas and cook 1 min. Add ½ tbs. sesame oil or 1 tsp. chopped sesame seeds; stir well and remove from fire.

Braswell-Mefford Names Linked

First Church of the Nazarene, Compton, was the scene of the recent wedding ceremony, uniting in marriage Sandra Irene Mefford and Johnny N. Braswell. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Young.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. T. Mefford of Norwalk and her bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Braswell of Compton.

A reception was held in the church hall with Mabel Leavitt, Joyce Movius, Vera Hopper and Kassy Johnson serving as hostesses. The new Mrs. Braswell is a graduate of Excelsior High School, and a former member of the Usherettes Club. The bridegroom has recently been released from the Army serving in Japan and Korea. Following their honeymoon, the young couple will reside in Compton.

Why Grow Old?

Exercises for Fatty Deposits in Certain Areas of the Body

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Many women who are the correct weight, who have slim waists and flat abdomens, nevertheless have fatty deposits over the diaphragm. Others have quite slender figures but have lots of fat across the shoulders.

Special exercise rather than diet is the answer to these figure defects. If such a woman diets she will lose all over, in the spots in which she does not wish to lose as well as in the ones she wants to decrease. Also, she would lose weight which she should have. Today I will give you a few exercises for these special problems.

For slimming the diaphragm: Stand tall. Raise your arms over your head, one arm by each ear. Keep the arms in this position as you make large circles with your trunk. Pull in each direction, making the circles as large as comfortable. Circle first in one direction and then in the other.

Another: Lie on the floor on your back, arms resting on the floor at your sides. Stretch back with the left arm and forward with the right leg. The arm and leg do not leave the floor. Do this slowly and hold at the maximum stretch while you count slowly to five. Relax. Next, stretch backward with the right arm and forward with the left leg. Hold. Relax and repeat. About ten times with each arm and leg.

Now let us consider first aid for fat across the shoulders. Stand erect. Raise both arms sideward, shoulder height, palms facing forward. Do this in a relaxed manner. Now swing the arms forward at shoulder height and cross the arms, pulling as far across as possible. Elbows are relaxed when you do this. The pull comes from the shoulders. Hold a few seconds. Return arms to sideward, shoulder height position, in a relaxed manner. Continue.

Another: Stand tall. Bend at the waist until your trunk is at right angles to your legs. Raise your arms overhead. Keep the arms in this position as you swing your trunk as far to the left as possible and then as far to the right as you can. Continue. Raise the trunk and return arms to sides. Repeat.

All of these exercises should be done in a relaxed, slow manner because the stretch is the principle on which they rely.

If you would like to have my exercises for waist slimming send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 6 to Josephine Lowman, in care of The Press-Telegram.

Mr. Don L. Nutter
Retail Advertising Manager
Independent, Press-Telegram
Long Beach, California

Dear Mr. Nutter:

Did you know we attribute our promotional and expansion success to the Independent and Press-Telegram?

Let me remind you of our last meeting just to be sure you remember our conversation. I timed our story from Dinel's life span starting in 1939...and now 400,000 dresses later, 300,000 hats later, 500,000 sports clothes later and nearly half a million coats, suits and accessories later, I say we are glad we did. Remember, too, 90% of Dinel's advertising budget has been in your paper, and consistently, too. We liked it...did you?

Dinel's and their store family send greetings and appreciation to you at the Independent, Press-Telegram for service beyond the call of duty. You helped considerably by your clean printing copy and by delivering our ad to 145,000 of our friends, which brings us closer to our potential trade.

In line with our expansion program we have plans to announce a second store that will open on or about Nov. 15 in the new Los Altos district, which will duplicate our store on 505 E. Ocean and make it convenient for our present customers, as well as new customers to shop in a Dinel store.

Best wishes, my friend.

Sincerely,
Art Dinel

Childhood Stuttering a Part of Normal Development

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Case P-342: Danny R., aged 3, is a bright little boy.

"But, Dr. Crane, we are so worried about him," his mother exclaimed. "For Danny is beginning to stutter horribly. Everybody notices it, and we are so afraid it might become permanent.

"I've tried to correct him and so has his Daddy, but that seems to make it worse. We are at the end of our wits. What do psychologists advise in such a case for we don't want him handicapped by stuttering all his life?"

Stuttering is a normal and natural stage in the development of children of pre-school age. For when bright youngsters like Danny get excited and wish to express themselves, they have a much larger "understanding" vocabulary than their "speaking" vocabulary.

And that is the natural result in learning any new language. If you adults ever studied Spanish or German or French in high school, you may recall that you could understand the written and spoken language better than you could speak it yourself.

If Danny's neurotic parents will just remedy their own tense personalities and leave Danny alone, he will get over this normal stage of stuttering in a year or two.

For then his "speaking" vocabulary will overtake his "understanding" vocabulary.

If, however, they make an issue of his perfectly normal toddler stuttering and get him self-conscious and fearful, then they can actually "set" that stuttering as a permanent handicap to his personality.

A cardinal rule of child psychology states that parents should ignore the toddler stage of stuttering and NEVER make an issue of it or "bawl out" the child.

But suppose you encounter a stutterer who is in the teens or a mature adult. What then? Well, they can be reassured by realizing that a lot of distinguished people have been in the same boat with them, including Moses and Demosthenes, as well as Churchill and the former King of England.

Stuttering is simply a nuisance habit that attaches to (1) the act of speaking your native tongue, (2) to other human beings and (3) in your usual conversational tones.

Draw a triangle and place one of those numbered items on each corner. That's the typical picture of chronic stuttering in an adult.

The cure consists in altering any one of those three items. For example, if the stutterer speaks in a foreign language, he may be entirely free from stuttering. Or if he reads aloud or sings, he is O.K.

Second, let him talk to the dogs or horses or other nonhuman creatures; and he can enunciate smoothly.

Third, let him pitch his voice higher or lower than normally so he alters the normal conversational tones, and he can generally get along very well.

One of the best and quickest remedies is for the stutterer to alter his normal conversational pattern at (3) above, as by biting his tongue between his molar teeth.

Then keep the tongue imprisoned between those teeth and try to carry on conversation. This simple trick can work wonders in helping free a confirmed stutterer from his nuisance habit of stuttering.

But never entrench ordinary childish stuttering by making an issue of it, as Danny's mother has been doing.

Send for my bulletin on "Stuttering." Please enclose a long, 3c stamped self-addressed envelope and a dime in requesting a Dr. Crane bulletin. Address: Dr. George W. Crane, in care of Hopkins Syndicate, Mallott, Ind.

Church Mothers

Mothers of St. Luke's Church School will open the fall year with a 10:30 a.m. business session Thursday at the church, preceded by Holy Communion. A pot luck luncheon and program are planned.

Molly Mayfield

Deal Me in This Hand, Hubby!

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I have a good husband, believe me. In fact, he is too good sometimes. But nonetheless we have a problem.

You see, about three times a week he goes out to play cards. Not that this is so bad in itself. BUT he leaves home around 6 p. m. and doesn't return until the wee small hours. And by wee small hours I mean two-ish or three-ish—a. m., of course.

Meantime I take care of the business every night until closing time. When I get home I have four walls to look at. Oh, there's a TV, but it's no fun just sitting there watching it alone. Not night after night, anyway.

Another thing, these men he plays cards with bet rather heavily and I live in constant terror that my husband will lose more than we can afford. It's easy to do when you're gambling, you know.

Frankly, Molly, the whole situation upsets me terribly and the long and short of it is I'm miserable. Doubtless you're asking yourself why I haven't taken the matter up with my husband. Well I have—and I told him I was going to write to you for advice. He said, "Whatever she decides I'll do willingly." So there you are.

Please help me, Molly, as I want to keep my husband and home together.—MISERABLE AND LONESOME WIFE.

DEAR M. AND L. WIFE:

Yipes, I feel terribly responsible! Do you suppose he'll really do what I—or we—decide? He must know that I'll side with you, don't you think?

It seems so obvious that no wife wants her husband betting money which he can't afford. Gambling debts can be worrisome things, and have wrecked many a home.

Why don't you get him to cut his card games to one a week? And why don't you get him to promise to set up a budget for his games, a sort of fund to play with, and when he reaches the limit he stops? And while you're at it, why don't you tap him for his winnings as your reward for minding the business and sitting home alone?

And, speaking of betting, I wonder what the odds are that he won't like Auntie Molly's advice!—M. M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I don't know why I write because it's too late for any advice. I don't suppose you know how sad a phrase "too late" can be.

You see, I was married to a fine man. We had three little boys. My husband was a hard-working man, a good provider. But we had little excitement in our lives. We lived the usual mundane life in a small suburb, with money enough to get along nicely, but not luxuriously.

I went for a few weeks to visit my mother, and I met this man who, measured by our standards, was quite wealthy. I fell madly in love with him—and he with me. And, to make a long, story short, we ran away together. Nothing else in the world seemed to matter but our being together.

That was five years ago. What I thought was love was not. Months later he went his way, and I went mine. But it was too late. My husband divorced me. I have not seen my boys. And I'm as alone as a person can be. I learned "too late."—MARTHA M.

THE TOUCH OF A HAND

by HELEN KELLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Helen Keller has devoted her entire life to the encouragement of the handicapped. Left totally blind and deaf by illness when she was 19 months old, she learned to communicate through a system of symbols traced in her palm by her teacher, Anne Sullivan. After graduating from Radcliffe College in 1904, Miss Keller became internationally famous as an author, lecturer and entertainer. Last June 27, the world celebrated her 75th birthday. This week will be marked by the publication of her latest book, Teacher (Doubleday, $4.50), a biography of her beloved mentor.

Were you ever at sea in dense fog when it seemed as if a tangible white darkness shut you in? "Light! Give me light!" — that was the wordless cry of my soul in my early childhood.

Then one day when I was six, I stretched out my hand; someone took it, and I was caught up and held close in the arms of her who had come to reveal all things to me, and more than all things else, to love me.

That was the most important day I remember in all my life — March 3, 1887 — the day on which my teacher Anne Sullivan came to me.

Before she came, I did not know that I am. I cannot hope to describe adequately that unconscious yet conscious time of nothingness. I did not know that I lived or acted or desired.

Through my teacher's infinite patience, love and understanding, my left hand slowly became to me what your hearing and sight together are to you.

As I ponder on Anne Sullivan's work, I am further impressed by one of her most beneficent experiments — inspiring me to explore and make a home in the still obscure but wonderful country of individual consciousness.

THE AUTHOR (seated), at the age of 13, holds hand of her teacher, Anne Sullivan, who helped her overcome handicaps.

She knew that, deprived of sight and hearing, I couldn't depend on the community of experience that springs from the use of the eye and the ear. Therefore, as I grew older, she urged me to go as deeply as possible into the wilderness of myself as an individual.

I have never given up the belief that intelligent cooperation with our fellowman is essential to progress, but it seems to me that the development of each person's resources and abilities is equally important.

In my case it was a slow process, and it required all Teacher's persistence and ingenuity to keep alive the spark that would make of me an individual human being with freedom to be myself.

It was not until after the start of World War II, when I spent two and a half years visiting wounded servicemen in hospitals from coast to coast, and saw their sublime courage, that I fully realized my inner power. Thankfully I say that, long after Teacher's earthly presence has passed, she animates me to cultivate "the world which each human being uniquely is."

Thrilled by Travels

That is why my travels from one end of the earth to the other have thrilled me, opening great windows upon a world still stumbling on its way to civilization, but alive with good will and undreamed possibilities of achievement.

Seeing India and Japan in all their new splendor of creative effort, Egypt and Africa striving toward a higher humanity, I have been spurred by Teacher's vision to use my individuality in serving the handicapped everywhere — and so long as I am on earth, I shall continue reaching out for fresh goals. ■

WORLD'S FIRST ATOMIC

A weapon such as man never has seen, it will be able to fly 2,000,000 miles without

IN THREE TO eight years, the United States will put into the skies a colossus among airplanes which, with only a few pounds of atomic fuel, will be able to:

Fly around the world 80 times (a distance of 2,000,000 miles) without refueling;

Reach speeds of more than 2,500 miles an hour;

Stay aloft for days at cruising speed;

Circle the globe under cover of unchanging darkness (by keeping up with the earth's rotation);

Revolutionize air warfare by serving as a "flying air base," from which four to eight jet fighter-bombers could maintain unceasing patrol of our skies.

Conceivably all this may be ours by 1958 — 10 years and half a billion dollars after studies of nuclear-powered aircraft began at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Atomic scientists at the outset said the job would take at least 20 years — if it could be done at all.

Bright as this picture appears, there is a grim side. The United States may not be the first world power to fly an atomic plane. U.S. Intelligence reports say that Russia may beat us to it.

Currently, however, the A-plane construction job has been placed on a top-priority "crash program" basis. Red-tape delays are ended. Money troubles are out of the way. With $182,000,000 already spent — $32,000,000 more than the entire cost of developing and building the atomic submarine Nautilus — a liberal $100,000,000 is authorized for each of the next three years. Now, it's up to the slide-rule boys.

All this represents a remarkable triumph. For years after an atomic-powered plane first was proposed to the Government — by the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Co. in 1945 — operations were stymied by argument. Some of the nation's leading scientists warned that the plane would be a gigantic boondoggle; despite the early progress of 900 technicians working at Oak Ridge, atomic experts "proved" that the plane could not be built.

Only after the "proof" was examined at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology were the early findings reversed. In its still-unpublished "Lexington report," issued in the late 1940's, MIT stated categorically that development of an atomic airplane was altogether feasible.

Even this didn't end the hassle. As late as 1952, Defense Department bigwigs reduced working funds and doused cold water over the program; the Air Force ignored Atomic Energy Commission urgings to assign top talent to atomic-plane research. Real, uninterrupted progress began only recently, when Air Force Sec. Harold Talbott, since resigned, gave the atomic plane and intercontinental missiles first priority above all other Air Force projects.

What will come out of all the scientific research is so secret — and so mysterious, even to its creators — that only the barest outlines of possible design can yet be glimpsed. But Eugene Zuckert, former Atomic Energy Commissioner, told PARADE:

"The atomic plane will be the Hollywood of technology. Everything about it will have to be described in superlatives. Even the problems connected with its development are superlative — the knottiest ever faced."

The biggest problem right now is how to shield the plane's crew members from atomic radiation. Without shielding, no human would be safe within a mile of a high-powered nuclear reactor in operation. Ordinary design practice, according to AEC officials, calls for a lead and cement shield — a little matter of 50 to 100 tons. So the search is on for methods or materials which can reduce this enormous weight.

One Advantage: Uranium Is Light

Happily, the plane's motive power provides an important weight saving. One pound of uranium 235 contains heat equal to 1,700,000 pounds of gasoline. This means that an atomic airplane's fuel consumption can be measured in pounds per day instead of thousands of pounds per hour as in a conventional plane.

Another headache — one of dozens of toughies — arises from the fact that ordinary lubricants turn to tar or even solidify under radiation. In the atomic airplane, oiled machinery cannot be used.

As for the reactor itself, scientists envision it as a simple cylindrical body through which fissionable material, such as uranium 235 or plutonium 239, will be distributed. Passages in the reactor must contain a heat-removing coolant, and a material called a "moderator" which helps control neutrons liberated in the fission process. Here again the bugaboo of radiation poses a difficult problem. Most known cooling fluids rapidly lose their effectiveness under radiation. But this puzzle, too, will be solved, say the scientists.

Many proposals for a power plant have been made. Suggested are turbine-driven propellers, a turbojet in which the reactor takes the place of combustion chambers and a ram-jet engine.

Design of the airplane itself will probably represent a radical departure from that of conventional aircraft. The atomic plane's landing weight will be much higher than that of conventional planes, and very probably its landing speed will have to be very fast. Perhaps water, rather than ground, will prove best for takeoff and landing purposes.

Partly for this reason the Navy, with a wealth of experience in producing ever-lighter atomic reactors — for both submarines and surface craft — is strongly urging the use of a seaplane rather than a land-based craft to carry the first atomic-airpower plant. As Navy design experts envision the atomic airplane, it could be an adaptation of either of two craft now available: the PBM Sea Master, a high-speed swept-wing jet seaplane made by Martin, or the Douglas A3-C Skywarrier, which can fly at a speed faster than sound.

In any case, the first atomic plane will be equipped with a standard jet engine as well as an atomic power plant. The standard engine will be used for takeoff in order to conserve on the atomic output and cut down radiation, which would be much higher during a takeoff than in cruising.

There will be plenty of ground testing before any attempt is made to take the first A-plane into the air. While scientists have no fear that a nuclear aircraft will create any hazard to persons in its vicinity when operating as an intact piece of machinery, the Air Force shudders to think what would happen if one were to crash in a populated area.

ATOMIC SUBMARINE Nautilus has proved nuclear power practical for war craft. Commissioned one year ago, it can cruise 25,000 miles without refueling or cross the Atlantic submerged at top speed (20 knots).

Work on the atomic plane has been divided among six large companies, with contracts let as follows: Lockheed — preliminary design studies; Boeing — engineering studies on the application of nuclear powerplants to aircraft; Pratt & Whitney and General Electric — development of an atomic aircraft engine; Convair — study and research; Curtiss-Wright — design studies for the application of atomic power to the propulsion of aircraft.

Coordinating the Government's attack on the atomic-plane problem is Brig. Gen. Donald J. Keirn, a 50-year-old West Pointer who silently bears up under the title, Chief of the Office for Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion. A comparative "mystery man," General Keirn talks about the atomic airplane only to Congress, and always behind sealed doors.

So secret is the whole atomic-plane program that even colleagues of General Keirn hesitate to discuss the man in charge. Little about him is available beyond his specific record, beginning with his graduation as number 100 in a class of 300 cadets in 1929. He was still a captain in 1941, but early in World War II he was moved by the late Gen. Henry H. (Hap) Arnold from his job as engine expert at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio, to study Britain's progress in jet development. Later, he supervised construction of the first U.S. jet-propelled aircraft, the Bell P-59 Airocomet.

Liaison with the A-bomb

In 1946 General Keirn became the Air Corps' liaison officer for the Manhattan District, the original atomic-bomb project. Still later, he was special director of the AEC's military application division.

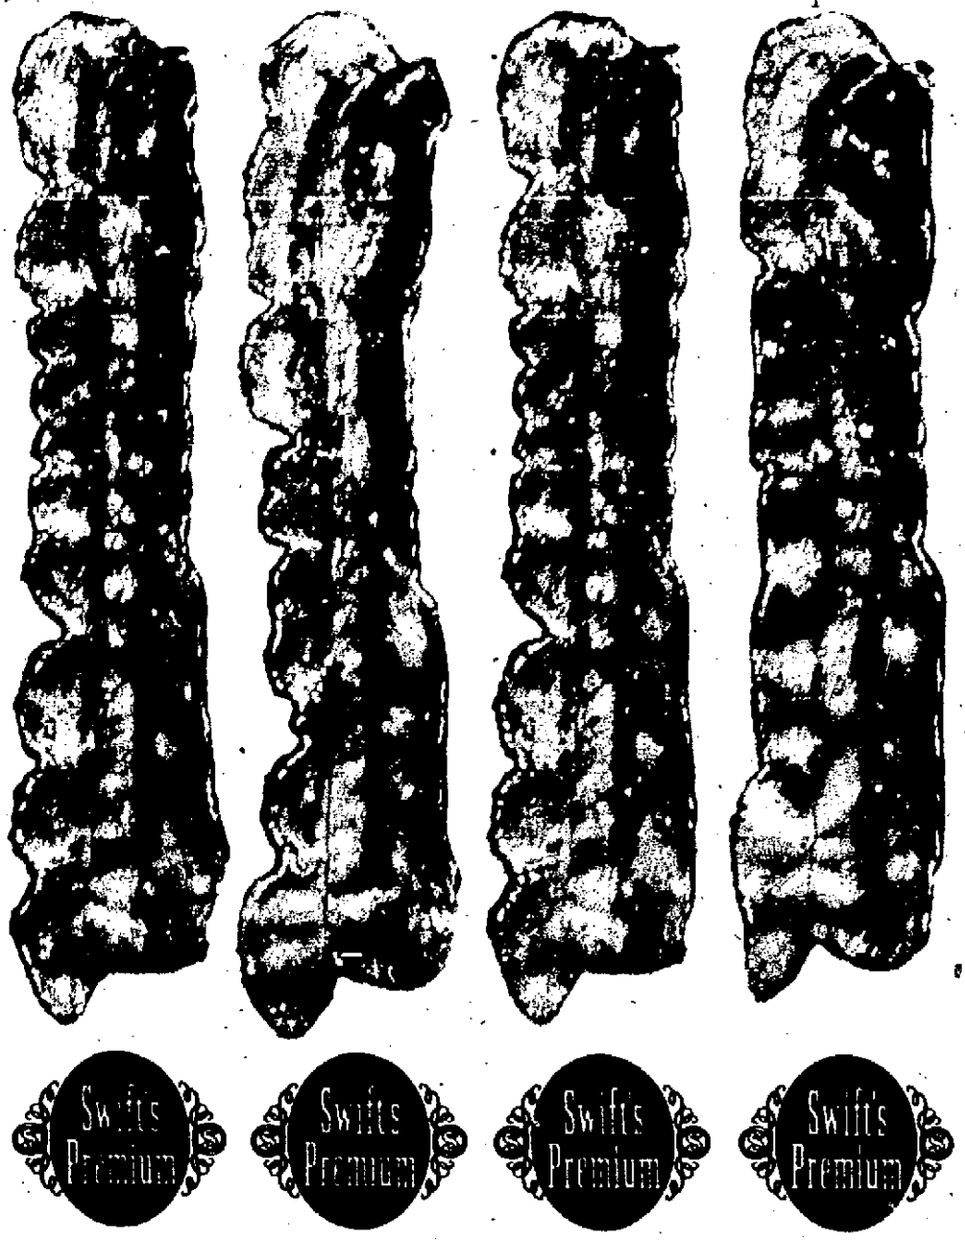

Last May 9 he gave a very brief progress report on his atomic-plane work, in testimony before the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. He said 1) he had all the money needed for the project, and 2) the program was going ahead as fast as possible.

Not all of General Keirn's hearers were entirely happy with his performance to date. Rep. Mel Price (D., Ill.), a committee member, recently complained: "General Keirn lets the aircraft contractors run their own show in trying to develop the atomic plane. He doesn't assume the leadership that he should." Other Democrats on the committee have expressed some disappointment with the progress made, and with what they regard as failure of the Air Force and the AEC to centralize their work.

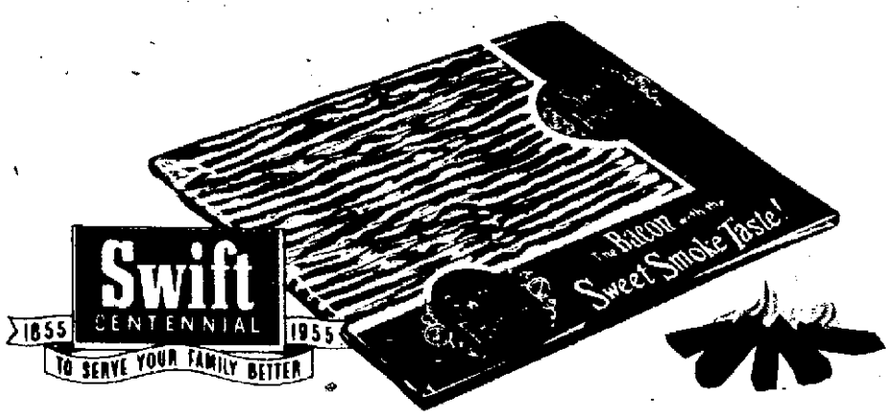

This concern is, of course, understandable. Despite many atomic scientists who declare that it should be possible for the United States to build a nuclear-powered plane for ground-testing within three years, and get it into the air soon afterwards, the cautious Air Force is still insisting that from six to 10 years will be required.

Meanwhile, U.S. Intelligence continues to predict darkly that Russia may fly an atomic airplane in as few as two years. Some scientists as steadily insist that the Soviet cannot do the job in less than five.

At any rate, the importance of the first A-plane cannot be exaggerated. The nation that launches it will have a weapon with vast power and practically limitless range. ■

Posing for a typical starlet shot, Marla looks pretty for PARADE's cameraman.

MARLA ENGLISH: She chose love

She had her Big Chance for fame and riches — the break every starlet dreams of — and she turned it down

HOLLYWOOD.
This is the sad saga of starlet Marla English. Starlets reputedly are willing to do just about anything for a chance to become full-fledged stars. But Marla was offered a clean shot at stardom — and gave it up because she was in love.

At 20, Marla for three years has been a handsomely curved girl who flits through one or two scenes of a movie, saying little but showing much. Originally signed by Paramount after winning a beauty contest in her home town, San Diego, she was paid $100 a week to decorate scenes in various films, including Red Garters and Rear Window.

Then the studio pulled a surprise. It cast Marla opposite no less a figure than Spencer Tracy in a film to be made in France, The Mountain. This was — as Hollywood puts it — the Big Break.

Before leaving the country, Marla needed a smallpox vaccination. She got it, promptly went to the hospital with a soaring fever. And there — apparently — she reached an unlikely decision. From her bed she called the studio to say, "I can't do The Mountain. I'm tired and upset."

Stunned, Paramount suspended Marla and signed another starlet, Barbara Darrow, for the part. When Marla left the hospital, PARADE buttonholed her.

"I don't know why I did it," she said. "It's the dumbest thing I've ever done. I have absolutely no explanation."

An explanation came, however, from a close relative. Said she: "Marla has fallen in love with a young Paramount player, Bud Pennell. She desperately wanted the studio to give him a part in The Mountain. Then the two of them could have gone off to France together. When the studio refused, she blew her top. A woman in love will do anything."

This, a Paramount executive conceded, was basically correct. "Only an actress in love," he added, "would give up a picture with Spencer Tracy." ■ learned from the doctor that the man of their family is seriously ill. R.: a social worker listens.

INVOLVED in Marla's confusion are Larry (Bud) Pennell, Barbara Darrow.

NEW YORK.

Tense, expectant people, their faces showing the fear of illness, sit in little circles, each centered on a young doctor and a medical social worker. And they ask questions:

"What's really wrong with my father?"

"Is that new treatment any good?"

"Can a woman as old as my mother come through this operation?"

"When will our son come home?"

The doctors answer calmly, reassuringly. They explain the action of drugs used for one patient; the surgery required for another; the chances of recovery for a third. As they talk, there unfolds a drama of human emotion — hope, joy, despair, relief, surprise. For this is Family Night at Montefiore Hospital here. Thought to be the only program of its kind in the U.S., it is a great hospital's way of opening its heart to the relatives of ward patients.

MRS. MINNA FIELD: "All who work with the sick are helped by the understanding Family Night brings."

Every Tuesday evening they stream into Montefiore's rambling auditorium, eager for information. Doctors and social workers are equally eager to answer their questions about the ailments of loved ones, to explain treatment — and to gain the understanding so often necessary to the patients' well-being after they leave the hospital.

Not long ago, a middle-aged woman who complained of recurrent headaches and dizziness was admitted to Montefiore. To her anxious family, the symptoms spelled only one thing: brain tumor. At Family Night, the doctor frankly admitted he could find no cause for the symptoms.

The following week, the family returned dejected, expecting the worst. But just that afternoon doctors had solved the mystery; the woman had a rare eye infection. When the relatives heard of the finding, they were all smiles. In a few days the infection had yielded to treatment and the woman was home again.

Family Night is restricted to relatives of ward patients for a simple reason: relatives of those in private and semi-private rooms can buttonhole a doctor just about any time they want. But the ward patient may not have a family doctor; the ward doctor may be too busy to answer questions; it's difficult to pin down a surgeon in a ward.

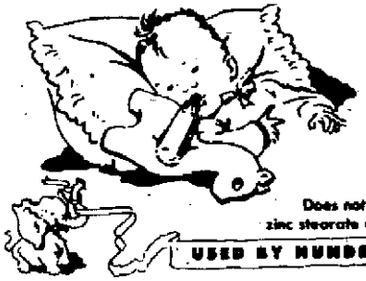

As Dr. Martin Cherkasky, Montefiore director, says: "Typically, relatives visiting

But still there is anxiety. Expressions such as these tell the drama of Family Night.

wards keep one eye on the patient and the other eye peeled for a man in a white coat."

It was this realization that sparked Family Night more than five years ago. Since its inception, the doctor-social worker teams have counseled more than 25,000 relatives of ward patients. Montefiore staff members are convinced that Family Night programs, if started throughout the U.S., could be of help to many thousands more.

What do relatives ask? According to Mrs. Minna Field, assistant to the chief, division of social medicine at Montefiore, the hospital's experience shows these questions commonest, in essentially this order: 1) What's wrong with the patient? 2) What will his illness mean to our future family living? 3) How much will the patient be able to do when he returns home?

The answers provide a sound basis for family planning and action, says Mrs. Field. Of course, the well-being of patient and family may not hinge solely on a technical medical problem. The patient's upbringing, habits, desires, can become a part of his overall health picture.

That's where the social worker comes in. Her understanding of the emotional side of illness, together with a knowledge of what motivates patients and relatives, often proves invaluable.

Take the case of a white-haired little Italian woman, admitted to Montefiore with heart disease. She responded to treatment, but just before her discharge it was decided to put her on a salt-free diet. High salt content in her food would only aggravate her sickness.

The woman, a widow living with an only son, refused indignantly. "You can't make good spaghetti without salt!" she said.

At Family Night, a social worker took the woman's son aside. "Do you eat spaghetti?" she asked.

"Love it," he replied. "We have it about every night. I always ask for it."

The social worker thought fast. Obviously the woman wanted to please her son. But to do so would endanger her own health. When the social worker explained this, the son quickly understood. He now eats spaghetti at lunch — while at work — and keeps his mother from using salt in the evening meal.

What's a Biopsy?

Not only patients and relatives benefit by Family Night. The young resident doctors also get invaluable experience. As one example, they learn to translate "medicalese" into language understandable to the layman.

For instance, say "biopsy" to the average person; he won't know what you're talking about. It means cutting off a bit of tissue to make a diagnosis — so one doctor explains it as "nipping off a piece of skin — like when you shave."

Similarly, "prognosis" is translated as "outlook"; "bone marrow test" as "a look at the factory where blood is manufactured"; "frozen section" as "examination by a special doctor"; "subacute bacterial endocarditis" as, simply, "an infection."

Occasionally, Family Night tackles a major family problem all by itself. Such was the case of 15-year-old Bill, who suffered from arthritis. Doctor and social worker realized that Bill's parents actually didn't want him to come home. He was a bother there. He had to be lifted in and out of bed. He needed expensive medicines.

After more than a year of Family Night meetings, the parents' rejection of their son was reversed. Today he's back home, preparing for college.

"In a sense," says one Montefiore doctor, "that case is worth the whole Family Night program." ■

A college president asks:

SHOULD YOUR CHILD

by DR. PAUL N. ELBIN

Late one evening recently, a politician came to see me on "urgent" business. His mission was to intercede for a boy who had just been dropped from college. On behalf of the boy's father, a fellow politician and coal-company executive, he asked us to please reconsider.

The plea he presented was moving. But I happened to know something about the boy. He had barely scraped through high school. When we admitted him, it was on probation. By the end of his freshman year, it was evident that he was not college material.

I explained all this to the politician. Yet as he went away I could see that he did not understand, that in his mind remained the belief that any boy financially able to attend college should be admitted and, if he behaved himself, in due time be graduated. In this, I fear, he merely reflected a common American attitude — one held by entirely too many parents.

To these parents, a college degree for their children has become the be-all of life. And while this is in a sense admirable, it also is misguided — in some ways, dangerous. You can legislate equal educational opportunity, but you cannot legislate brains. And the fact that the Smiths and the Joneses both live on the same street, both earn $4,500 a year and both drive new cars doesn't mean that their children are equally qualified to earn college degrees.

This craze for college diplomas is debasing our colleges. Indeed, it is converting many of them into diploma mills. Standards have been lowered, facilities overtaxed, the supply of qualified teachers exhausted. But the worst feature of the diploma fad is not so much what it does to colleges as what it does to students. Family and social pressures that push them into a world they aren't equipped to cope with can mark them for life. A student who has flunked out of college is often worse off than if he had never begun.

In the same class with the politician's son at West Liberty was a girl I'll call Mary Brown. In high school, Mary's grades were so-so; but she was a bubbling girl, well-liked by teachers and classmates. In college, she became a cheerleader and social butterfly, and won many friends. But her grades were alarming. Her smile faded as she struggled with history, chemistry and other subjects beyond her scope. Finally, a week before exams, Mary found a way out: she eloped with a boy she had known only a few weeks.

This month, an estimated 2,505,000 students — more than 30 per cent of their age group — are starting a new college year. Included among them will be quite a few Mary Browns, for most authorities think that not more than 25 per cent of teenagers are capable of mastering a four-year college course.

Perhaps your own son or daughter is among this new crop of students. If so, it may be too late to ask yourself the question, "Will college be good for my child — or bad?" But for those of you whose children will reach college age in the next few years (say before 1960, when the proportion of teenagers in college is expected to rise even higher), it is not too early for hard, objective thinking. You should begin now to take stock of your child's abilities and handicaps.

Of course, it is impossible to set up a yardstick and say, "Measure your child against this. If he doesn't measure up, find him a job." But here are a few simple rules that might guide you:

1) Does he read? No matter what his interest — science, home economics, business, engineering — a child with no interest in books is a borderline risk the first two years of college.

THE AUTHOR:

Dr. Paul N. Elbin, a veteran educator, is president of state-operated West Liberty College, near Wheeling, West Virginia.

2) What were his high-school grades? Grades are not an infallible index, often reflecting personality problems or simply poor teachers. But within limits, they remain one of the best indicators we have.

3) Does he learn quickly? And just as important, How does he learn? That is, must each step be explained to him, or can he think things out for himself? Must he run to you for help? Does he apply previous knowledge to the problem?

4) What are his interests? A teenager's interests usually stay with him the rest of his life. A wise parent can guide him into a college course and a vocation in line with these interests.

5) Is he a self-starter? That is, does he map out projects on his own initiative, and, if he does, does he carry them out? Can he work on his own? (This becomes more important as enrollments increase; for while crowded classrooms and overtaxed faculties make it easier for some to slide by, lack of individual attention also makes it more difficult for the serious-minded to get a real education.)

GO TO COLLEGE?

6) What's his IQ? Although IQs have been overrated in some places, they are valuable when weighed with the other factors mentioned above.

I can anticipate the protests: But what of the "prestige" value of a college diploma? (Where is the prestige if every child in the block, from the dullard to the genius, earns the same diploma?) Without a diploma, will my child be able to get a job? (Yes — any job he is equipped to handle.)

What American parents need to realize is that while every child is not endowed with equal mental ability, every normal boy or girl is endowed with the ability to do something well. His mission is not necessarily to heal the sick, do atomic research or teach school. There are many vocations where skill with the hands or an outgoing personality is more of an asset than any amount of book learning.

Perhaps it seems odd to you that a college president should urge people not to go to college. The truth of the matter is that not too many people are going to college — only too many of the wrong kind. According to the report of the Commission on Financing Higher Education in the U.S., 20 per cent of the top 25 per cent "in intellectual promise" do not even complete high school. While about 35 per cent of our high-school graduates are going to college, only about half the top 25 per cent are going.

This lack of interest among the qualified needs to be met on the high-school level. It is not a matter solely for the high-school guidance counselor; every teacher should help. And I should like to see more organized recruiting for college. Too many college faculty members feel they are soiling their hands if they actively go after students. But if the football coach can recruit promising halfbacks, why can't the English professor recruit promising poets?

To see that those qualified receive the education they need — and deserve — I think we should revamp our four-year program. Our junior colleges and community institutes should be expanded to provide vocational training and possibly to handle such programs as homemaking and business administration. At the end of the two-year course, the bachelor's degree would be awarded.

Beyond the junior colleges would be an intensified, three-year course of genuine college education for those with definite educational objectives. This course would culminate in the Master's degree — which has become, in reality, little more than a fifth year of college, anyway.

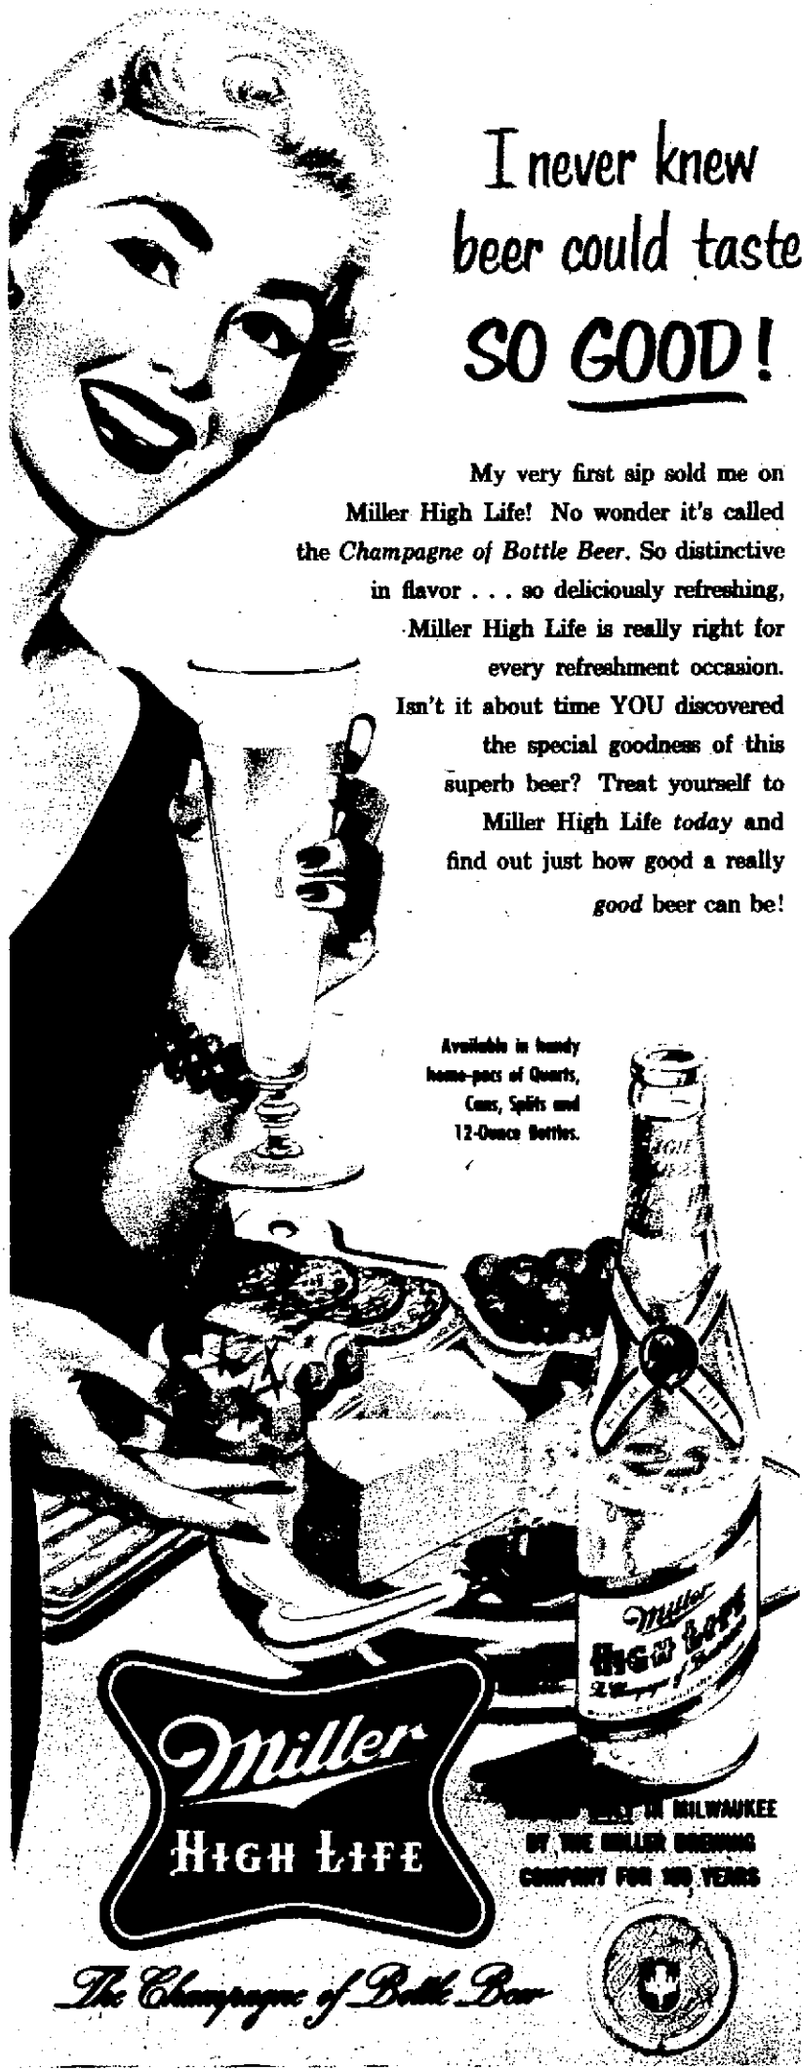

Such a reorganization would satisfy everybody. The serious student would be able to educate himself without being hamstrung by the disinterested. The parents who want bachelor's degrees for their children would be satisfied — and at less expense in time and money.

You Can't 'Give' Education

Yes, this would cheapen the bachelor's degree. But the bachelor's degree already has been cheapened by the innocent eagerness of American parents to give their children a better education than they themselves enjoyed. It is regrettable that such a noble sentiment can be so full of fallacy. For you cannot give an education to anyone; no matter who pays the bills, education must be self-earned.

More years in school do not necessarily mean more education. Not long ago, one Ph.D. I know resigned his first executive job a broken man. He had only one of the qualifications for executive work in education — his Ph.D. He had received this by sitting patiently through course after course, gradually accumulating credits and scraping together material for a thesis. But when his executive opportunity came, patience was not enough. He fumbled, failed, developed terrible headaches and resigned with dismissal imminent. Now he's back where he started.

When your child starts college this year — or next year, or the year after — you might ask yourself this question: Is he going to college because he is capable and eager, or, like that man, because he feels impelled by family and social pressures to travel a dead-end street? ■

3 WAYS WITH FRANKS

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

BOSTON FRANKS: Cut two 1-lb. loaves canned Boston Brown bread into three pieces, crosswise. Scoop out centers (and save for later use in a bread pudding), leaving ½-inch shells. Brush inside of shells with ketchup. Cut 4 frankfurters into thin crosswise slices; add to 1 lb. canned Boston baked beans; fill shells heaping full. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) 15 minutes. Meanwhile heat surplus bean mixture in saucepan. Remove bean cups to serving dish; spoon heated bean mixture around them. Garnish with onion rings. Serve with ketchup and pickle relish. Serves six. Old-fashioned coleslaw would be good with this recipe.

CARNIVAL FRANKS: Combine 2 cups canned, drained sauerkraut, ¼ cup minced onion, ½ cup chopped green pepper. Split 8 frankfurter rolls almost through, lengthwise; half-fill with 'kraut mixture. Split 8 franks lengthwise, almost through; spread cut surfaces with prepared mustard; fill with hot dog relish; top with ketchup; place on 'kraut in rolls. Place on a baking sheet in hot oven (425° F.) about 10 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serve at once. Makes eight servings.

CURRIED FRANKS ON RICE: Melt 3 tablespoons fat; add 1 onion, chopped fine, 1 garlic clove, minced, 1 tart apple, chopped; cook until lightly browned. Add 2 teaspoons each curry powder, brown sugar and Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon ginger and ¼ teaspoon each sugar and chili powder; cook until quite brown. Add 6 frankfurters cut into 4 diagonal slices each. Add 2 cans (8 oz. each) tomato sauce. Heat thoroughly. Serve on hot fluffy rice. Serves four.

Questions from Boys

The boys write me fewer letters than do the girls — although they certainly must have as many questions to ask on manners. However, I do have some queries from boys and would like to devote today's column to them.

Q. I would like to know what you'd call an ideal way to spend a movie date? — E.R., Washington, D.C.

A. It seems to me that mothers get to see very little of their teen-age sons and very little, too, of the girls they take out. I would like to see an ideal movie date start, if possible, at the boy's home with the girl as his guest at the family dinner. Or the girl could ask the boy to her house for dinner.

After the show it is fun to have a snack at the corner ice-cream parlor. Or the girl may invite the boy in at home, with her parents' approval, and serve him a snack. Most parents neither permit movie dates on school nights nor allow their daughters' escorts in on returning from a date if no one is at home. In any case, when the date ends the boy thanks the girl for her company and she thanks him for an enjoyable evening.

Q. If someone says that it was very nice meeting you, what do you say in return? — M.H., Tucson, Ariz.

A. You say, "It was very nice meeting you, too!"

Q. Do you acknowledge birthday cards? — C.R., Syracuse, N.Y.

A. It isn't necessary to write a note of thanks, if that's what you mean. If the card comes from a distance, you try to remember the other person's birthday in return. If cards come from people nearby, you thank them when you see them, and try to remember their birthdays.

Q. I am planning a party at my own house. There isn't any room to dance. Can you suggest some games? The age group will range from 11 to 16. — R.P., Strasburg, Pa.

A. If you have a record player, I am sure the group would enjoy listening to popular records. Word games are fun to play, and so is Charades. Try to choose some games that will keep the crowd moving from time to time. Your library has books on games; why not look into them?

Q. I am 17 years old and go with a girl 14. Is she too young to go out with me? — P.T., Buena Vista, Ga.

A. In the North, this would seem so, but I know that in Georgia girls of 14 often seem much more mature. If your own group accepts the situation, you can assume she is not too young for you. Ordinarily, it is better for a boy your age to take out girls in his own class rather than much younger students. For a girl so young to go with a boy so much older tends to exclude her from her own group and make her somewhat uncomfortable with the older group as well as with her own when she returns to it. If you didn't have some reservation about it yourself, I doubt that you would ask me.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS will be answered as space permits. (Miss Vanderbilt cannot answer letters personally.) Address: Amy Vanderbilt, PARADE, 285 Madison Ave., New York 17, N.Y.

CONSTIPATED?

HERE'S NATURE'S GREAT FOOD COMBINATION

For fitness and regularity

VITAL FOOD BULK TO IMPROVE YOUR "INTESTINAL TONE"

3 Fine Foods in One

Comfortable Elimination

You know what milk is. It is generally considered nature's most nearly perfect food.

But do you know about bran . . . All-Bran? If you're interested in a natural aid to regularity and fitness, you'll be interested in these facts.

W. K. Kellogg pioneered Kellogg's All-Bran almost 40 years ago. He set out to make it three great cereals in one: 1) a good-to-eat cereal; 2) a cereal which in combination with milk would provide very solid nutritional benefits; and 3) a natural remedy for one of mankind's most common ailments, constipation due to insufficient bulk.

This he achieved. For Kellogg's All-Bran, the original whole bran cereal, has become the most widely accepted and used of all bran cereals. It has literally helped millions.

Now as to Kellogg's All-Bran itself and why it is such a great food—the answer is simple. All-Bran is made from the vitamin and mineral rich outer layers of the whole wheat grain. And not only does All-Bran supply vitamins, minerals and protein—it is scientifically milled to bring you the natural food bulk you need in its most effective and appetizing form. All-Bran stays crisp in milk and is easy to eat.

Yes, All-Bran does things no drug-type laxative can even begin to accomplish—it actually improves your "Intestinal Tone" which may be below par due to insufficient bulk.

And Kellogg's All-Bran, served with milk, contributes nine body-builders you need daily for fitness.

So why not get the safe, gentle, natural laxative cereal you know you can depend on. Kellogg's All-Bran, the original. Eat a half cup of Kellogg's All-Bran every morning for 10 days. If it doesn't bring you satisfying, effective relief from constipation, you get double your money back. That's a promise from Kellogg's of Battle Creek, Michigan.

CHAMPION MARCIANO CHALLENGER MOORE

'If I were Archie Moore,'

says Jersey Joe Walcott . . .

'HERE'S HOW I'D FIGHT

NEW YORK.

Next Tuesday night Rocky Marciano and Archie Moore are scheduled to fight here for a title I once held — the heavyweight championship of the world. I think Moore is going to win it.

I make that prediction with only one "if." Archie will win if he's in perfect condition, ready to do something that will squeeze every last ounce of energy from his body. Let me explain:

In fighting Marciano, or watching him fight on television, always remember that he can't throw a fully effective straight punch. Why? Because Rocky has very short arms, and has to swing roundhouses to knock you out. The best defense against him, therefore, is to keep boring inside, away from the arc of those powerful roundhouses.

That kind of a defense, however, calls for a perfectly conditioned body — a stiff order for a guy like Archie Moore, who's been boxing over 20 years and confesses to being 38. Moreover, whether he's in condition or not is something that Moore doesn't know now, won't know till he's tagged by the first Marciano punch. At his age, your training can't tell you whether or not you're in condition. Only the fight can tell you that.

I learned this from sad experience. In my second fight with Marciano, I was over the hill and didn't know it. Only when I was hit in that first — and last — round could I tell that something was wrong. I had been hit with harder punches, but this one made me lose consciousness from the referee's count of "three" to "seven." And when I wanted to get up at seven, I couldn't and was counted out.

If this unsuspected weakness hasn't crept up on Moore, if his body is ready to do everything he demands of it Tuesday night, then the rest of Archie's problems are minor by comparison. But they're important, and if I were Archie, here's how I would handle them.

First, in fighting close to Marciano you've got to keep from being butted. I don't mean that Rocky is an intentionally dirty fighter, because he isn't. I've gotten to know the Rock very well outside the ring and he's one of the finest gentlemen I've ever had the good fortune to meet.

But inside the ring, look out. Rocky is a wild fury, with no control over his elbows or head. And if he should accidentally butt Moore, it can set Archie up for a knockout.

That's what happened to me in my first battle with Rocky. In the 12th round of a fight in which Rocky had never been able to catch up with me, a butt cut me above my left eye. The blood trickled down, obscuring my vision. Early in the next round he fired a right — a punch I'd been dodging easily. But this time I couldn't see it coming and the fight was over.

Moore's fight will be over too if he moves from side to side while boring in on Rocky. If you're watching the fight on TV, keep your eyes peeled for this, for a Marciano roundhouse will almost certainly clip him. To keep from being hit, Moore must stay glued to the center of Rocky's body.

On the offense Moore has a huge advantage, despite the fact that Rocky can put out the lights with one punch. For as long as Archie's in-fighting defense keeps him protected from that dynamite Rocky throws, Moore has everything in his favor. Here's why:

Marciano's wickedest punches come at you from above. Moore, however, has an odd style — he fights low to the ground. (I'm demonstrating this in the picture at right.) Marciano's overhand punches, therefore, will be landing without damage on Archie's back. And Archie, by sticking close, can prevent Rocky from sliding under him for uppercuts.

Moore, in the meantime, will be making good use of his long arms and tremendous punching power. I expect to see a fight in which Moore will belt Rocky almost at will, for Marciano is a sucker for almost every kind of punch there is.

Now Rocky, of course, can take it. In my 23 years of fighting I've never landed a harder punch than the left hook that dropped him in the first round of our first fight in Philadelphia (unless it was the blow that knocked out Ezzard Charles for the title). That left landed high on Rocky's face and sent him sprawling. Yet he got right back up. Again in the 11th I jackknifed him with a left to the stomach. I still don't know how he stood up to it. He's a wonder in taking punishment.

The Shell Game

But that was three years ago. I doubt whether Rocky can take those punches today, for his face now cuts very easily, especially around the nose. And though heavyweight championship fights rarely end in TKOs, this one might. But even if the fight isn't stopped, a bleeding face is a heavy millstone for any fighter to carry, since it forces him into a shell to prevent any more damage. And Marciano is licked any time he has to fight a defensive battle; his only weapon is his slugging ability.

If I were Archie, there's one other trick that I would use against Rocky — a trick that wasn't so easy for me since I was a stand-up fighter but a natural for low-to-the-ground Archie. It's this:

When Marciano starts firing a barrage of punches, there's only one way to box him and that's by covering up, since he can't punch with enough accuracy to nail a jaw that's reasonably well protected. That's the trick: cover up.

If Moore doesn't protect himself properly against those flurries — or if he makes any one of a half-dozen other mistakes — then I must admit that Marciano will win. But I don't think Moore will make those mistakes, for he's a hungry fighter who's waited a long time for this chance. It won't come his way again and he knows it.

I believe he'll be the winner if he's still on his feet at the end of the 15th round, for he'll have chopped Rocky to ribbons along the way. In other words, the only way that Rocky can win this fight is by a knockout.

He won't score that KO in my opinion, for Archie will be smart enough to keep inside, where Rocky can't blitz him. If his body holds up to the ordeal of boring-in, you'll be reading about a new heavyweight champion on Wednesday morning — Archie Moore. ■

EX-CHAMPION WALCOTT imitates Moore's style: "Rocky's overhand blows will land on Archie's back."

For almost a lifetime, the woman had stood on the threshold of the Catholic Church — uncertain whether to come in or stay out.

"Seemingly," she says, "I was born loving the Catholic Church." This she attributes to a "small miracle," inasmuch as her parents were not Catholic, or even religious; and "our relatives and friends were none of them Catholics."

As a child, she loved to visit Catholic churches, to light candles and pray the rosary. But as she grew older... and tried to evaluate Catholic beliefs on her own limited knowledge, or upon the mistaken opinions of others... a "wall of obstacles" kept getting in the way.

In the midst of her confusion and uncertainty, she enrolled for the Knights of Columbus course of Catholic instruction which is given free by mail. And now a Catholic, she says: "I am filled with wonder and gratitude that God's long arm reached down to lift me up so tenderly."

It is unfortunate, but true, that people seeking knowledge of the Catholic Church encounter a "wall of obstacles" as this woman did. The reason is, usually, that so many of the "facts" they hear about the Catholic Church are not facts at all, but misrepresentations or the fruits of misunderstanding. Even those who admire and respect the Church... and who wish to hold for it only sentiments of tolerance and good-will... are often confused and deceived.

There is, of course, only one fair and proper way to understand and evaluate Catholic teachings and worship. That is by getting the facts about them from an authentic Catholic source. And that is why the Catholic Church says again and again... "INVESTIGATE!"

Maybe, after investigating, you still won't want to share the Catholic reverence for Mary. But you WILL understand it. You will know why and how Catholics obey the Pope. You will understand the Catholic attitude on salvation outside the Church... why Catholics use statues and holy water.... why Catholics say the Mass is truly a Holy Sacrifice.

And now it is so easy to investigate... so easy to get the facts ... without cost, trouble or embarrassment. Just fill out the coupon below and MAIL IT today, and a highly interesting pamphlet will come to you by mail... under plain cover—and nobody will call on you. AMY HILAND TO TRY AGAIN

'This Time I'll Swim the Catalina Channel'

By Amy Hiland

As told to Dorothy Allison

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Amy Hiland, 34-year-old housewife of 129 Claremont Ave., next Saturday will try for the second time to swim the Catalina Channel. Here, in an interview with Dorothy Allison, she tells how she expects to accomplish the feat in record time. Her first attempt was made last June, when she was taken from the water after 19 hours. Previously, she set the record for the Salton Sea swim. She learned to swim only four years ago to discover she is a natural distance swimmer.)

ONE NIGHT THIS WEEK I will stand at the water's edge on Catalina, waiting for the starter's gun to begin my swim across the channel. My June swim taught me the answer to several of the ocean's secret weapons. This time, I feel confident, I'll make it and break the record of 13 hours, 25 minutes.

The Channel itself is a tremendous challenge. But the real goal, the one that gives a competitive swimmer deep personal satisfaction, is to better the time that is officially recorded for the event.

My hope is to break the professional mark and set an amateur time that will stand.

The most important thing we learned about the ocean in my June swim is the treacherous strength of the north-south current which sweeps, at times, down along the mainland. This current is unpredictable in time and in its course, but we know now that we can find out by radio when I am three-fourth of the way across the channel whether it is running and what its course is. Then my pilot boat can guide me so that the current will help instead of hinder me.

THE CURRENT came between me and the shore when I was just two and a half miles from the mainland on my June swim. I had been swimming for 12 hours and was ahead of the record. I tried swimming against the current, and in seven and a half hours lost a mile and a half. That was when my husband, Pete, insisted that 19½ hours of swimming was enough. He had me pulled from the water and promised me I could try the swim again.

We learned that I must take seasick pills to help reduce nausea caused by swells and by my watching the light on the pilot boat as it lurched up and down all night.

My intense nausea kept me from taking nourishment, and it is amazing what a return of strength and drive comes to a swimmer after drinking a bit of broth.

Plucky Amy Hiland, Long Beach housewife, plans her second assault on the Catalina Channel in a few days. This time she is set on a record crossing.

The channel bested Mrs. Hiland on her first swim and she was pulled from the water after near victory. She'll benefit this time from her last effort.

PEOPLE HAVE ASKED me about the dangers of making a channel swim. There are several. Four times during the night I saw sharks swim near me, and fourteen times I heard rifle shots from the boats as the men shot other sharks.

The men operating the searchlight that was to keep my white swimming cap in its beam often couldn't find me in the huge, foamy swells. If I had run into trouble, they might not have known where I was in the black immensity of the ocean.

Porpoises are a menace. A school of these could create havoc with the small boats that were protecting me—and with me.

Fear is strange. I am frightened to death of a spider, but was not afraid that night. Maybe I was just too nauseated to care.

The five-hour wait before I could start my swim was more difficult for me than any possible dangers. My swim was to start at 8 p.m. June 12. Everything and everyone was ready except the weather. A strong cold wind had come up, and the sea was rough and choppy.

FOR THOSE FIVE tense hours, I was alone in a cabin near the water and was supposed to be resting. I listened to the men outside calling to boatmen about conditions in the channel. Someone would call out, "Latest report sounds good. Better get Amy greased up." My heart would start hammering with excitement, but before anyone got to my door, the voice would call out, "Hold it."

By the time we finally got the go ahead signal, I was trembling from the hours of tension. But when I heard the A.A.U starter's gun, exhilaration filled me. I was on my own and on my way.

Kelp is one thing I will never get used to. As you swim along, the slimy, slithering fronds suddenly wrap themselves around you like the tentacles of an octopus. You shudder with revulsion and want to leap from the water.

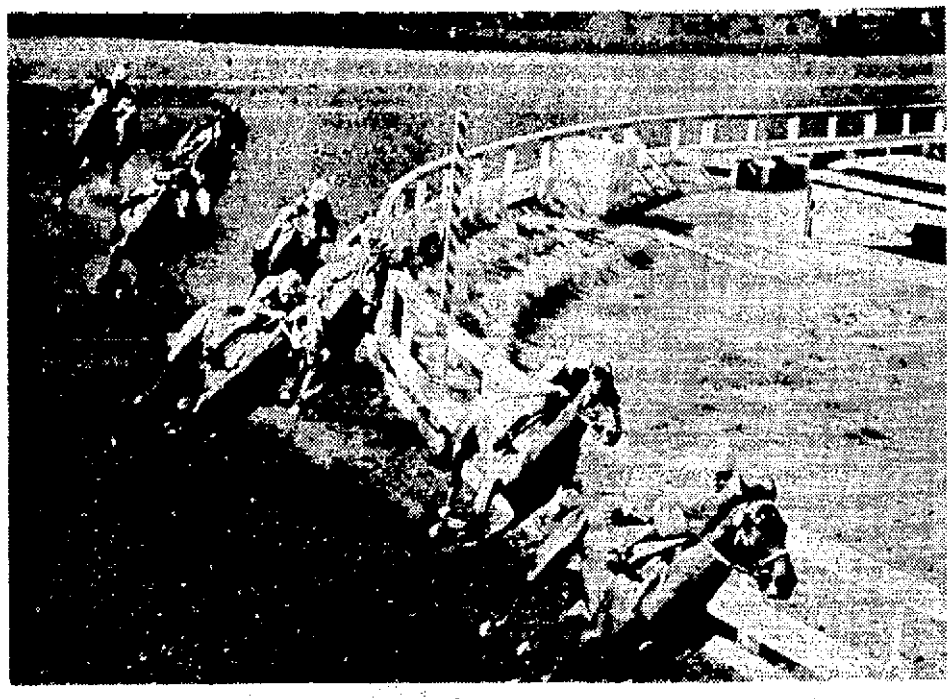

ON A DISTANCE SWIM, I use the crawl—a left and right arm stroke to six leg kicks. This stroke gives a lot of glide through the water. I try to keep a steady 58 stroke a minute. The swimmers who get into the water with me are so much help in getting me back on my pace if it becomes too fast or too slow.

You have to keep moving all the time because only the warmth of your own blood coursing through your body makes the cold water endurable. You know before you make the swim you'll be colder than you've ever been before—and you are.

Since my June swim, I have kept a rigorous routine of swimming at least 2½ hours a day in the bay or ocean to condition myself for the ordeal, with carefully watched diet and plenty of rest.

This week when I stand at the water's edge and look across the channel to the lights on the mainland, I will have experience on my side. I will keep just one thought, "Sometime tomorrow, I will walk out on the sand of the mainland." And, God willing, I will set a record for the Catalina Channel swim.

Round the first turn . . .! Thoroughbred racing is part of the big show at Los Angeles County Fair. Harness races, quarter horses are also billed.

Sally-Ann Scherfe, pretty college coed, has a prize lamb groomed for the big County Fair stock display.

New suburban homes inspire theme, "Country Life," for the dazzling flower show in floral building.

"Hurry! Hurry! Hurry!" Half-million-dollar Fair owned and operated Midway resounds to familiar barker's cry.

By Roy Driscoll

AGAINST A BACKGROUND of color, music and pageantry, the 28th annual Los Angeles County Fair—the biggest county fair in the world—is packing them in at Pomona. It has everything that a fair can offer: Livestock, poultry, farm machinery, citrus crops, garden and field products, new cars and accessories, modern homes and accessories, household arts and crafts, horse racing, horse shows, a musical extravaganza and a midway.

One million persons are slated to see the fair before it closes Oct. 2. And nobody knows how much pop and popcorn, how many peanuts and hot dogs they'll consume as they gaze at the fat pigs, fine horses, grandma's conserves and country ham.

With its landscaped 450-acre exposition park, 200 buildings and 40,000-car parking area it is a county fair in name only. In all else it is an exposition of such size and scope as to command national and international attention.

GROUNDS and improvements are valued at $20,000,000. Some 40,000 individual exhibits are entered this year. They are distributed into 20 major divisions, each a comprehensive show in itself under this year's intriguing banner, "The Abundant Life."

Education, relaxation and recreation go hand in hand. For the regulars it is a new fair with innovations, additions, appeals. For newcomers it is a succession of revelations and surprises.

The huge Palace of Agriculture displays prize products of orchard, field and garden, from all parts of California. Here also are the California wine show, dairy products, apiary show, forestry, lumbering, minerals and natural resources.

THE FINE ARTS BUILDING presents "The Arts in Western Living." Architects, artists and artist-craftsmen combined their talents in an exposition of gracious western living with 22 rooms and areas overflowing with information and suggestions. It is a worthy successor to "Arts in Daily Living," which won national acclaim last year.

Three large exhibit buildings are devoted to one of the most comprehensive home shows in America.

The Home Builders New Products Show, with its $100,000 pavilion crammed with structural materials, features a novel expandable model home embodying new ideas in home building.

Complementing the building show is the ever popular Domestic Arts Bldg. With a record of 1703 opportunities for women to enter their handiwork, the spacious building contains a great assembly of needlework, arts and crafts, antiques and culinary entries.

NEW SUBURBAN HOMES are the inspiration for the theme, "Country Life," selected for the flower show in the floral building. A dazzling array of blooms and plants represents the best the Southland produces in this line. The outdoor living room and its patios, swimming pools and barbecues stresses country life in smart styling.

Lovers of sports and the wide open spaces revel in the invigorating sports plaza with its trailer show, sporting goods display, competitions and demonstrations. Golfers compete in the annual putting contest. The 175-foot pool has its casting tournaments. Smart new cars and smart new accessories are entered in the automobile show.

The best of the flocks and herds of the country vie for coveted blue ribbons in the livestock show. Poultry fanciers of the nation gather for the annual meeting and show of the American Bantam Assn. held in conjunction with the poultry show. The west's largest rabbit show offers new mutations.

THE JUNIOR FAIR includes thousands of entries by 4-H and Future Farmer members, Boy and Girl Scouts, Woodcraft Rangers, Campfire Girls and other youth organizations.

The first public schools in the country were opened 100 years ago. Commemorating the important date, the public schools exhibit serves as a centennial celebration.

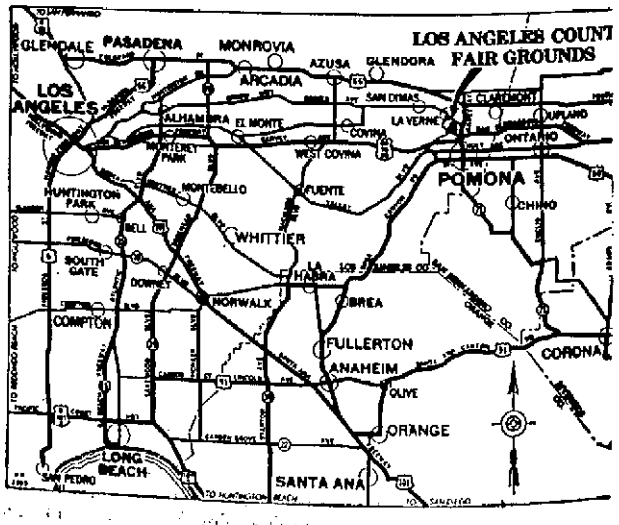

The military might of the nation is shown in armed forces exhibits.

For pure recreation and entertainment, the fair has its most ambitious program. Every afternoon there is an exciting combination of harness, running and quarter horse racing punctuated with the first $20,000 stakes ever offered on a half-mile track. This is the third largest race meet in the state. There will be five different horse shows.

The World's Fair Midway offers a half-million dollars worth of thrills, chills and skills.

On the glamorous grand stage the first nine nights are the glamorous "Aqua Thrills Revue," followed the last eight nights by the musical extravaganza, "Fair Follies of '55."

Many roads point to the County Fair. Long Beach patrons may choose their route by consulting map below.

True, full-blooded Hawaiians are in the small minority in Hawaii—and you never know who'll be doing the hula.

IN HAWAII—

You Never Know Who's Doing the Hula

By Mary Neiswender

THEY CALL them Hawaiian Islands.

And when Captain Cook arrived they were—but today there are only a handful of Hawaiians in the islands which bear their name.

The melting pot of the Pacific is cooking up more Japanese dishes by far than any others.

However, the Hawiians and the part-Hawaiians are doing their best to keep the national dress a grass skirt instead of a kimono.

True Hawaiians are rare indeed, according to population figures compiled by the Territorial Government. Of a total population for the Islands of 473,214 only a mere 12,433 or 2.7 per cent are natives. Even lumping together the part-Hawaiians, the total does not touch the Japanese population figure.

A whopping 40.4 per cent of the inhabitants, 189,219 persons, are of Japanese ancestry.

In fact, there are more Filipinos (62,936), Caucasions (69,461) and Chinese (32,139).

Passivly combatting this is the birth rate for the Hawaiians and part-Hawaiians which almost equals that of the Japanese. There were only 800 more Japanese babies born last year.

The immense migration of the Japanese to Hawaii took place in the early part of this century. Yankee businessmen, whose reputation is for making a hard dollar, moved in on the Islands after annexation by the United States in 1898. The fun-loving Hawaiians didn't take to the Yankee drive for the dollar and worked only until they had enough money for a jug of bootlegged okolehao. And until the jug was empty, no work was done.

Nothing stops the Yankee businessman when there's money to be made, even if it means transporting a good chunk of the population of Japan 6,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean. For six years the industrious Japanese were imported as laborers.

But soon the Japanese got the right idea. The warm sun and trade winds took the industry out of the newcomers so the sugar planters brought in Filipino laborers. Again the balmy isles took their toll. Now there are just as many Japanese and Filipinos swaying in grass skirts as there are Hawaiians.

But no one seems to care who's what race. Samoans, Hindus, Negroes, Chinese, Koreans, Japanese and Hawaiians live, work and play side by side in the lazy informality of island living.

Will "sayonara" ever replace "aloha?" Don't bet on it.

But no matter what the ancestry of the dancer, the hula continues to be the islands' popular dance. This girl performs on the sands of an island beach.

Filipinos inhabit islands in 5-1 ratio to natives.

This blond beauty is part Hawaiian, Scandinavian.

Young generation Japanese dons island coconut hat.

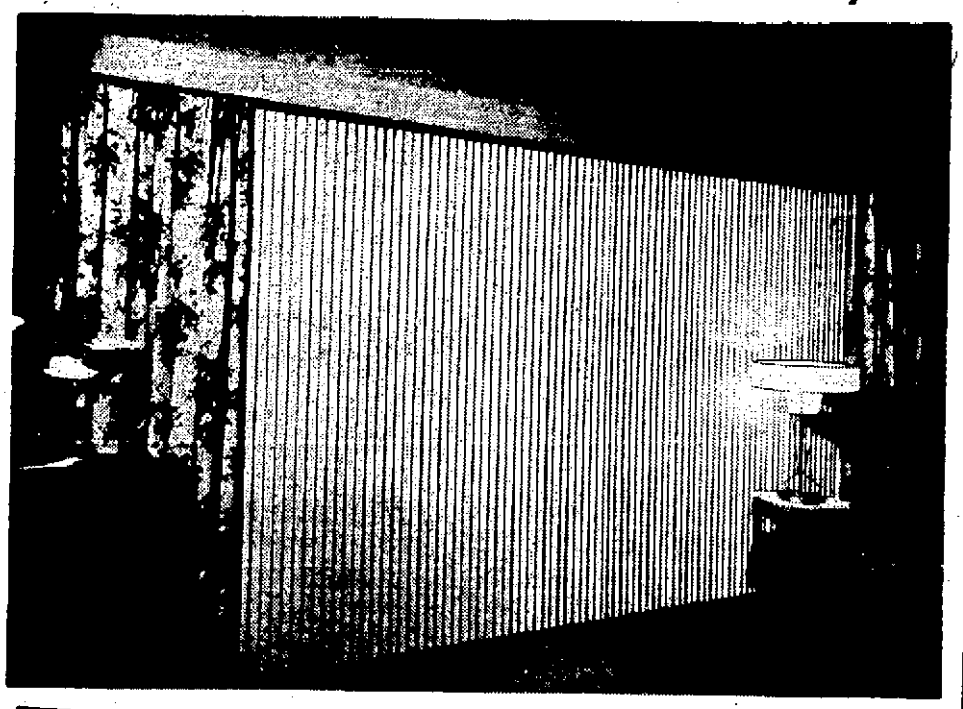

A mixture of races—Japanese, Chinese, Korean and Hawaiian—pose on a bench beside Waikiki Beach, a pretty picture for any strand.

No discrimination exists between the races. Islands' Japanese, Hawaiian, part-Hawaiian and Portuguese share life, work and play.

Gag Man With Epaulets

"WE HELD HIM DOWN with our nose which we had inserted between his teeth for that purpose," wrote George Derby telling of a misunderstanding with an editor.

Derby was a lieutenant in the United States Army and stationed in San Diego at the time. His life had been eventful and included a full share of fighting. In the Mexican War he was aide-de-camp to Gen. "Fuss and Feathers" Scott. There is a story of Scott finding Derby lying wounded on the battlefield.

"My God, Darby! You're wounded!"

"Yes, Gen. Scatt!"

"My name is Scott, not Scatt," said the general.

"My name is Derby, not Darby," replied the lieutenant.

Lt. George Derby—Army frontiers knew his wit. Photo taken about 1846.

THIS STORY is unlikely for Derby liked his Army life and was careful to see that his humor didn't interfere with it. He was born in Massachusetts in 1823 and after graduating from West Point he saw a wide variety of service. He did not come into his own, though, until he was stationed in California.

One of his jobs was to find if the Colorado was navigable to Fort Yuma. He did not reach the post but he originated a joke that is still standard: "A very wicked soldier died there once, and, of course, went straight to the hottest corner of perdition—and the next day wired back for his blankets."

He was stationed in San Diego but he went to San Francisco whenever he could for there he could find full scope for his wit. He contributed to various journals under the name of John Phoenix.

HIS HUMOR was flowing and natural. He went into the Eagle Bakery and blandly asked for a baked eagle.

He insisted on tagging along with the wife of his best friend and ended up at the founding but he went to San Francisco Ladis' Relief Society. Ladies were decorous in those days and when they asked him to leave he did so. The next day an account of the meeting appeared in the Alta Californian. It told of the ladies drinking brandy smashes and booting reporters into the street. The ladies were annoyed but San Francisco was amused for it recognized the article as good comedy. Incidentally, the society still exists.

Before introducing two friends Derby once told each, in private of course, that the other was deaf and very sensitive about it. The two men spent an hour or

Machine Bares Brain's Secrets

By Vera Williams

IT'S A COMPLICATED looking machine called an electroencephalograph.

It's commonly called a "brain wave" machine, and it is helpful in the diagnosis of brain injuries, brain tumors, meningitis, encephalitis and epilepsy.

There are six in Long Beach hospitals — one in St. Mary's and five in the Veterans Administration Hospital.

The one in St. Mary's Hospital, located in the out patient department, was given the hospital a year ago by a Long Beach doctor for community service. It is operated by Mrs. Hazel Jahnke, technician trained in the Los Angeles County General Hospital.

A NUMBER of tests are made daily, by appointment. Patients come from not only Long Beach but a number of near-by towns, referred by their physicians.

The patient lies, relaxed, on a bed and electrodes are applied to his scalp, covering the brain area. The patient experiences little or no discomfort during the recording.

The electrodes lead to a jack box connected to the machine, where eight pens simultaneously record in graph form. electrical activity of various parts of the brain.

The graph looks something like a cardiograph, which records heart action.

Each test takes about 30 minutes. Each sheet of paper of the graph records 30 seconds.

YOUNGEST CHILD ever given a brain wave test at St.

This Cult Puts the Sea on Canvas

By Harry R. Peterson

Pete Fulmer Photos

Title of this seascape is "Rocks at Sunset." It was painted by Southland artist Henry Vander Velde.

IF YOU had been on Highway 101, near Arch Beach south of Laguna Beach in the early 1940s you might have seen an unusual figure coming up the road in the direction of the Arch Beach Market—an elderly man with a patriarchal white beard, dressed in a white suit, high Russian boots and beret, and hauling a small cart in which there was a kerosene can.

This was not one of the local eccentrics. It was Frank W. Cuprien, dean of a cult of painters in Laguna who do not sit by their cars by the roadside and paint landscape, mountains or desert. They are interested in the eternal conflict of sea and shore. The majesty of the storm; the mystery of moonlit water, the unforgettable beauty of the reflected sunset on the water, are the subjects that they reproduce on canvas. They paint the sea.

Most of them are storm painters. The master of marine art is not often the artist of smooth summer seas and quiet coves. To climb and sketch from dangerous rocks close to massive surf, or depict the hurrying scuds and yellow sky from the deck of a heaving ship, takes more than a sense of color, composition and design, though he must have these also. He must love the sea.

CUPRIEN LIVED alone in an ocean front house. Electricity perhaps interfered with his acute perception of light; he used only lamps.

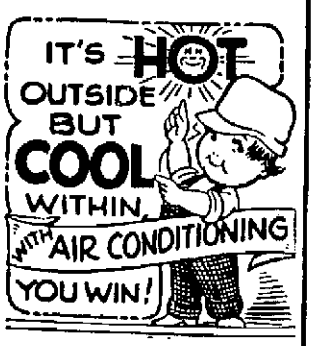

Other famous marine painters separated themselves from family and friends to catch the mystery of the ocean. They painted from locations dangerous, to say the least. Winslow Homer settled in a small Northumberland village to paint the great grey seas off the English coast. In Maine he lived miles from the nearest neighbor and worked in a movable canvas room trundled as close to the surf as he could get.

Charles H. Woodbury got himself lashed to the side of a West Indian steamer carcening in a hurricane to get a sketch of the bow as it rose to meet the mountainous waves.

OCEAN PAINTING is different from other kind because the sea must be painted partially from memory. It is never still. Only a few seconds elapse between the breaking of a wave that is the dominating feature of a picture and a flat mass of foam.

The artist has to memorize it —as well as a hundred moods of the water for future use—the whitecaps of a two-reef breeze, the great ground swell that slaps and thunders against the beach at night, the zigzag darting blues of a squall and the pearly tints of a dead calm. Often only sketches are completed at the location. The finished painting is done in the studio, creatively.

A memorial room, dedicated to the genial, kindly Cuprien is part of the exhibit in the Laguna Beach Art Gallery, next to the Victor Hugo cafe.

CUPRIEN, who painted his last picture in 1948, has been replaced by a new cult of marine painters, who have captured the unique and picturesque South Coast shoreline with fidelity and feeling. Each has a distinctive style of his own. Each either lives on the ocean or has had wide experience at sea. Alfred Dupont and Robert Wood of Laguna, Henry Vander Velde of Salt Creek and Bennet Bradbury of Capistrano Beach are now the principal marine painters of the artist town and its vicinity.

Here is the way you do it, according to Mr. Dupont:

"Rough in the main masses of your composition with pigment, leaving the foam blank if the subject has spume or rearing creases. Marines are symphonies in blue, and since all the color you see is a reflection of the sky, you paint this first—the whole tone of your painting depends upon it. Get in the orange, yellow and rose tints of the horizon. Use ultramarine, cobalt and cerulean blue for the ocean, if it is clear. Finish it at home, if necessary.

"Twenty-five sketches will be flat. And then, suddenly, one springs to life. You have caught the spray from that blow-hole, spray that hovered only a few seconds before it dropped; the incredible blue of the Southern California ocean, the wheeling gull, the green in the breaking wave. You have painted the sea."

As Emerson said: "Behold the sea, the opaline, the plentiful, the strong."

The Maddest Bass I Ever Saw

By Donnell Culpepper

Shasta Lake bass never know when to quit. This one is trying desparately to spit out the line.

GIVE A MAN a rod and reel and send him forth a-fishin' and he never knows when to quit. Any angler's wife will tell you that.

But how about the fish? Some fish tire easily, float belly-up to a net and just fade away. Others don't; they'll fight all the way to the landing, and even flop a few times when a fisherman starts to clean them for dinner.

It was my pleasure to meet, hook and finally catch just such a fish in Shasta Lake. I've caught bigger bass and smaller bass, but this veteran largemouth thought he knew all the tricks that even older and larger bass had forgotten.

Johnny Alford, who owns and operates Bridge Bay Resort on Shasta, and I had gone far up the McCloud River arms of the lake and had reached a quiet cove, sheltered from the wind. It was the most beautiful bass-fishing spot I've ever seen. We cut the motor outside the cove and had paddled into smooth water from which rose old tree stumps and roots.

I was fishing with an extremely light outfit—two-ounce rod, tiny spinning reel and three-pound-test monofilament. Johnny had told me: "You're crazy for trying to catch big bass with that light outfit," but I persisted. I put on a small deep-running plug and laid a cast right beside a moss-covered log in the deep shade. As it hit there was an explosion of fury from underneath and a big bass went three feet into the air with my plug before I'd even had a chance to start a retrieve.

HE LEAPED again and that time went over the log, shook his head and the plug fell out of his mouth. Johnny just grinned and remarked: "That outfit's too light." We paddled about the big cove for an hour, catching one- and two-pounders after we both changed to surface poppers. Some we kept; others we released.

Finally we made a full circuit of the cove and came back where we started. I told Johnny: "Just paddle over to that log again. I'm going to try for grandpa." I had switched to a large-sized Hula Popper, a floating surface lure that made a popping sound at each twitch of the rod. I laid a cast at exactly the same spot as I had an hour before.

Sure enough, there was another explosion just after the plug touched the surface and out came Mr. Bass, throwing his head from side to side. He leaped twice, then went over that same log again and the monofilament snapped. Johnny didn't grin; he laughed loudly and yelled: "That's twice you have lost that bass." I was flabbergasted and that's putting it midly.

Then, just as I retrieved the remainder of the line and started putting on another lure, there was another disturbance off the bow and out came a bass, leaping and throwing his head. Moments later the same thing occurred off the stern. Then it dawned on me what had happened and I screamed to Johnny: "That fool bass has got that Hula Popper down his throat and is trying to get it out."

JOHNNY TURNED serious and started paddling toward each successive jump. That bass covered an area of at least 50 square feet in the next three or four minutes, leaping and jumping wildly. The jumps became fewer and shorter. Finally he tried just one more almost beside the boat and Johnny slipped the net under him.

When we got the fish into the boat, there was the Hula Popper down his throat. That hungry bass had hit so hard that he had swallowed the entire lure. It took a bit of maneuvering to get those hooks out of throat, mouth and gills, but I did. Even then, that angry bass almost flipped out of the boat when the lure was extracted. I grabbed him and finally got him on the stringer.

Two hours later when we reached the Bridge Bay boat landing and started to clean our fish, Gramps was still in a fighting mood. Except for the fact that he weighed just over three pounds and had been injured, I would have eased him back into the lake to fight another day.

LAKE SHASTA'S bass, largemouths and smallmouths are notorious fighters. Perhaps it is the fact that three large rivers, the Sacramento, McCloud and Pit, empty extremely cold water into it the year around. Even a small eight-inch bass will bounce in and out of the water like a steelhead.

Claude Kreider, former Long Beach assistant fire chief and now president of the western division, Outdoor Writers Association of America, and Don Waggoner, also of Long Beach, explored the various arms of Shasta three weeks later and found the same fighting fish. They caught more fish than they could use. Claude admitted that he hadn't seen bass anywhere to equal the savagery of those in Shasta. His largest was a four-pounder.

Claude M. Kreider of Long Beach takes lure from bass.

Even the bluegills—and there are thousands of them—fight like little demons when taken on any kind of lure.

Machine Bares Brain's Secrets

Mary's was two months. The oldest patient was 78 years.

In 1874 an Englishman, Caton, observed electrical activity in the brain of living animals, and he became convinced that these fluctuations were related to the functional activity of the brains.

Hans Berger of Jena, Germany, considered the father of electroencephalography, began his work in 1902 and finally, in 1924, was successful in recording electrical activity of the human brain.

By 1934 he had demonstrated (1) that the brain of man has an electrical beat, (2) this beat comes from the neurons and not from the blood vessels, (3) this electrical beat changes with age, sensory stimulation and with various changes in the physical and chemical state of the body.

LATER DOCTORS did monumental work in epilepsy and cerebral locations and demonstrated that brain tumors near the skull may be localized by the electroencephalogram through the unopened skull.

The same as other techniques, the EEG has its limitations. It is of little or no value in a diagnosis of schizophrenia, manic depressive psychosis or feeblemindedness. It cannot localize deep cerebral, cerebellar or deep brain lesions, and it does not distinguish between different types of pathological processes. The EEG is not a record of all brain activity, but the record of certain type of activity from special brain area, the cerebral cortex.

It is most helpful, say doctors, in detecting epilepsy, cerebral tumors, subdural hematoma, cerebral hemorrhage, cerebral thrombosis, cerebral trauma, cerebral abcess, meningitis, encephalitis and behavior disorders of an epileptic or postencephalitic type.

L. A.-London Flight

Trans World Airlines will inaugurate the first and fastest one-plane intercontinental air service from California through to London and Frankfurt with a fleet of long-range Super-G Constellations beginning Nov. 1, E. O. Cocke, TWA vice president-sales, announces.

Super-G Constellations flying nonstop from Los Angeles to New York and thence nonstop to London will make this one-plane, one-stop, overnight service more than seven hours faster than existing "polar route" schedules. The flight will continue to Frankfurt, resulting in a time saving of four hours from California to that city.

Total elapsed time for the 6,000-mile flight from Los Angeles to London will be 21 hours and five minutes. The intercontinental flights will leave Los Angeles every Sunday, for London and Frankfurt, where the return westbound service will originate on Wednesdays and Fridays.

"Anything doing in Zurich? I've about decided to go to school there but don't want a dull-as-dishwater life."

This is quite a lively town — up to midnight. Those medieval cobbled back streets are full of Swiss yodeling in and out of bars. The accordions play and there is a good deal of singing and I have never run into what you would call a rough spot.

The lonesome ladies of the town go to sort of tea houses where they serve chocolate. You spot them on the street because they nearly all have a toy poodle on a leash. The idea is that gentlemen thus get an opening for conversation by patting the poodle.

While the ladies dip the chocolate, they park the poodle in the checkroom. And it is quite a sight to see these ruffled shills, sitting side by side in the racks.

Probably the greatest hotel in the world is the Baur-au-lac. You can have wonderful dinners beside the lake. The place is full of the worst kind of rich people: All the sharp money boys who finance hot oil, gun running and the pushing of material behind the Iron Curtain make their deals over the tables at the Baur-au-lac. A really gaudy operation.

"... and I never found a good martini in Paris. So where do you go?"

You go to the Ritz or the Plaza Athenee — the bar called the Relais Plaza. The Ritz is followed by an international set who follow the rules laid down by Ernest Hemingway.

The Relais Plaza belongs to another club who are following I don't know what.

There are definite rules to the game. You must ask for the head bartender at the Ritz (whose name I forget). At the Plaza Athenee, you wave off all the minor help and insist the martini be made by Jacques Hebrard.

Each side must insist that his boy makes the driest martini in the world.

If you must have a martini in France, though, ask for "un dry." Ask for martini and you get a warm glass of Martini vermouth. Did you try that brandy and water deal they call fine a l'eau? Better. And cheaper.

Your mailed questions will be answered (no phone calls). Send stamped and addressed envelope to: Stan Delaplane, Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, Sixth and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif.

Listerine Antiseptic Stops Bad Breath 4 Times Better Than Tooth Paste!

Germs—The Major Cause of Mouth Odor

Far and away the most common cause of bad breath is fermentation of proteins which are always present in the mouth. This fermentation is caused by germs and research shows that your breath stays sweeter longer, the more you reduce germs in the mouth.

Listerine Antiseptic Kills Germs by Millions

Listerine Antiseptic kills germs by millions on contact. Test after test has shown that even fifteen minutes after gargling with Listerine Antiseptic, germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces were reduced up to 96.7%; one hour afterward, as much as 80%.

No Tooth Paste Kills Germs Like This . . . Instantly

Tooth paste with the aid of a tooth brush is an effective method of oral hygiene. It depends largely on the mechanical and masking methods of removing unpleasant mouth odors. But no tooth paste gives you the proven Listerine Antiseptic method —banishing bad breath with instant super-efficient germ-killing action.

Listerine Antiseptic Acts on Many Surfaces

Listerine Antiseptic kills millions of germs on tooth, mouth, and throat surfaces. It kills disease-producing germs as well as many types of odor-producing germs. No tooth paste offers proof like this of killing germs that cause bad breath.

THE MOST WIDELY USED ANTISEPTIC IN THE WORLD

Called Blackie, talking crow in Mrs. Charles Moore's small home zoo, keeps insisting that "My name's Sam!"

Sam's the Name

By Juanita B. Worsham

MOST PEOPLE have pets. Mrs. Charles Moore, 2764 Webster Ave., has a menagerie.

It began with Sato, a year-old, white-faced Capuchin monkey. He became a member of the family, and was given the guest room with a little bed, mattress, pillow and cover.

As months passed, Mrs. Moore learned one monkey was not much trouble, so she bought another, Choo-San, 3½ months old.

Sato became fond of Choo-San and taught him to lasso with his tail. Sato fed Choo-San by hand and brushed his hair.

Moore built a cage, 8 by 10 feet, in the backyard. There the monkeys remain during the day, swinging and acting like clowns. They deftly remove bobby pins, earrings, pins and the like from persons approaching their cage. If they can't reach with their hands, they lasso with their tails. When visitors leave, they cry.

LINATONE is added to milk to give the monkeys a good coat of hair. Monkeys are big eaters and consume an avocado, drink a quart of milk a day, and prefer frozen vegetables. Ham, bacon and Jello are relished. A candy sucker lasts all day. When they see cake, they hold out their arms and beg. Sato and Choo-San won't eat peanuts or bananas. The Moores frequently take the monkeys riding in the evening.

By 8 p.m. in summer and 6:30 p.m. in winter, Sato and Choo-San retire, but first they eat bread and warm milk and sit in front of TV. They don't like animals, especially dogs, on the screen. When they do not like a picture, they jump up, change the dial or turn it off. They sleep in the same bed, with Choo-San's arms wrapped tightly around Sato.

A FRIEND gave Mrs. Moore a pet rat. She named him Patches, because of the brown markings on his white background and a black eye. He crawls up on her shoulder and kisses her if he wants to be fed.

Then a relative brought Mrs. Moore a crow. She named him Blackie but he goes about saying "My name is Sam." He eats corn and dog food. If he is given food he does not like, he kicks it out the door. He picks flowers and brings them in the house. He frequently calls on the neighbors.

The crow's main fault is that he flies to the roof, rips off shingles and sends them sailing through the air.

THE LAST PET accepted was a skunk. He has been deodorized but just the same his name is Stinky. He takes a daily bath, never has fleas or lice. He stands on his hind feet like a dog and begs for food. He loves flowers and perfumes and goes about sniffing them.

Mrs. Moore remembers the wolf her son had as a pet for three years. At various times the family has had pet snakes.

She says her time now is well occupied, no more pets. No, wait a minute. She might consider an ocelot.

Get a Lift With Ice Cream

By Mildred K. Flanary
Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

ICE CREAM — piled sky high, embellished with fixings from syrup to whipped cream to a cherry on top — that's the dream of all teen-agers. It's a dream come true with adults, too.

Youngsters never get enough ice cream. This dessert stirs memories of birthday parties, rewards for good behavior, celebrations of special significance. Ice cream then meant a special trip to the store when company arrived, a stop on the way from the beach on sultry summer days or turning the freezer on Sunday afternoon. While the forms of ice cream may have changed, the pleasure it gives is always the same.

Super-duper sundaes are a gracious way of serving ice cream, allowing each guest to concoct his own. Fill small serving dishes, or Lazy Susan tray compartments, with the following foods to spoon over ice cream; coconut, fruit cocktail, apricot halves, crushed pineapple and nuts (pecans, walnuts or peanuts). If the occasion is a get-together of today's juvenile sophisticates, let them whip up their own concoctions and provide their own rare appellations.

For a topping that's different and liked by all, we suggest a coffee-walnut sauce, the featured recipe today. There are many other complementary toppings and associates for this popular food.

Miscellaneous Sundae Toppings and Tricks

Spoon canned applesauce over a slice of chocolate or vanilla ice cream and add a dash of nutmeg.

Pour warmed maple syrup over vanilla ice cream and sprinkle salted almonds on top.

Crumble chocolate covered mints over vanilla or chocolate ice cream.

Make tart shells from packaged pastry mix; fill with vanilla ice cream and top with fresh, frozen or canned fruit.

Cut a cone-shaped piece from a bakery cup cake; fill with ice cream and drizzle with canned chocolate syrup.

Put a slice of ice cream atop a slice of packaged pound cake. Ribbon with butterscotch or fruit sauce.

Serve iced coffee with a spoonful of ice cream for coffee with a punch.

For mincemeat in summer dress, serve it warm over a slice of prepackaged vanilla ice cream.

Frozen fruit juice concentrates (orange, tangerine, pineapple, grape or cranberry) with a spoonful of ice cream and a fizz of soda make a "pigtail set" delight.

Sprinkle toasted coconut over vanilla or chocolate ice cream and top it with chocolate or butterscotch sauce.

For cantaloupe ring arounds, cut a plug in a cantaloupe melon opposite the stem end. Spoon in two tablespoons of brandy, sherry or rum. Replace plug and chill. To serve, slice in rings, remove seeds and pile ice cream in center.

Ice cream and a few fruits and sauces can turn any occasion into a festive event by devising sundaes.

Coffee-Walnut Sauce:

- 1 cup sugar
- 1½ cups strong hot coffee
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- ¼ cup cold coffee or water
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup broken walnuts

Put sugar in heavy skillet; melt over very low heat, stirring often. Gradually stir in hot coffee (use a long-handled spoon because lots of steam escapes). Dissolve cornstarch in cold coffee or water; gradually stir into sugar mixture. Cook and stir until sauce boils and thickens. Add butter or margarine, salt and walnuts. Serve warm or cold. Makes 2 cups.

Pineapple Honey Harmony

- ½ cup crushed pineapple
- 3 tablespoons honey
- 3 tablespoons chopped nutmeats
- 2 tablespoons beet or cane sugar

Combine sugar and pineapple in saucepan. Simmer slowly until sugar forms heavy sauce. Cool and add nuts. Serves four.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

This House Suits Them to a 'T'

Photos by H. S. Melvin

To the Paul McClaughry family of four, their home is absolutely just what they want and they wouldn't change if rebuilding. Here's living room view.

By Eileen Ball

MR. AND MRS. PAUL McCLAUGHRY and their two teen-age daughters view family life as a sort of corporation. Nothing of major import affecting their family as a unit goes over the boards without their first counting the votes pro and con. Luckily, this even-numbered family of four rarely finds itself deadlocked!

When their new house at 5505 LaPasada St. was in the formulative stages, the McClaughrys counted the yeas and found that contemporary architecture and decor was their favored choice.

The girls wanted rooms as individual as their personalities. Each, of course, put capacious storage high on their lists.

Mrs. McClaughry had ideas about having a kitchen that, instead of being relegated to a spot by itself like an unhappy shut-in, could join with the fun-loving part of the house used as a den, a dining room and as an overflow party area.

McCLAUGHRY was adamant about the house being practical both in floor plan and maintenance.

They all vetoed fancy trim that contributes nothing to an easy and carefree mode of living. So the house that they commissioned the architectural firm of Poper and Lockett to design was to conform to a definite list of specifications. And because the architects were able to get a concise idea of what the McClaughrys wanted, the house they evolved has been, to quote Mrs. McClaughry, "Absolutely perfect in every respect." Furthermore, she states, they wouldn't change a single detail of this 2,000 square foot house were they to build again. And that, to be sure, is about as high a tribute as one can pay a new home.

A circular drive bordered with glossy ivy and colorful ivy geraniums sweeps to the garage placed on the front of the lot for the sake of privacy. An ornamental "eyebrow" of open egg crate lattice enhances the appearance of the garage, affords a shelter and helps tie it visually to the house.

A tall grapestake fence encloses the courtyard leading to the entry. With the gate closed, the house enjoys an absolute separation from the street.

Stepping inside this pleasing court, one sees that the house unfolds and opens itself to visitors with magnanimous hospitality. A wall of glass — inclusive of both fixed and sliding portions—runs along the length of the living room and opens to the private yard.

WIDE AND SHALLOW steps join the sliding doors to the concrete courtyard floor. With the draperies drawn back, the living room and its impressive arrangement of fine contemporary furniture seems to join the court in a complete and wonderful merger.

Flanking the steps and spanning the length of the room under the fixed glass windows are shallow flagstone planters kept abloom with low-growing annuals.

A few feet past the living room doors is the entry landing with an overhead projection of egg crate latticing.

This is the more conventional entry for arriving guests. (The wide living room glass doors are pushed open to facilitate party circulation and expedite the practice of entertaining indoors and out simultaneously.)

Stepping through the front door one finds an entry surfaced with waxed cork and veneered on the left wall with Santa Maria fieldstone.

Beyond the entry and to the left is the living room with its visual affinity for the courtyard. Cork flooring, oatmeal-textured draperies and sandalwood walls combine to create a neutral and completely restful background for the contemporary furniture with its bright accent color.

A LONG SOFA upholstered in cocoa and chocolate tweed is punctuated with flame-orange throw pillows of the same fabric as is on the chair. A chair constructed simply of a hardwood frame laced with wide natural linen webbing has a pillow-headrest in hot orange.

One cannot help noticing how effectively the decorator played up the sleek and handsomely crafted furnishings with the simple and unusual technique of relying on just one vivid color for underscoring.

Near the fireplace of Santa Maria fieldstone—the back of which forms one wall of the entry—is a custom-styled cabinet for hi-fi and phonograph component parts. The exquisitely designed storage unit is of hand-rubbed walnut with doors of stark white masonite.

Through louvered doors is the kitchen-den area with its wealth of natural woodwork. Highlighting cabinets of clear white birch are counter tops of natural linen pattern plastic, linoleum of lime, coral and tan spatter and simply more shouting at each other at the tops of their voices.

IN A THEATER Derby tapped the shoulder of the man seated in front of him and whispered that he would like to speak to the man seated two seats forward. The gentleman passed the word but when all turned to the lieutenant the latter looked mystified and stared fixedly at the stage.

Judson "Boston" Ames was a rabid Democrat and the editor of the San Diego Herald. He was a large man who had once killed a sailor with one blow. The first state elections were coming up in California and Ames did everything in his power to sew up San Diego for his party. As the election drew near he felt he should go to San Francisco to be on hand to pick up some political plums.

He made the mistake of leaving the paper in the hands of Derby. As soon as "Boston" was on his way Derby brought out the paper for the Whig candidate.

The Whigs carried San Diego with a four to one majority.

DERBY CALLED the next issue the Illustrated San Diego Herald. He used boiler plate advertising cuts. A set of false teeth and three box cars, one of them upside down, represented a picture of a terrible train wreck. A cut of four sailing ships was called "The Battle of Lake Erie."

The next issue described Ames' return and the fight that followed. According to Derby, he held Ames down with his nose in Ames' teeth and held one of Ames' hands by entangling it in his hair. The fight ended with Derby naked except for the rim of a hat and Ames nursing a black eye and "a small boy standing beside the sufferer with a basin and glancing with interest over . . . the San Diego Herald, a fair copy which was struck upon the back of his shirt at the time we held him over the press." The account was sheer fiction for Ames took the whole incident as a joke.

Derby's funmaking was dampened by years of illness, of which he died in 1861. His life wasn't all one long laugh, but it definitely had its highlights.

ANSWER

Gus Edwards and Vincent Bryan wrote "In My Merry Oldsmobile" in 1905, when the Rolls-Royce and Oldsmobile were being manufactured, but before the Model T Ford (1908) or the Stutz Bearcat (1929), and of course, long before the many current models. Edwards, in addition to his song-writing ability, developed talent of children who later became stage, screen and radio-TV stars: Elsie Janis, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel and many others.

Kids' Theater Opens a New Era

By Vera Williams

Two Children's Theater players: Mrs. Ray O. Gould Jr. in Princess role, and Mrs. Ethel Severson as Aladdin.

WHEN "RADIO RESCUE," adventure play by Charlotte Chorpenning, opens Oct. 21 in the Little Theater at Long Beach State College, the 17th production of Long Beach Children's Theater, it will mark the end of one era and the beginning of a new one.

The old era in which Children's Theater played to large audiences filled with children (and a few grownups). The new era in which Children's Theater will play to small, attentive audiences, preponderantly juvenile.

Little Theater at State College will hold 500 children at a time.

BUT LITTLE THEATER backers believe there is a closer, more intimate feeling between actors and audience in a smaller theater. And in the Little Theater every word spoken on the stage can be heard anywhere in the house — there are no "dead" spots. Lights are considered nearly perfect in the Little Theater and there are such conveniences as telephone lines between actors' rooms and back stage.

"Radio Rescue" will open with a "family night" at 7:30 p. m. Oct. 21. The next day, Oct. 22, will be reserved for Girl Scouts. The play will be repeated at 10 a. m., 1 p. m. and 3 p. m. Oct. 29 and Nov. 5.

Adult volunteers — all work for nothing, nobody gets a cent for anything — play all the roles, make the costumes and the sets. Acting is of a high caliber and costumes and sets are practically professional.

IT WAS IN 1947 that a group of Long Beach women, a number of them the mothers of young children, decided that something ought to be done about the lack of good stage plays in the city for boys and girls. They agreed that motion pictures, radio programs and comic books were all right — if properly selected. But these mothers felt there was a gap in the entertainment of Long Beach children which could be filled only by legitimate drama, especially written, directed and acted for youthful audiences.

The result was the Children's Theater. There are children's theaters in many parts of the United States, but the one in Long Beach is considered conspicuously successful.

IN CHILDREN'S THEATER plays, the actors not only act for an audience of children, but many of the roles are those of children. Yet the entire cast is composed of adult women. Anybody who thinks it is easy for an adult to play the part of a child or an elf or a fairy might try out for one of the productions some time.

An audience of children is a forthright audience — not supercritical but certainly super-frank. And mothers considered it an achievement when they can get attention and spontaneous applause from children.

"Land of the Dragon," Chinese fantasy presented in November, 1947, in Ebell Theater was the first production. It was followed by "Cinderella," "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater," "Pied Piper of Hamlin," "The Princess and the Swineherd," "Once Upon a Clothesline," "The Emperor's New Clothes," "Pinocchio," "Hansel and Gretel," "Steadfast Tin Soldier," "Seven-League Boots," "Doodle and the Bremen Band," "Snow Treasure," "Cinderella of Loreland," "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" and "Alice in Wonderland." The plays have been given in Ebell Theater, Municipal Auditorium, Jordan and Poly auditoriums.

BUSES BRING CHILDREN from the school grounds for the shows and return them to the playgrounds.

Mrs. William F. Macrate is president of the Children's Theater. The advisory committee includes Frank Harnett, David Sievers, David L. Bryant, George Geiger, Sam Heavenrich, Larry Johns, Gerald Desmond, Douglas Newcomb, John Whatley, Mrs. Florence Johnson, Mrs. Albin Larson, Mrs. Herbert E. Waite, Miss Frances Dixon, Miss Mary Schallenberg and Mrs. Gail Hudson.

Productions of Children's Theater are well costumed and produced. Children are enthralled by the plays.

Every Dog Has His Week

By Eleanor Avery Price

Symbol of National Dog Week is this poster of family and dog watching at the window for Dad.

NATIONAL DOG WEEK starts today and provides a special few days set aside not only to honor your best pal, your dog, but to encourage all dog lovers to strive harder toward objectives of the non-profit National Dog Welfare Guild. These are a good home for every dog, elimination of stray dogs from the streets, better dog owners, consideration for dogs and all animals, understanding the use of dogs as companions, helpers, and home protectors; fair laws for dogs and their owners, respect for the rights of non-dog owners and increased research of serious diseases such as rabies.

Guy Lombardo, popular orchestra leader, is the 1955 national chairman of the week which will be observed in more than 3,000 communities across the nation.

Lombardo is backed by an advisory committee which includes top executives of Camp Fire Girls, Girl Scouts of America, Boy Scouts of America, Boys' Club of America, American Humane Assn., American Kennel Club, American Veterinary Medical Assn., American Animal Hospital Assn., and several others.

Recognizing the fact that the dog has come a long way with man in many phases of man's life, the Guild has chosen for 1955 the slogan of the dog as a "Member of the Family."

SINCE A DOG is truly necessary for the full growth and well-being of the average happy family, and since the dog helps create harmony by his wonderful qualities of love, loyalty, watchfulness, and courage which he gives with no strings attached, this year's slogan pays proper tribute to that fine quality of family unit that is strengthened by the canine members.

The joys and benefits that come through owning a good dog more than make up for the responsibility, care, and training that the pet needs.

So great are the rewards of owning a dog that it is even possible for the most badly adjusted and self-centered child to change for the better when given the faithful friendship and responsibility of caring for a dog. A dog of his own can change a child's whole trend of thought, action, and deed, and help keep the child from the boredom and lack of interests that so often lead him into bad company.

THIS IS A VERY REAL truth to consider, especially if the home is broken or if for one reason or another there is a lonely child in the family. Give such a child a dog to care for and encourage him to read books on dog care, to join junior kennel groups in order to meet other kids at obedience training classes and obedience shows. Help him to train his dog to be a good canine citizen, for a youngster training his dog to obey laws and commands is inspired to be a better citizen himself.

Raymond J. Hanfield, executive secretary of the National Dog Welfare Guild which sponsors National Dog Week, sums it up nicely with these words, "You can't have a bad child if he has a good dog."

The 1955 poster reproduced with this article will be used nationally this week, and it portrays the heart-warming scene of a typical American family with a dog, in this case a beagle, waiting at the window for Dad to come home. The illustration is by a famous artist, Albert Staehle.

SANTA ANA Valley Kennel Club is holding an all-breed and obedience O. B. sanction match today at La Palma Park in Anaheim. There will be classes also for puppies two months and up. Entries close at 12 noon.

AUSTRALIAN Silky Terrier Club of this region is holding its first All-Silky show today at the home of Mrs. Robert Cooley, 9100 Vanalden in Northridge. Spectators are invited.

LAKEWOOD Obedience Club will entertain at Shriner's Hospital in Los Angeles on Sept. 24 instead of the previously announced date.

RADIO

Night Owls Flock Together

By Jule Armin

"DON'T FEEL sorry for yourself if you can't sleep nights. Tune in on Ben Hunter's 'Other Side of the Day' radio program and you won't want to sleep."

That's the verdict of 15,000 registered members of his Night Owl Clubs, of whom 150 live in Long Beach.

Not only is Ben Hunter heard widely over the United States and Canada, but according to mail count, a quarter-million persons listen to him in such far-flung places as Germany, England, Tahiti, New Zealand and Korea.

NIGHT OWLS publish their own magazine, "The Limb," and hold annual get-togethers. In 1954, more than 8,000 of them gathered at Banning. Last June, 30,000 traveled by bus, auto, trailer, even motored wheel chairs and planes for a week end of fun and good fellowship at Big Bear.

A strong bond of kinship links those who work and wake "on the other side of the day."

For instance, Stan Routledge of Long Beach owes his life to being a Night Owl Club member. He lives alone and one night he was seized by a heart attack.

He managed to get to the telephone but he was too weak to look up a doctor. An invitation to a Night Owl meeting, propped against the phone, bore an RSVP phone number. Stan dialed it. Sure enough, the Night Owl was awake and alert. She called police. An ambulance rushed Stan to the hospital for emergency treatment.

"It's lucky I had that Night Owl number," he said.

ALL THIS began a little over three years ago, when Ben Hunter, a good-looking, fun-loving but serious-minded chap of about 30, sitting alone in his glass-walled cubicle at KFI began wondering who — if anybody — listened to his program through the wee, small hours.

Was it worth while for him to "bat his brains out" to be entertaining or should he take the easy, disc-jockey-and-nothing-else route?

He took his microphone down on the street to see who was up at that hour. He found one lone milkman and a couple of truck drivers. Sure, they listened to his program, they assured him.

The milkman did as he delivered the milk.

THE TRUCK drivers did, as they rattled across country.

"There must be 100 of us night truck drivers," one explained. "It's mighty good to hear a human voice when you're rolling a hundred miles from nowhere. The people and things you talk about keep us awake better than music."

Ben went back to the studio a happier man. If the night drivers liked his program, perhaps other night workers did, too. He asked his air audience to tell him what they were doing that they should be awake from midnight to dawn.

Frank Fisher, calling from ship-to-shore off Long Beach, gave Ben the idea of making unusual phone calls part of his program. So he brought in "beeper," or monitored phone calls, making the audience part of his radio show. Letters from listeners are read, also.

NO ONE — not even Ben — knows what to expect. Ted Olson, San Francisco amateur horticulturist, offered seeds from his new "burpless cucumber." Old-timers try to outdo each other with exciting, historical experiences.

Business men offer funny stories and brain-twister puzzles. Scientists, students and archaeologists come up with unusual bits of information.

Fred Phlaff, Long Beach gun fancier, compared his collection of historical firearms with other ballistic experts.

Uranium hunters swapped tips. Hunters of flying saucers compared theories.

A lonely Catalina Island man, discouraged by the loss, in rapid succession, of his wife, his boat and his health, finally was aroused by a Night Owl program. A post card at first, then letters and finally "beeper" talks.

HIS RICH past and retentive memory gave him so much to offer that listeners soon were clamoring for "more Doc Vaughn." Now Doc has regained his health, his old-time boundless energy, and he has written a book, "The Print of My Remembrance," the royalties of which go to cancer research.

Margaret Newcomb, well known in Long Beach entertainment circles, called the first Long Beach group together. Ten persons showed up. Now, less than a year later, the group searches for a large meeting place for its monthly gatherings.

KFI's owl disc jockey Ben Hunter livens up the night.

When a Sailor Kisses a Girl

"GEE, YOU ACT LIKE YOU NEVER FELT AN ICICLE BEFORE."

DENNIS THE MENACE, who appears regularly on The Independent and the Sunday Independent, Press-Telegram comic pages, is the hero (?) of another book, "Dennis the Menace Rides Again" (Holt, $1). You've never seen Hank Ketcham's little puncturer of large egos in better fettle as the above sample proves!

SAILORS KISS EVERYBODY, and "Grandmother Grossie" not only approves but says "It doesn't mean a thing, other than that they are glad to be back in port, alive and safe and well."

In Florence McGehee's new book she reminisces about her beloved grandmother, known to hundreds of homesick sailors in Oakland as "Grossie." Grossie's home was a haven for the lonely, for they not only received good food, but warm and loving understanding. When Florence and her sister, Ruthie, visited their grandmother, they were constantly delighted by the motley household. Mr. Foster, a hungry neighbor, paid for his supper by removing his glass eye, sailors brought them exotic gifts from far away lands, and they thrilled to the stories of strange countries.

Miss McGehee writes her memoirs of the late Victorian days in the same warm style she wrote "Please Excuse Johnny." The charm and humor of "Sailors Kiss Everybody" (MacMillan Co., $3.50) should add to her stature as a California writer. —F. T. H.

STEVENSONIONS will welcome "Our Samoan Adventure" (Harper, $4), the diary Fanny Stevenson kept during the last years of the life of her famous husband, Robert Louis Stevenson, on Samoa. Charles Neider came upon the manuscript in Monterey, Calif., and painstakingly deciphered it, the most difficult parts with special equipment at Huntington Library in San Marino. In addition to his job of editing, Mr. Neider has written an introduction and added notes throughout to clarify the text. It's not only the first time the entire diary has been published: the book contains photographs of RLS, Fanny, and others of the family taken from old albums, some of which have never before been reproduced.—F. T. K.

LOWELL THOMAS has a whale of a book in "Great True Adventures" (Hawthorn, $5). As in his own life, Thomas takes adventure where he finds it so he does this compilation of spine-tingling episodes recorded by such stalwarts as Lawrence of Arabia, Joshua of the Bible, Benvenuto Cellini, Plutarch, Gen. John C. Fremont, Xenophon and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen. And as the adventures range from ancient to modern times, their settings cover a great part of the earth. Thomas, author, explorer and, above all, adventurer, has written an introduction and prefatory notes to each of the 29 stories.—P. F.

WHEN THE CITY was founded, a soothsayer recited its life as more than nine generations. "The Years of the City," by George R. Stewart, (Houghton Mifflin, $4.50) is an account of those years, beginning with the landing of the people, their conflicts to establish themselves in a hostile area, and the building of the city walls, and their vigorous defense. And as a city crumbles, Phrax crumbled, first from its less vigorous citizens, and then from trust in wrong leaders. You will find no city or land like this quoted in history, but it is symbolic of all of them.—G. L.

URANIUM is vital in this atomic age, not only for weapons of defense but also in such peacetime fields as medicine, industry and agriculture. An important book, therefore, is "Uranium and Other Miracle Metals" (Sterling, $3.50), in which Fred Reinfeld tells where uranium is likely to be found, what it looks like, what happens to it after it comes out of the mine, and what role the Atomic Energy Commission plays in obtaining it. Field prospector of uranium or armchair prospector of knowledge, either will find it absorbing.

A HIGH-RANKING GIFT for the man whose hobby is guns will be "The First Winchester: The Story of the 1866 Repeating Rifle" (Morrow, $5). John E. Parsons, who will be remembered for two previous books about guns — "The Peacemaker and Its Rivals" and "Henry Deringer's Pocket Pistol" — fondly traces the development of the famous Winchester from its conception through its role on the western frontier. There are scores of interesting old illustrations, some of which make up the end papers.—F. T. K.

FROM HER HIGH PERCH in the old willow tree, Lesley Ross could see the countryside for miles around. Connecticut was at war in 1780 and the conflict was not always going well for the Americans. Lesley watched the coming and going of friends and enemies. How she became involved in intrigue and romance is the story told in Margaret Leighton's new book, "Who Rides By?" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, $2.75).

In this historically accurate novel, the characters of Revolutionary War times become very real to the young reader. Older girls will like the book although boys should also enjoy the action it contains. The vocabulary is excellent for the young person, yet there is no sense of "writing down." Those who believe it is important that the youth of America understand something of the trials of other times will like it since the book pictures that phase very skilfully. Aunts and grandmothers will approve of this story as a gift for birthdays or for Christmas. Teachers and librarians will like it for supplementary reading lists.—E. G.

The little monster is on the loose! Head for the nearest bookstore, and when you say "Dennis," pardner, SMILE!

CAMERA ANGLE

Pictures in the Sunset

By the Shutterbug

DO YOU RECALL that wonderful song, "St. Louis Blues"—with its downbeat rhythm and its plaintive cry, "I hate to see that evening sun go down"?

Well, a lot of picture-takers once felt pretty much the same way. But no longer—because a great many of them have learned how easy it is to take beautiful sunset pictures with full-color film.

In general, it's safe to say that color shots of sunsets produce more spontaneous sighs of pleasure than any other type of scenic shown on home screens or mounted in the family album.

ACTUALLY, the making of a color shot as the sun goes down has become about as easy as anything can be.

If you should miss out on the exactly correct exposure, nothing much will be lost—your chances for a superb picture are still excellent.

A bit of over-exposure will just seem as though the days were getting shorter a little ahead of schedule.

Now think back for a moment to the sunsets you've most enjoyed. Probably there were trees or distant buildings or hills somewhere on the edge of the view.

BE SURE to include them—you know, foreground interest is almost an essential for any scenic view.

Why not try to have someone standing beside a tree—and when you shoot, remember that the overhanging boughs can nicely frame your whole peture.

Naturally, anybne or anything between your camera and the setting sun will come in silhouette, because all the light is far, far beyond.

LADIES' NIGHT, a yearly event of the Long Beach Cinema Club, will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Houghton Park clubhouse. Prize-winning films by the ladies will be shown and prizes awarded. Mrs. Lewis Underwood will be chairman with Mrs. Cliff Harris in charge of entertainment and Mrs. Howard Derr in charge of the contest. Refreshments will be served by the men.

LONG BEACH Camera Guild will have a color slide competition at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Municipal Art Center, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Winners of the black and white print competition this month were Virginia Callender, first; Bill Jordan, second; Ronald Selvester, third; Virginia Callender and Clare Grounds, honorable mention. Don Barrow, member of the Circle of Confusion, camera club of Whittier, judged the competition.

At this meeting the Guild became the proud possessor of two cups, presented by the Southern California Council of Camera Clubs, with which the local Guild is affiliated, for winning third place in A group, black and white, and third place in A group in color in competitions the past year.

A print by Christine Sandell, member of the Guild, recently was given a prominent place in the Los Angeles Times.

FOR THE RECORD, your prize catches will look better on film when you use a close-up lens on your camera. Such a lens is inexpensive, and will let you get within a couple of feet of your subject, add a lot of interest. Close-ups in color will be especially impressive when magnified by projection onto a screen. The close-up lens is a most enjoyable (and really easy!) way to build up your reputation as an angler who lands the big ones.

HOW TO Do Gluing Jobs; They Are Much Easier Than You Think

NINTY-NINE times out of 100, you can join two pieces of material faster and easier with the right glue than with any other fastening device on the market. There's nothing complicated about using glue, if you keep these simple rules in mind: 1. Get the joint ready for glue by removing wax, grease, oil or paint from the surfaces you'll coat with adhesive. 2. Determine the kind of glue that suits the purpose best. 3. Clamp the joint until the glue dries.

1. THIN COAT of glue is best. Spread it out over glue area, and wipe off the surplus after you clamp up the job. Most glues work best when temperature is 70 degrees or higher. A clean scrap of wood serves as spreader.

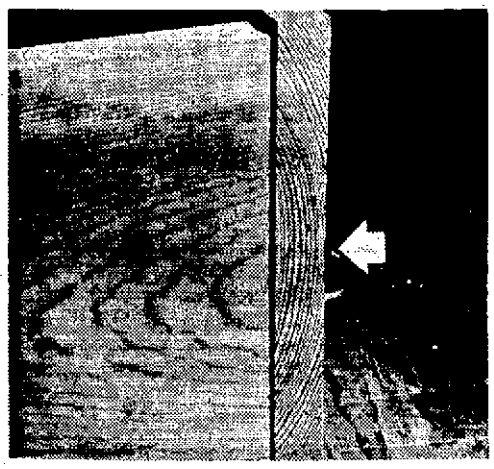

2. GLUE AREA determines strength of glue job . . . the more surface you coat, the better. Open mortise-and-tenon joint (bottom) gives glue 8 inches more holding surface than butt joint. Plan the joints so you have more glue area.

3. WHEN GLUING edges, turn alternate sides of stock up to reduce warping. Turn heartwood side up on every other board, when three or more boards are used. Plastic resin glue is resistant to moisture when set; gives firm bond.

4. WOOD EXPANDS more across grain than with the grain when it becomes wet . . . the cause of most joint failures. Assemble the pieces so grain direction is parallel on both pieces (arrow), for the same expansion and contraction.

Plants That Resist the Bugs

By Bob Gilmore

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S splendid growing conditions are as favorable to bugs as to the plants they feed on. Millions of dollars are spent every year in an effort to decrease the bug population. Yet it seems that every year there are more pests in the garden than ever before.

One way to solve this problem is to plant ornamentals that show a resistance to the more common garden pests.

One of the best specimens for foundation planting is a very popular specimen, abelia grandiflora. Landscapers throughout this area, as well as amateur gardeners, are well acquainted with its value. The abelia may be set in either full sun or part shade.

THE LEAVES are shiny but quite small and possessed of a delightful bronzy-green color. Clusters of fragrant, pinkish-white florets appear during a large part of the year. The abelia is hardy down to zero and does not taste very good to bugs.

THE ESCALLONIA is another splendid choice in this area for gardens subject to pest infestation. This plant is a natural for gardens situated along the coastal region. It seems to delight in the sea air.

Two varieties are available: One with red flowers and the other with pink florets. Sun or partial shade will prove a satisfactory location. The plants like a lot of water and, in return, will provide bloom during almost every month of the year.

Japanese boxwood is another favorite for gardeners in this region. It has attained its greatest fame when used as a hedge. The plant may be kept trimmed to a height of about two to three feet as it reacts favorably to fairly regular pruning.

ANOTHER rather interesting, relatively pest-free ornamental is Nandina domestica. This is better known as the heavenly bamboo. This is actually a dual purpose plant, for it may be used in the garden as a hedge or in pots for specimen purposes. It is probably most attractive during the winter season, when the entire plant turns a beautiful coppery-red.

Red berries are also part of this ornamental's equipment. If allowed to grow it will attain a height of about five feet at maturity and tolerates cold down to zero.

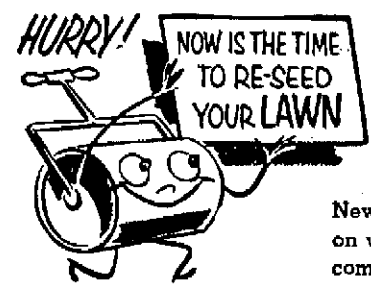

Bougainvilleas have been popular in this area for many years. While new varieties are introduced every now and then, it can be said that the old standby, Crimson Lake, is still one of the best.

Rhus ovata, a California native, takes heat and drought in stride. It is not bothered by the cold. It is often called the "sugar bush," a misleading name as the sugary coating tastes sour due to the sour berries. This plant wants lots of sun but thrives in almost any soil.

Other ornamentals that are not too palatable to the bugs include geranium, plumbago, podocarpus, polygala, veronica, vinca, scabiosa, iceplant, gazania, calendula, cedars, coreopsis, linum, gaillardia and arborvitae.

The podocarpus is relatively pest-free and is one of the Southland's most interesting hardy trees.

Gardening in Dusty Areas

By John Ronson

CERTAIN PLANTS, because of their texture or coloring, show little evidence of dust or dirt accumulation. Ornamentals whose foliage shows a neutral shade are best qualified for areas where dust particles fill the air. It should also be pointed out that for these sections glossy-leaved varieties should be discarded.

The pearl acacia, so named because of the pearl-grey foliage, is an excellent small tree for areas in which dust accumulates. This variety grows to about 15 feet and therefore can be recommended for practically any average sized landscape. It is actually a dwarf acacia but certainly one of the most colorful. The canary-yellow flower heads are at their peak during the holiday season and are excellent for cutting. Plant this acacia in full sun.

Another interesting tree for dust-infested sections is the olive or olea europaea. The foliage is a distinctive shade of grey-green and is excellently neutral. The tree is splendid for California landscape, attaining a height of not much more than 25 feet at maturity. This is a very easy tree to care for and it must not have too much water. A dry, relatively poor soil seems to suit it to advantage.

THE AUSTRALIAN tea tree, known botanically as leptrospermum laevigatum, is characterized by its grey-green leaves. These show very little evidence of dust, even when it apparently is piling up fast. This is a fairly wide-spreading shrub that requires a great deal of room. However, it seldom grows much taller than from eight to 10 feet. The flowers are small, dainty and white in tone. An open exposure and not too much water will keep this specimen happy.

Thujas, somewhat better known, perhaps, as arborvitaes, have splendid foliage for areas subject to dust storms. One of the most interesting for local growing conditions is Thuja orientalis Beverly Hills, often referred to as the golden column arborvitae. This is the tallest member of this plant group.

The dwarf ever-golden arborvitae, recognized botanically as T. orientalis Berckmen's, is perhaps the most popular dwarf conifer in the entire Southwest. This ornamental grows to a height of about 6 feet, is compact and conical in stature. The foliage is golden in tone.

PLUMBAGO CAPENSIS is somewhat of a hybrid between a sprawling shrub and a half-hearted climber. It is a tough individual and seems to thrive on neglect. Azure-blu flowers which look very much like the phlox appear intermittently throughout the year but mainly during the summer months. The plumbago is a very aggressive grower; it seems at its best when planted in a light soil and given very little moisture.

Cotoneasters are valuable foliage plants but during the late fall, winter and spring months their crowning attribute is the mass of bright-toned berries. The foliage is a dull grey-green which is not bothered very much by any accumulation of dust.

Lavendula officinalis with its silvery-grey foliage shows very little evidence of dust accumulation. This is the plant with the marvelous scent and actually the purple-blue flowers have even more fragrance than the leaves. This is a sun lover and enjoys a very easy culture. Other ornamentals that may be recommended for dusty areas are buddleia, erica, cedrus deodara, ceanothus and the pepper tree.

Plumbago capensis is an aggressive grower, not affected by dirt or dust; requires occasional pruning.

Tips on Gardening

GARDENING TIPS for the week . . . Gerberas, often called Transvaal daisies, are very much at home in the Southland. The plants enjoy a sunny exposure along the coast but partial shade will be better for the hot inland areas.

Trees that will cast shade during the summer months should be considered at this time. Your nurseryman will show you a wide range from which to choose. One of the best is the evergreen elm, which grows to just about 25 feet and therefore can be accommodated in practically all average-sized landscapes.

This is a splendid time to sow dichondra seed as the plants come along quickly in warm weather. A nurse crop of either white clover or rye grass is recommended.

tailored draperies of deep chocolate.

A pass-over counter separates the preparation center from the dining area.

THE SAME chocolate draperies are carried over to the den area which is carpeted in a sturdy and good-looking carpet of brown and beige tweed.

Here, as in the living room, the accent color is orange-red. Cushions of that vivid hue are scattered across the corner sectional of brown tweed fabric. A television set is within pleasant viewing range of this and a custom lounge chair in lighter orange. When the occasion demands, a floor-to-ceiling accordion-type divider door of opaque white plastic may be drawn across to separate the den from the dining-kitchen portion of the room.

A LARGE BATH opens off the hallway leading from the entry to the right. This, in turn, connects with a spacious dressing and wardrobe storage area adjoining the master bedroom.

Marion McClaughry's bedroom is peach with brown and cocoa accessories. Her private bath is pale green and cocoa.

Marcia's room is brown and gold and features Paul McCobb storage units, much additional behind-the-wall storage and a connecting bath carried out in yellow gold.

GEORGE BROWER
A Happy Harlequin

IF GEORGE BROWER seems to be smiling like a friendly, happy clown these days, it's not difficult to determine why.

The new Harlequin Room at Brower's glamorous restaurant, Pacific and 23rd St., is the most talked about cocktail lounge in Long Beach. Each afternoon and evening, Brower is showered with congratulations from friends and casual customers alike, all delighted with the restful atmosphere of the room with the buffoons on the walls.

A harlequin, of course, is a clown or buffoon. When he chose this motif for the lounge, Brower was determined to make the Harlequin Room one of the Southland's most distinctive sites for the serving of perfect potables. In this he has succeeded with ease. The clown theme is carried out by paintings of buffoons which hang above the long sunken bar and elsewhere in the room. A number of the pictures are clever originals painted by Joseph Pellitier of Paris. The predominant colors in the room are chartreuse and black, shades that convey a feeling of warmth and life.

THE HARLEQUIN ROOM is not the only new attraction at Brower's. When Brower recently redecorated his restaurant he went all-out. The main dining room and Continental Room have been done over, and the numerous private dining rooms—such as the Rendezvous Room, Coral Room, Memory Room, Flare Room and Green Room—all display beautiful new effects.

Perhaps the most striking change at the restaurant is the broad, new entranceway, including a large lobby and a driveway where patrons may leave their cars to be parked by attendants.

It's hardly necessary to mention that the cuisine at Brower's is superb. Most everybody knows that already. Only absolutely top quality ingredients are used in all the dishes. Nor is the food permitted to lose its flavor sitting around on steam tables. There are no steam tables at Brower's; every item is cooked to order. This technique alone makes the restaurant outstanding among California's better restaurants. —TEDD THOMEY.

LANCE

WARREN TUFTS

FORT Leavenworth squats at the edge of the frontier, on a broad knoll overlooking the Missouri. Here is where the virgin West begins.

Leavenworth looks unlike a fort; she has never suffered attack. But as headquarters for the First Regiment of U.S. Dragoons, she disperses her troops for nine months out of the year to police the wild expanse of unsettled land

Life at the post is sublime; it is the long journeys into unknown dangers that concerns Melisse and prevents her from loving a soldier.

But, suddenly, she loves one. Worse still, he is a reckless, hard-riding daredevil who thrills to danger and would be unhappy without it.

Before she becomes completely undone, Melisse decides to run. Luckily, she has no privacy for her farewell to Lance and her courage lasts her through the goodbyes.

Sergeant Blaze slaps a sympathetic hand on Lance's shoulder. "I calc'late yore ripe for a mess o' rugged duty," he advises. Lance stares long after the departing steamer and doesn't answer.

"B'sides which," Blaze goes on, "I can't stay 'round here no longer!"

Lance turns. "Why?"

"They's a new reg'lation out. No more beards in th' Army. I'm quittin' for th' high country!"

And so it is, moments later, that a lieutenant and his sergeant storm the Colonel looking for trouble.

THE SNAIL IS THE ORIGINAL "FLAT FOOT" OF THE ANIMAL WORLD

IN FACT, HIS FOOT IS THE WHOLE AREA OF HIS UNDERSIDE

THOUGH HIS TOP SPEED IS ONLY 2½ INCHES A MINUTE, NOTHING SEEMS TO HALT HIS PROGRESS

EVEN THE KEEN POINT OF A ROSE THORN CAUSES HIM NO DISCOMFORT

FOR WHEREVER HE GOES HE LAYS DOWN A PAVEMENT OF SILVERY MUCUS

WHICH CUSHIONS THE EDGE OF THE SHARPEST OBSTACLE!

THE SNAIL IS VERY SENSITIVE TO MOISTURE AND SELDOM SHOWS HIMSELF UNTIL THE GROUND IS WET WITH DEW OR RAIN

WHEN WINTER COMES, THE SNAIL SEALS THE OPENING OF HIS SHELL WITH A DOOR OF LIME AND SLEEPS UNTIL SPRING.

ON HIS RASP-LIKE TONGUE ARE 14,000 TEETH, WHICH HE USES TO CUT VEGETABLE FOOD INTO TINY PIECES BEFORE SWALLOWING

VEL*
MAKES DISHES SHINE---
WITHOUT WASHING OR WIPING!

"VEL SOAKS DISHES CLEAN—

DON'T WASH — JUST SOAK
Dishes wash grease-free in seconds! No washing is needed. If food clings, a touch of the dishcloth gets it off. There's no greasy dishwater with Vel.

DON'T WIPE — JUST RINSE
Yes! Just soak and rinse. Dishes dry spot-free without wiping! Even heavy greases in pots and pans is so completely dissolved no hard scouring is needed.

Compare for package — VEL CUTS GREASE BETTER
Better than liquid detergents
Better than the leading washday detergent
Better than soap

—and yet NO 'DETERGENT BURN' TO HANDS!"

PROVE IT YOURSELF!

"HAND-HEAT TEST" SHOWS WHY:
Dip hands in water. Then put a tablespoonful of any leading washday detergent in one hand — put a tablespoonful of VEL in the other.

FEEL THE HEAT from washday detergents, indicating irritating alkalis and harsh chemicals that cause "Detergent Burn"!

FEEL NO HEAT WITH VEL because Vel contains no irritating alkalis or harsh washtub chemicals to cause "Detergent Burn"!

VEL is a miracle of mildness! Vel helps you avoid rough, red hands — causes no "Detergent Burn"!

MarVELous for dishes and finest fabrics!

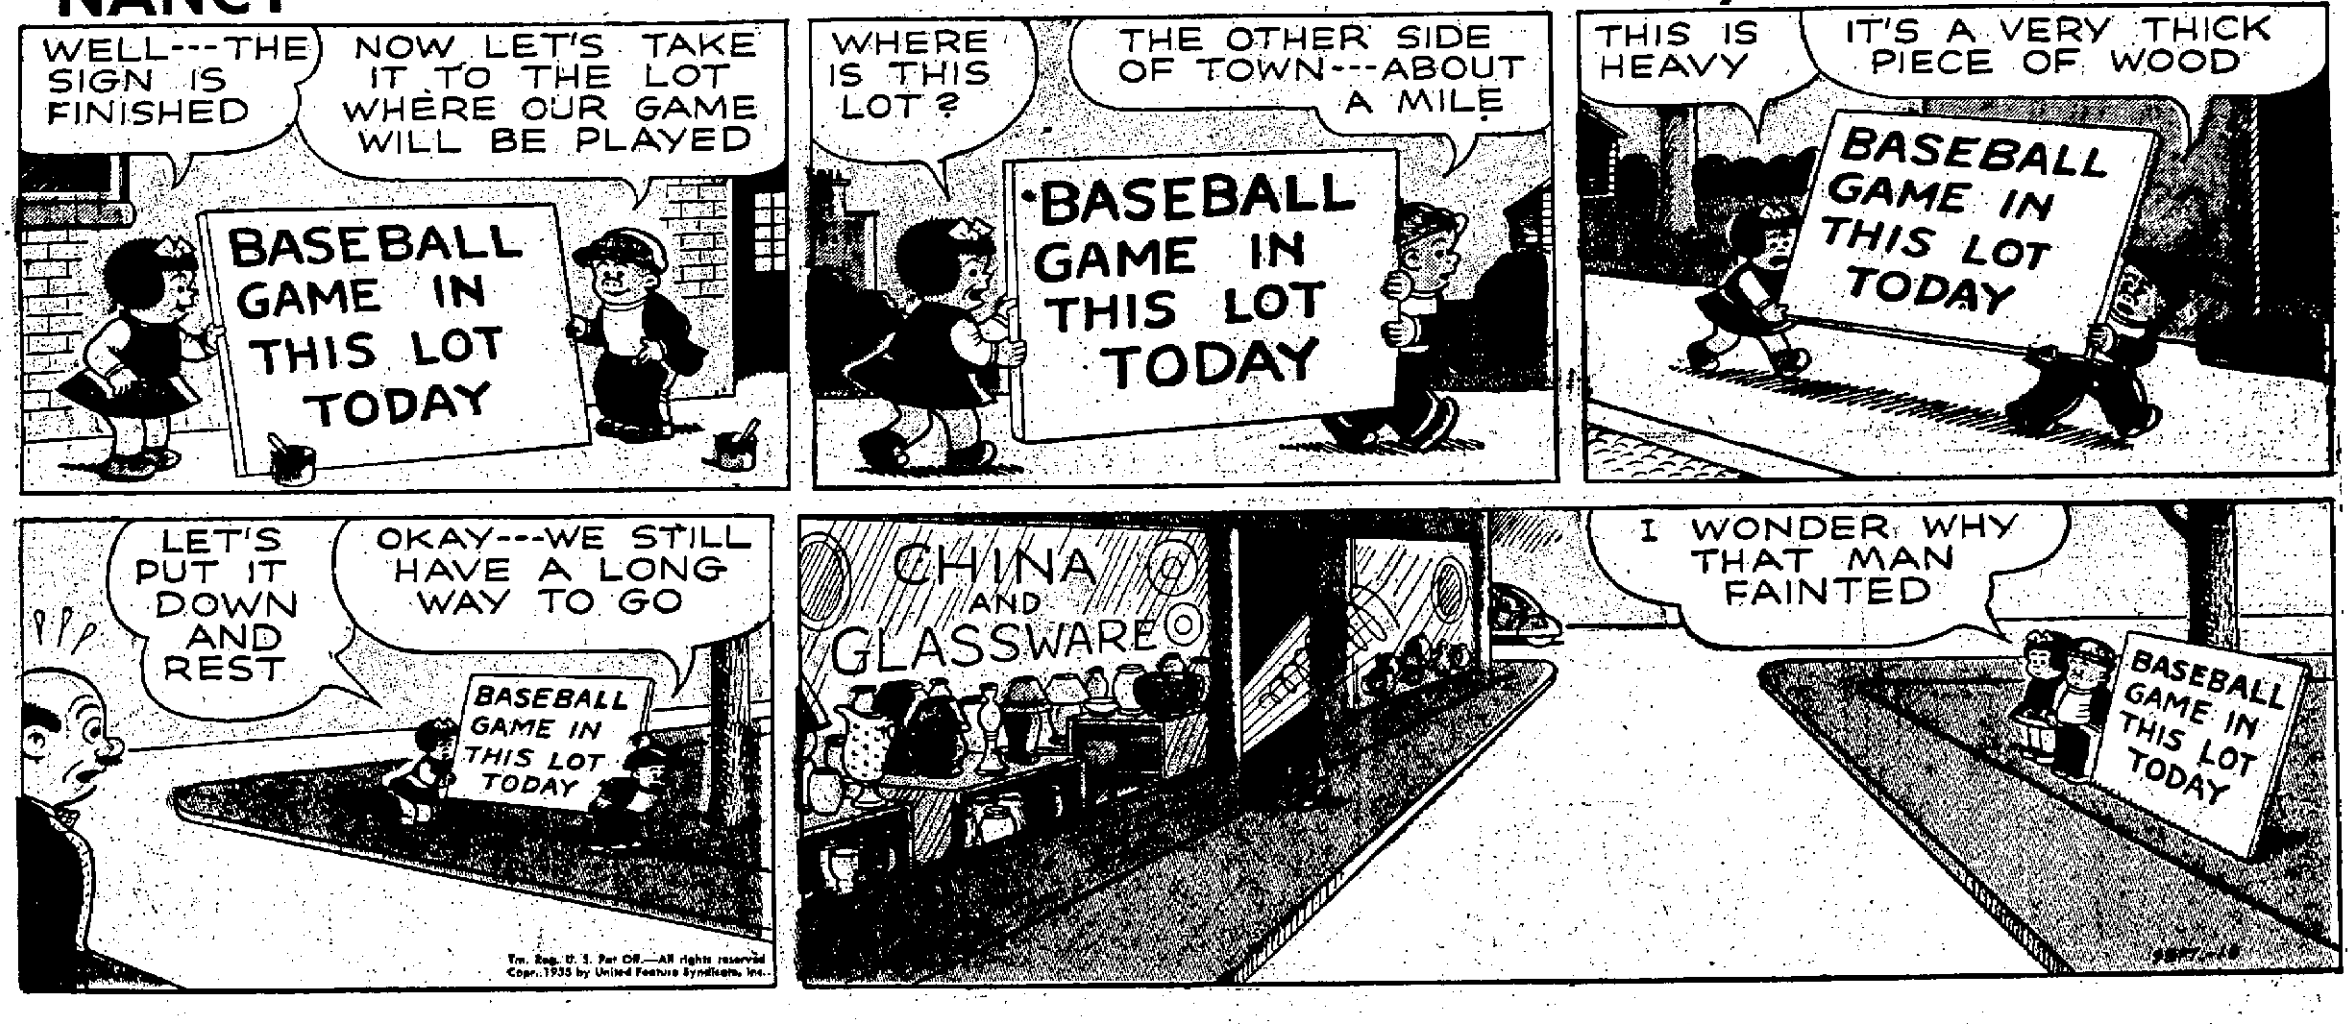

*VEL is the trade-mark of the Colgate-Palmolive Company.
